"QUESTION 1.—Are any formalities necessary to constitute a valid adoption? If so, describe them. State expressly whether the omission of any customary ceremonies will vitiate the adoption?

ANSWER 1.—The only important ceremony common to all is the handing over of the adopted son by his father or guardian to the adopter before the assembled kindred, with some words implying that henceforth the adopter and adopted are to consider each other as father (or mother) and son. The kindred are generally feasted; and rejoicings are made as when a son is born. If the son is a small child, he is placed in the lap (god) of the adopter. (Hence god lena—to adopt—to take into the lap). (All tribes which adopt).

NOTE.—No doubt even in the absence of proof of any ceremony, adoption would be presumed from a long continued relation between the parties implying adoption."

We think that here, too, all that is meant is that where there is a father or

(7) 35 Ind. Cas 543; 65 P. R. 1916; 157 P. W. R. 1916; 1 P L. R. 1917.

(8) 33 Ind. Cas. 529; 89 P. R. 1916; 70 P. W. R. 1916.

(9) 39 Ind. Cas. 93; 5 P. R. 1917.

(10) 39 P. R. 1884.

(11) 16 Ind. Cas. 772; 79 P. R. 1912; 217 P. W. R. 1912; 221 P. L. R. 1912.

(12) 31 Ind Cas. 294; 23 P. R. 1916; 174 P. W. R. 1915.

(13) 33 Ind. Cas. 992; 38 P. R. 1916; 99 P. W. R. 1916.

(14) 36 Ind. Cas. 625; 44 P. R. 1916; 84 P. L. R. 1917; 213 P. W. R. 1916.

(15) 19 Ind. Cas. 669; 40 C. 879; 17 C. W. N. 885; 126 P. W. R. 1913; 187 P. L. R. 1913; (1913) M. W. N. 509; 18 C. L. J. 70; 15 Bom. L. R. 646; 14 M. L. T. 83; 102 P. R. 1913; 40 I. A. 156 (P. C.).

(16) 38 Ind. Cas. 354; 44 C. 749; 12 P. W. R. 1917; 21 M. L. T. 310; 32 M. L. J. 615; 19 Bom. L. R. 388; 45 P. R. 1917; 15 A. L. J. 525; 21 C. W. N. 842; 26 C. L. J. 175; 44 I. A. 89 (P. C.).

guardian it is usual to hand over the boy, but the note to our mind shows that such a ceremony is not essential and we do not consider that the extract precludes the adoption of an orphan.

We agree with the District Judge's remarks in paragraph 23 of his judgment to this extent, that if the oral evidence were the only evidence to prove a custom of adopting orphans, it would not be sufficient to prove such a custom if the parties were orthodox Hindus. The instances given of adoption of orphans do, however, support the view that the adoption of an orphan is not considered contrary to proper usage and the adoption of at least one orphan besides Jainarain, namely, Ramchandra, is satisfactorily proved. It is hardly possible to suppose that even one instance would be possible if the Dhusars consider themselves governed by the Mitakshara Law as to adoption.

It has been argued for the respondents that the people of Gurgaon District cannot be governed by Punjab Customary Law because Gurgaon until 1858 formed a portion of the North West Provinces. The argument is that Harbhajan came to these Provinces in 1836 and could not have brought with him Punjab Customary Law, since at that time Gurgaon was not in the Punjab. We are unable to accept this argument for two reasons. The first is that in face of the Privy Council ruling we must accept the riwaj-i-am as an authoritative statement of the Customary Law of Gurgaon, and we cannot go behind it, and the second is that the parties are governed not by the Gurgaon Law of 1836 but by the present Gurgaon Law. Reliance is placed for the respondents on Ali Asghar v. Collector of Bulandshahr (17). The case relates to emigrants from Gurgaon, but the case is to be distinguished as there was nothing in the riwaj i am to support the custom set up. We may add that the riwaj-i-am was prepared in 1879 and the officer who prepared it was well aware that the district had been added to the Punjab in 1858. We are of opinion, therefore, that the riwaj-i-am affords very strong evidence which has not been rebutted that in matters of adoption Dhusars of Gurgaon, though non-agriculturists, are governed by Punjab Customary Law, and that this being the case there is nothing to prevent the adoption of an orphan. It is not contended for the respondents that they can succeed in their suit if the adoption is valid.

In this view of the case it is hardly necessary to deal with the other grounds of appeal, but we will do so briefly. It is contended for the appellant that the property was given to him as a settlement of a family dispute. He alleges that he claimed a 12-annas share as his share of the ancestral property, namely, his own father's share as well as half of the share of Harbhajan's branch. We agree with the findings of the District Judge containd in paragraph 31 of his judgment. There may have been some dispute as to the details of the partition but we do not believe that Jainarain claimed a 12 annas share. This plea was put forward after the remand as a result of the suggestion in the judgments of Skinner, A. J. C., and of the Privy Council. We are unable to accept the evidence of Jainarain as his own 2nd witness, nor do we consider satisfactory the evidence of D. Ws. Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7. But Kedarnath as P. W. No. 12 says that Jainarain did not claim a 12-annas share and that Jainarain was given an eight-annas share as an adopted son.

The next ground of appeal urged is that the defendant has been in adverse possession since 1858. We do not consider it necessary to discuss this ground. It is lastly urged that if the plaintiffs are entitled to any decree at all, they are entitled only to 4/5 and that the appellant should get Kedarnath's 1/5, whereas he has actually only been allowed 1/10 share of the total property, that is to say, the appellant is entitled to the whole of Kedarnath's share and to his half of the other half share. It is admitted for the respondents that the lower Court has made a mistake in the calculation. We do not, however, find any miscalculation, since the 1st defendant has been allowed to retain 2/5 of half which is 1/5 of the whole. The matter is not of importance as we are dismissing the suit.

There is a cross-objection by the plaintiff. It is first urged that though on the view of the lower Court Jainarain is entitled to 1/5 of the whole property, the plaintiffs should get a decree for possession of the whole with a declaration that Jainarain is entitled to a fifth share on partition. Reliance is placed on Mohanlal v. Tekchand (18). We are of opinion that there is no force in this contention, the circumstances of the present case being different. The next ground urged is that the lower Court should have included the tenancy lands in the decree. This contention is admittedly contrary to the law as laid down for these Provinces in Ghanya v. Ukund Rao (19) and cannot be pressed here. The plea is made in case the suit should go up on appeal to the Privy Council. The ground refers to paragraph 37 of the lower Court's judgment. For these reasons and on the view we take of the whole case we dismiss the cross-objections with costs.

(17) 40 Ind. Cas. 753; 15 A. L. J. 527; 39 A. 574.

As a result of our finding that the adoption of Jainarain was valid we allow the appeal and dismiss the suit with costs.

Appeal allowed.

(18) 18 Ind. Cas. 826; 9 N. L. R. 18.
(19) 4 N. L. R. 9.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO 90 OF 1917.
April 7, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Stuart, A. J. C., and Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, A. J. C.

JAI NARAIN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
Rai BAJRANG BAHADUR SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS, SURAJ DIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation—Necessity, proof of—Enquiry by alienee—Presumption.

If an alienee from the father of a joint Hindu family makes enquiries as to the necessities of the loan and if he satisfies himself that the necessities represented exist, he is sufficiently protected. [p. 826, col. 2.]

If the necessity for the loan cannot be established by direct evidence, it may be assumed if it can be shown that reasonable care was taken to ascertain that such circumstances existed and that the transferee acted in good faith. [p. 827, col. 2.]

Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah, 44 Ind. Cas. 290; 16 A. L. J. 245; 34 M. L. J. 291; 7 L. W. 323; 4 P. L. W. 226; 23 M. L. T. 228; 22 C. W. N. 484; 27 C. L. J. 363; 20 Bom. L. R. 524; 40 A. 171; (1918) M. W. N. 446 (P. C.), followed.

Appeal against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Rae Bareli, dated the 27th April 1917.

Mr. Ali Mohammad, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. Gokaran Nath and the Hon'ble Mr. Wazir Hasan, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case have been stated by us in our order of remand of the 13th September 1918.* The plaintiffs sued for the recovery of money due on a mortgage effected by Surajdin on the 9th January 1913 (Exhibit 1), a deed of further charge executed by him on the 4th December 1914 (Exhibit 2) and another deed of further charge executed by him on the 23rd April 1915 (Exhibit 3). Surajdin has a son, Jai Narain, who, at the time of the institution of the suit, was 18 years old. The property mortgaged is the ancestral property of Surajdin and Jai Narain.

The mortgage of the 9th January 1913 was made in lieu of Rs. 36,000 out of which Rs. 31,478-10-6 were credited towards the money due on certain prior mortgages held by the plaintiffs, Rs. 4,321-5-6 were paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar and the balance was applied to the purchase of stamp for the execution of the mortgage. The deed of mortgage stated that the mortgagor required a sum of Rs. 4,000 to meet the demand of revenue due to the Government and for domestic expenses. The deed of further charge of the 4th December 1914 was executed in lieu of Rs. 15,000, out of which Rs. 4,295-2-6 were credited towards the interest due on the deed of mortgage first mentioned, Rs. 6,690 10 6 were credited towards certain prior deeds of further charge and certain promissory notes due to the plaintiffs, and Rs. 4,014 were paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar. The allegation of the plaintiffs is that the sum last mentioned was borrowed by Surajdin to pay arrears of revenue due by him and for the purchase of cloth and grain for the business he was then carrying on, but no such necessity is recited in the deed. The deed of further charge of the 23rd April 1915 was executed in lieu of Rs. 2,450, out of which Rs. 304 8 0 were credited towards a promissory note executed by Surajdin in favour of the plaintiffs on the 28th January 1915, Rs. 144-0 9 were stated to have been taken for the payment of arrears of revenue due to the plaintiffs for 1322 Fasli and the balance was taken in cash before the Sub-Registrar. The plaintiffs allege that the amount last mentioned was taken by Surajdin for the expenses of the marriage of his youngest daughter, but no such necessity is mentioned in the deed.

*See Jai Narain v. Rai Bajrang Bahadur Singh, 43 Ind. Cas. 914; 5 O. L. J. 691.—Ed.

The Court below decreed the claim. It held that the consideration of each of these deeds was taken either to pay antecedent debts or for family necessity. But as Surajdin is alive and the question of making a son liable for the debts of his father on the ground of a pious obligation does not arise in the lifetime of the father except where the debts are payable to a third person, certain issues were remitted by this Court to ascertain whether the antecedent debts in question had been taken for family necessity or family purposes or for the discharge of a common obligation, and the moneys said to have been taken in cash were taken for similar purposes, and whether the creditors advanced the loans in good faith on the strength of the representations, if any, made to them as to the alleged needs of the estate and the family: and, if so, to what extent. The finding of the Court below is in favour of the plaintiffs.

We see no reason to dissent from that finding. There is sufficient evidence to show that at the time when the earlier loans in question were advanced and also when the deeds of mortgage and further charge now in suit were executed, the plaintiffs had through their agents and servants made due enquiries as to the necessities represented by Surajdin and satisfied themselves that the loans in question were required for the purpose of the estate and the business which the family was then carrying on and for the discharge of other family obligations. The plaintiff, Rai Bajrang Bahadur Singh, is a Talukdar, paying an annual revenue of Rs. 22,500 and an income tax of Rs. 200 per annum. He states that Surajdin commenced dealings with him about 12 years ago and borrowed money from time to time and that on each occasion when he approached him with a request for a loan, he enquired through his servants as to the existence of the necessity stated by him and never advanced him any money without satisfying himself that the money was required either to pay previous debts due by the family or for the purposes of marriage or other ceremonies. He further states that Surajdin borrowed moneys from him to pay the debts due by him to Gulab Rai and Lebidin and for the expenses of the marriage of his children and the purchase of grain and cloth for his business and also for paying the arrears of revenue due by him. His statement is corroborated by the evidence of other witnesses, who have been examined in regard to each of the different loan transactions entered into by Surajdin.

The mortgage of the 26th January 1904 (Exhibit 10) was executed to pay certain debts due to Gulab Rai, Dabidin and Murtaza Hutain and for domestic expenses. The mortgage of the 27th January 1905 (Exhibit 11) was executed to pay certain decrees for arrears of under proprietary rent and theka money due by Surajdin and to meet the expenses of the marriage of his eldest son. A portion of the consideration of that deed was also devoted to the payment of certain other debts. The plaintiffs cannot reasonably be expected to prove that these earlier debts had also been taken for family necessities or that Surajdin could not have paid the arrears of under-proprietary rent or theka money from the profits of the family property. The plaintiffs made enquiries as to the necessities for the loans then taken and if they satisfied themselves that the necessities represented existed, they were sufficiently protected. Surajdin carried on cloth and grain business, the profits of which went to the support of the family. He also held the theka of a village called Miran Sawaiya, the profits of which went to the family. He required money from time to time to carry on the cloth and grain business and considering the distance of time which has elapsed since the loans were first taken, it is not unreasonable to presume that the loans in question were taken for the purposes mentioned.

The mortgage-deeds of the 26th January 1904 and the 27th January 1905 were subsequently paid up by the execution of another mortgage on the 10th January 1908 (Exhibit 4), the consideration of which was partly applied to the satisfaction of these debts and partly to the satisfaction of certain other debts incurred to obtain property by pre-emption. A deed of further charge was executed by Surajdin on the 16th March 1908 to pay a decree for arrears of rent and to meet the expenses connected with the death of one of his sons (Exhibit 5). Another deed of simple mortgage was executed on the 19th June 1909 (Exhibit 6) to pay the interest due on the two deeds previously mentioned and some arrears of theka money due by the family and to meet the expenses connected with the death anniversary of the wife of Surajdin (Exhibit 6). A deed of simple mortgage was also executed on the 29th March 1912 to pay some arrears of rent and to meet certain other family necessities then represented to exist (Exhibit 7).

These four deeds were consolidated when the mortgage deed of the 9th January 1913 now in suit was executed. At the time of the execution of this deed Rs. 200 were taken for the expenses of execution and Rs. 4,321-5-6 to meet the expenses of the marriage of one of the daughters of Surajdin, to pay arrears of revenue and for other household expenses.

On the 11th December 1913 Surajdin executed a deed of further charge to pay certain prior debts and to meet domestic necessities. On the 16th January 1914 he executed another deed of further charge to meet domestic and private necessities including grain and cloth business he was carrying on. He also executed a deed of further charge on the 4th July 1914 to pay arrears of theka money and some money due on a promissory note and to meet other family necessities. These three deeds were consolidated on the 4th December 1914, when the deed of further charge for Rs. 15,000 now in suit was executed. At the time of the execution of this deed Rs. 4,014 were taken in cash for carrying on cloth and grain business and to pay arrears of revenue. The last deed of further charge was executed on the 23rd April 1915 partly to pay certain prior debts including the arrears of revenue and partly for the expenses of the marriage of another daughter of Surajdin. The evidence produced with regard to each of these deeds has been discussed at length by the learned Subordinate Judge, and it would be unreasonable to expect stringent proof of each of the items mentioned in these deeds. Such evidence as has been produced is, in our opinion, credible and relieves the creditors from the necessity of showing how the moneys taken were actually applied. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Anant Ram v. Collector of Etah (1), if the necessity cannot be established by direct evidence, it may be assumed if it can be shown that reasonable care was taken to ascertain that such circumstances existed and the transferee acted in good faith. We are satisfied that on the occasion of each of these transactions proper enquiries were made by the plaintiffs as to the necessities asserted by Surajdin and that they acted in good faith in lending the money after they had satisfied themselves as to the existence of those necessities. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 44 Ind. Cas. 290; 16 A. L. J. 245; 34 M. L. J. 291; 7 L. W. 323; 4 P. L. W. 226; 23 M. L. T. 228; 22 C. W. N. 484; 27 C. L. J. 363; 20 Bom. L. R. 524; 40 A. 171; (1918) M. W. N. 446 (P. C.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 6 OF 1919.

January 14, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, KT., and Justice Sir Ernest Fletcher, KT.

BALMUKUND RINA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GOPIRAM BHOTICA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Arbitration clause, construction of—Disputes, several—Awards, successive, whether permissible.

Where in a commercial contract there is a clause with the words "any dispute whatsoever arising on or out of this contract shall be referred to arbitration," it means that each and every dispute as it arises, on or out of the contract, shall be referred to arbitration. The fact that one of the parties to the contract has obtained an award as regards a portion of his claim does not prevent him from proceeding with arbitration in respect of matters arising out of subsequent breaches of the contract. [p. 834, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where there are several and separate contracts, the right conferred by the arbitration clause is not fully exhausted as soon as a complete award is made upon the first reference. [p. 834, col. 2.]

BALMUKUND RINA v. GOPIRAM BROTICA.

There may be successive awards even in the same matter. [p. 834, col. 2.]

Appeal against the following decree of Mr. Justice Rankin, dated the 21st January 1919:—

"By a contract of 1st December 1917 made on the ordinary form of the Indian Jute Manufacturers' Association the plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant three lacs of yards of Hessian cloth. The only express terms which require notice are three:—

Delivery of the said goods to be given and taken as follows:—December 1917.

Each month's delivery to be treated as a distinct and separate contract.

Any dispute whatsoever arising on or out of this contract shall be referred to arbitration under the rules of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce applicable for the time being for decision, and such decision shall be accepted as final and binding on both parties to this contract. The award may at the instance of either party, and without any notice to the other of them, be made a rule of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William.

These three terms are all part of the printed form with the exception of the words "December 1917" at the end of the first.

The seller by his Counsel has been careful to make clear that it is not disputed that the contract is by the usage of this market an instalment contract, in so far that it is open to the buyer to require delivery in separate quantities, at all events if each be not less than 50,000 yards; and in this further sense also that the buyer may, if he likes, require performance as to any such quantity taken separately either by giving due shipping instructions to the seller or by demanding mill's Pucca delivery orders.

Of the three lacs of yards contracted for, one half lac was duly delivered and may now be ignored. No delivery was in fact made of any part of the remainder, which divides itself into three separate lots.

The first lot is of 50,000 yards, for which a formal shipping instruction for the "City of Calcutta" was given on the 15th of December. Vessel was not ready to load. On 7th January buyer offers to take at once a delivery order. Delivery having been made in neither form, buyer on 18th January sends his difference bill by registered post claiming Rs. 8,159. Seller refuses to pay. On 28th February an arbitration by the Chamber of Commerce is demanded by the buyer, and proceedings strictly confined to this claim took their course under this demand, resulting on 24th July in an award of the sum claimed to the buyer with certain interest and costs. This is the first arbitration case.

The second arbitration case had reference to 1,00,000 yards for which another shipping instruction was given on 15th December —this time for the "Chile." The seller, finding that the vessel would not begin loading till the 2nd of January, disclaimed responsibility. Buyer insisted. On the 7th January buyer asked for immediate shipment or else delivery order. On the 18th buyer sends another difference bill—this time for Rs. 17,750—on the footing of the price at which the goods had been bought against him by his buyer. On the 19th the seller tendered delivery orders which were refused. On the 21st the seller returned the difference bill and claimed to cancel the contract because of that refusal. On some date before the 9th of April, Kanoria and Co., who had bought from the buyer, claimed arbitration between themselves and him. This had resulted in an award in their favour before the 24th of June. On the 9th of April the buyer's second case against the seller was commenced, claim being made in the alternative either for the amount of the difference bill or for such sum as might be awarded to Kanoria and Co.

The third arbitration case was not commenced till the 21st of June. It concerned two quantities of 50,000 yards each, one for the Chile and one for the Talabat. As to this I have only the buyer's case: the seller's case never having been lodged. The buyer claimed that shipping instructions were given on 14th and 21st December for these boats respectively; that on 2nd January 1918 he received two letters dated 29th December, in which seller said the 'Chile' was not yet in port and that the 'Talabat' had left long before due date; that on the 3rd January buyer wrote that the goods for Talabat should be put on the City of Manchester and on the 4th that he would take mill's Pucca delivery order for the other lot; that in the end the seller did neither; that on 15th January the buyer gave notice that his buyers had bought against him as regards the City of Manchester consignment; that on 16th he demanded a delivery order for the other lot by the next day, and that next day his buyers had bought against him for this lot also; that the seller refused to recognize this liability; that afterwards the buyer settled with one of his buyers on 25th February for Rs. 7,250 with seller's consent and on seller's promise to pay; that in May he settled with his other buyer for the same sum on the basis of an award obtained against that buyer by a firm to whom he had in turn re-sold.

Now all that the seller did in the third arbitration case was, that on 18th July he applied to the Tribunal for time to file his case, and on 25th July for more time, and in the end was given till 3rd August by a letter, dated 27th July.

On the 25th July, as I have said, an award in favour of the buyer was made in the first arbitration case between these parties, and by letters of 1st and 3rd August from seller's Solicitors to the Tribunal the seller set up his present claim that the Tribunal had no jurisdiction to proceed with the second and third cases, since in the matter of the contract of 1st December there had been an award, which award, they say with complicated incorrectness, "has resulted in a decree." It is given as an additional ground that the claim in these cases had arisen completely at the time of the Tribunal's decision. In this action brought by the seller I have to see whether his contention is correct, and whether he is entitled to any relief accordingly.

It was argued for the seller that while the contract was for delivery by instalments, it was one single contract in the sense that there was one promise, one covenant to which all the breaches have reference—that once one award is made under the arbitration clause in a complete form capable of enforcement at law, the Tribunal is functus officio and there can be no jurisdiction to make a second—that in this case all the alleged breaches were complete sometime before the 25th February 1918 when the first arbitration case was started—that there was only one cause of action, viz, failure to fulfil the promise to deliver 3 lacs of yards—that the buyer has split up his cause of action and made three cases out of one—and that this course is so unjust and unreasonable that at all events the principle which underlies Order II, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code, if not that rule itself, should be applied by me as a ground for holding that the Tribunal has no jurisdiction to entertain the second and third proceedings now.

The buyer's Counsel in reply founded upon a custom, alleged in his written statement to obtain in this market, to the effect that when orders for delivery in different lots are given, the original contract becomes divided into as many contracts as there are separate lots.

He further raised an issue of fact that whether such custom exists or not, the seller has by his conduct assented to this contract being treated as several separate contracts.

Apart from these questions of fact, he took certain objections logically prior to these issues. He contended that the Tribunal has jurisdiction to decide both these issues and that they are not triable by me.

He contested the proposition that apart from such a custom the first award precluded the Tribunal from entertaining the other cases.

As regards the principle of Order II, rule 2, he said that this objection applied at the initiation of the other cases and that either it does not go to the jurisdiction of the Tribunal, or, if it does, the seller consented to such jurisdiction by filing his written answer in the second case on 11th June 1918 and by his applications to the Tribunal on 18th and 25th July for time to file his answer in the third.

Lastly, and as an answer good in all events, he said that where an arbitrator has not any jurisdiction in law, no injunction or other relief is obtainable to stay his hand, and the only course is to take objection when the nullity is sought to be enforced as valid.

To the contentions of the buyer as to custom the seller's Counsel intimated that he would contest the existence of the custom. He argued further that the custom was contrary to the express words, "Each month's delivery to be treated as a distinct and separate contract," and was invalid as unreasonable.

I agreed that evidence as to the existence of the custom pleaded by the buyer should be reserved until after my decision on the prior points. The documents in the three arbitration cases were produced, and it was agreed that I should decide the preliminary points on these.

Now I will take the contract in the sense admitted by the seller, as stated at the commencement of this judgment, and I will examine as to whether or not he has established that the Tribunal is now without jurisdiction to decide the second and third arbitration cases.

I. First, is it true of a submission, such as was in this contract, that under it there can be only one award, meaning thereby a final and complete award enforceable in law? In my opinion there may be an indefinite number of such awards, as many awards as there are disputes arising out of the contract. The submission, if it be in the terms which are present in this contract, is not exhausted by reason of the mere fact that one award, final and complete in itself, has issued from it. The arbitrators are not functus officio: one item of their duty done, their duty remains their duty.

The completeness of the first award, so far as regards its own subject-matter, has no relevance to the present point.- An award which is incomplete as regards a claim may yet be good if complete as regards those matters in dispute with reference to the claim, which were submitted to the arbitrators. In such a case it is possible to have two awards over the same claim because it is possible to have further disputes over the same claim—disputes not covered by the first award. An award final and complete as regards a claim precludes another as to that claim only: this not because the number of awards would be getting high, but because there is nothing further to dispute without disputing the award itself.

This is my view of the effect of the unreported case of Chandanmull v. Donald Campbell and Co. (1), decided in the House of Lords on 4th December 1916. (The judgment in the Court of Appeal and the speeches of the Lords of Appeal will be found in the paper book in Appeal No. 42 of 1917 in this Court Suit No. 1094 of 1916). The terms of the submission are for this purpose indistinguishable from those I have to deal with and will be found at page 170 in the judgment of the present Master of the Rolls. Rule 26 of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce Rules does not, in my opinion, cut down the jurisdiction of the arbitrators to make awards from time to time in disputes arising out of the contract as such disputes arise.

II. In the second place on the footing that the breaches alleged in the later cases are all breaches of the same promise as grounded the first award, I have to decide whether the arbitrators are without jurisdiction to award upon them now. This contention of the seller must be put upon one or more of the following principles:—res judicata, bar by suit, principles of common law or equity analogous to these, or such a construction of the submission as would exclude from its ambit any right to entertain proceedings which, if before a Court of Justice, would be held an abuse of the process of the Court.

I think it will repay the trouble to make the hypothesis that on 28th February, 9th April and 21st June the buyer had commenced three several suits in a competent Court subordinate to this Court for breaches, all prior to the 28th of February, and had recovered judgment in the first suit on 25th July. In any case for the sake of clearness I will do so. I think the position then would have been as follows:—

(1). The lower Court would have had jurisdiction to decide whether the later cases come within Explanation IV in section 11 of the Code. I think it would be bound to hold that they do not: but if they do, and such Court wrongly held that they do not, the only remedy would be appeal. No question of jurisdiction would arise, and no remedy under section 115 of the Code would be appropriate. Such questions could only arise in a limiting case, e. g., if on the footing that section 11 did apply, the Court had refused to give effect to the law, or if it held wrongly on a point quite unarguable.

(2). The same observations apply to a plea under Order II, rule 2, but with this difference. I think (assuming no such custom as the buyers allege), that such lower Court, to decide rightly, would have to hold that the later cases were hit by the rule. But again no question of jurisdiction would arise if its decision was merely wrong; if, e.g., it purported to dispense the plaintiff from the provisions of the rule, that would be another matter. It is to be observed that the presence or absence of a judgment in the first suit would be wholly irrelevant in dealing with this plea.

(1) 54 Ind. Cas. 289; 23 C. W. N. 707 foot-note.

(3) If, putting aside the Code, the plea to the later suits fell to be considered at common law, I think myself that to reject it would be right. Such an objection must be matter of substance and I think has to fulfil certain technical conditions even then. In Brunsden v. Humphrey (2) Bowen, L. J., said: "The rule of the ancient common law is that where one is barred in any action real or personal by judgment, demurrer, confession or verdict, he is barred as to that or the like action of the like nature for the same thing for ever." In the present case and on my hypothesis, would these actions be "for the same thing" in substance? I think there can be but one answer, and the only way to attempt another is to insist upon the unity of the promise as making the cause of action technically the same. On this I will quote further from the same great authority: "The principle is frequently stated in the form of another legal proverb, nemo debet bis vexari pro eadem causa. It is a well-settled rule of law that damages resulting from one and the same cause of action must be assessed and recovered once for all. The difficulty in each instance arises upon the application of this rule, how far is the cause which is being litigated afresh the same cause in substance with that which has been the subject of the previous suit. 'The principal consideration,' says De Grey, C. J., in Kitchen v. Campbell (3), 'is whether it be precisely the same cause of action in both, appearing by proper averments in a plea, or by proper facts stated in a special verdict, or a special case'. 'And one great criterion,' he adds, 'of this identity is that the same evidence will maintain both actions'..... 'The question,' says Grose, J., in Seddon v. Tutop (4), 'is not whether the sum demanded might have been recovered in the former action, the only inquiry is, whether the same cause of action has been litigated and considered in the former action'.... It is evident, therefore, that the application of the rule depends, not upon any technical consideration of the identity of forms of action, but upon matter of substance."

This passage, if only in view of the last words, covers and disposes of the objection which I am now considering in this case. I take the principles there laid down to be first principles not mere axismota media true only of the special range of facts then before the Court.

(4) Before parting with my hypothesis of these cases being brought as actions, I have only to say that if before the first had been decided, application had been made to strike out the others as oppressive, or as an abuse of the process of the Court, it would have been wrong and unreasonable to do more than to consolidate the actions and to make the buyer pay costs thrown away. If such application had been made after judgment in the first case, in view of the lateness of the application, it would probably have been wrong to accede to it at all so far as regards the second case. As to both second and third, an order to strike out would have been improper. Some terms as to costs would at the utmost meet the case.

When I come to consider the seller's contentions as applicable to proceedings by arbitration, none of his points as to want of jurisdiction become any stronger. If into this submission I am to import any conditions against multiplicity of arbitrations for the same thing, I know no better principle than I have stated from Lord Bowen and I should not be any stricter than the language of section 11 of the Code which many Judges have thought too strict. But that is for the arbitrators and not for me. In Donald Campbell's case (1) Lord Sumner said this: "Incidentally the effect of a prior award might come into question in an arbitration upon a dispute arising out of a contract if the defendants alleged and the claimant denied that the award already made had decided the matter in dispute."

(2) (1884) 14 Q. B. D. 141 at p. 146; 53 L. J. Q. B. 476; 51 L. T. 529; 32 W. R. 944; 49 J. P. 4.

(3) (1772) 3 Wils. 304; 2 Bl. Rep. 827; Lofft. 20[illegible]; 95 E. R. 1069.

(4) (1796) 6 T. R. 607; 1 Esp. 401; 3 R. R. 274; 101 E. R. 729.

If further I import into this submission an implied term which would exclude oppression or abuse of process, the facts here do not come within it.

Lastly, even if I stretch the principle of bar by mere suit to arbitration cases, I cannot make it go to jurisdiction, and, as the seller has taken steps in both of the later cases, my difficulty would be increased. Besides, I have no right or inclination to stretch it at all. Order II, rule 2, is a special provision doubtless of the completest wisdom, but unknown to the common law—one, moreover, which attaches an indiscriminate and indeed incalculable penalty to a condition difficult to define. There is, I think, a cardinal error involved in any attempt to appeal even to the principle on which the rule is founded, for the jurisdiction of an arbitrator depends not upon the existence of a claim or the accrual of a cause of action, but upon the existence of a dispute. And his right to entertain a second case depends not on the identity of the cause of action, but on the identity of the matters in dispute. Where there has been an award not set aside, everything decided by it will be deemed conclusively to have been disputed. The first award, if valid, covers the whole of the issues raised and covers nothing else: any issue not raised is, if disputed, another dispute. In the case referred to already, the House of Lords applied this principle to affirm the validity of a second award on what was really the same claim. Of such a case it is important to say, and I think the House of Lords has implied, that the second dispute must arise subsequently to the first. But in other cases such a requirement would be either meaningless or wrong. If a dispute exists now, if neither party treated the issue as in dispute upon the previous arbitration, if it is not in substance a dispute about the same thing or covered by the first award, then the most positive proof that the parties were in difference about it before the first case was launched, will not affect the arbitrators' jurisdiction.

In the present case, whether the contract was one or several, there is no room for doubt that the three cases were distinct disputes about separate instalments. The shipping instructions are separate; the correspondence throughout is kept entirely separate on both sides; separate difference rates are claimed, separate difference bills delivered. Though under the same contract they are in no way mixed up, the course of business requires that they should not be, buyer and seller as to each consignment being links in a chain which stretches between mill and shipper—for all they know—links in a different chain as to each different consignment.

Having gone through the parties' statements in writing before the Tribunal, and the Exhibits submitted, I think the cases were very different in many ways. Each is a story with complications of its own: though the general nature and some important facts are the same in all. Whether on a true view of the parties' rights, the cases stripped of all irrelevance would become more similar or more divergent, is a question. It may even be that one short answer would decide them all. But the parties' own views are what constitute the dispute, and have in this case constituted three disputes.

For these reasons, apart altogether from any custom not admitted by the seller, I think he fails upon the merits, and I prefer to decide upon that ground. I think he has no equity and no grievance and that his effort to impugn the arbitrators' jurisdiction comes to nothing. I find against him on the third issue, and his other difficulties need not be discussed.

I sustain the objection taken by Sir Benode Mitter at the conclusion of the plaintiff's case. I hold that there is no case to answer, and I dismiss the action with costs."

Messrs. Pugh, S. N. Banerjee and N. Sircar, for the Appellant.

Sir B. C. Mitter, Messrs A. N. Chowdhuri, S. N. Bose and K. C. Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

MOOKERJEE, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff in a suit to restrain two arbitration proceedings pending before the Tribunal of Arbitration of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. By a contract, dated the 1st December 1917, made on the ordinary form of the Indian Jute Manufactures'

Association, the plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant three lacs of yards of Hessian cloth. The terms which require consideration in this appeal were three:—

"Delivery of the said goods to be given and taken as follows : December, 1917.

Each month's delivery to be treated as a distinct and separate contract.

Any dispute whatsoever arising on or out of this contract shall be referred to arbitration under the rules of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, applicable for the time being, for decision, and such decision shall be accepted as final and binding on both parties to this contract. The award may, at the instance of either party and without any notice to the other of them, be made a rule of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William."

These three terms are all part of the printed form with the exception of the words "December, 1917," at the end of the first. Of the three lacs of yards contracted for, one-half lac was duly delivered and may now be ignored. No delivery was in fact made of any part of the remainder, which divides itself into three separate lots. As regards the first lot of 50,000 yards which was not delivered, on the 23th February 1918 the defendant demanded arbitration by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and proceedings were confined to this particular claim. On the 25th July 1918 on this portion of the claim an award was made by the Board in favour of the plaintiff with costs and interest. Subsequently, on the 9th April 1918 and the 21st June 1918 two other arbitration proceedings were started by the buyer and the object of the present suit is to stay these proceedings before the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Justice Rankin has held that there is no foundation for the claim. In our opinion, this conclusion is so manifestly right, on the terms of the contract itself, that it is not necessary to elaborate the matter.

The clause which opens with the words 'any dispute whatsoever arising on or out of this contract shall be referred to arbitration,' obviously means that each and every dispute as it arises, on or out of this contract, shall be referred to the arbitration of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. As each month's delivery was to be treated as a distinct and separate contract, the defendant properly obtained an award as regards the first portion of his claim; this clearly does not prevent him from proceeding with arbitration in respect of matters arising out of subsequent breaches of contract. We agree with Mr. Justice Rankin that as in the present case there were several and separate contracts, there is no foundation for the contention that the right conferred by the arbitration clause was fully exhausted as soon as a complete award was made upon the first reference. We may add that the decision of the House of Lords in the case of Chandanmull v. Donald Campbell and Co. (1) shows that there may be successive awards even in the same matter. There, a dispute arose as to the effect of the award on the first arbitration; for the settlement of this dispute, a second reference to arbitration was made; it was ruled that such second arbitration was valid.

There is thus no substance in the appeal, which must be dismissed with costs.

FLETCHER, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE ORDERS NOS. 204 AND 296 OF 1919.

May 17, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das.

Rai BISHUN DUTT—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAMJI PROSAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151—Inherent power of Court, when to be exercised—Appeal—Remand, order of, when to be made.

An order under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code must show on the face of it that it is necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court. [p. 837, col. 2.]

An Appellate Court has inherent power to remand a case, but it is a power which can only be exercised for the ends of justice. [p. 837, col. 2.]

The mere fact that there has not been a proper trial of the case, apart from other circumstances in the case, is not sufficient to vest the Appellate Court with jurisdiction to remand the case in the exercise of its inherent power. [p. 838, col 1.]

The rule is that if the trial has not been proper owing to some neglect on the part of the Court, the Appellate Court has power to remand the case, but where the neglect or default is on the part of a party to the litigation, the Appellate Court has no such power. [p. 838, col. 1.]

Appeals against the orders of the District Judge, Muzaffarpore.

Messrs. Jalgobind Prasad Sinha and Ganesh Dutt Singh, for the Appellants.

Mr. Lachmi Narayan Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against the order of the learned District Judge of Muzaffarpore, remanding the case for rehearing to the Court of first instance. There is also a revision petition under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure complaining against the order passed by the learned District Judge.

A preliminary objection has been taken on behalf of the respondents to the effect that no second appeal lies to this Court. In order to determine this point it is necessary to see whether in remanding the case to the Court of first instance the learned District Judge exercised his inherent power recognised and preserved in section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or whether he acted under the provisions of Order XLI, rule 23. If his order is an order under Order XLI, rule 23, then clearly an appeal lies to this Court under Order XLIII, rule 1 (u) of the Code. If his order, on the other hand, purports to be an order in the exercise of his inherent power then equally clearly no appeal lies to this Court, although in a proper case this Court would have ample jurisdiction to revise that order.

Now in order to understand the judgment of the Court below it is necessary to see what the rival cases of the parties were in the Court of first instance. The plaintiff's suit was a suit for declaration of his title to and for confirmation of possession of certain shares in an Ijmali estate of which particulars are given in the plaint. The plaintiff did ask for an alternative relief for possession, but the Courts below have concurrently found that the plaintiff was in possession of the shares claimed by him, so that we must regard his suit as a suit for declaration of title and for confirmation of possession. Shortly stated, the plaintiff claimed 2 annas 16 gandas odd as his ancestral and reversionary share in the estate and also 8 annas as a share purchased by him in execution of a mortgage decree against the previous holder of the share. He claimed this share in an Ijmali estate as a result of a partition held in the year 1895. It is conceded that this Ijmali estate belonged to the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 and defendants fourth parties. The plaintiff's case was that previous to the partition of 1896 he had 2 annas 16 gandas odd share in the Ijmali estate and that he was in possession of that share and that subsequently to the partition he acquired 8 annas share in the estate by purchase at a sale held in execution of a mortgage decree of which share also he was in possession. He complained that the refusal of the Land Registration Department to register his name in respect of the entirety of the shares claimed by him threw a cloud on his title and that accordingly he was compelled to come to Court to seek declaration of his title in respect thereto.

On the pleadings of the parties issues were framed by the Court of first instance, of which the fourth issue ran as follows: "What is the extent of plaintiff's share in the disputed property? Can he recover any share of the disputed property in this suit?" The learned Additional Subordinate Judge, having carefully considered the evidence adduced before him, came to the conclusion that the plaintiff's ancestral and reversionary share in the estate was not two annas 16 gandas as claimed by him but was one-anna 3 gandas and 1 kouri. So far as his purchased share is concerned, he found that the plaintiff had proved his title to the whole of it. In the result the learned Additional Subordinate Judge made a declaration in the plaintiff's favour as to his title to 1-anna 3-gandas and 1 kouri and eight-annas share in the new estate. It will be noticed that there was no decree for possession. Obviously the learned District Judge accepted the case of the plaintiff that he was in possession of his share.

From this decree there were no less than three appeals and one cross-appeal to the Court of the learned District Judge. The defendant No. 1 appealed from so much of the decree as was against his interest. This appeal was No. 75 of 1917. The plaintiff himself, being aggrieved by the refusal of the learned Additional Subordinate Judge to declare his title to the entirety of 2 annas 16 gandas claimed by him, preferred a cross-appeal to that Court. It appears that defendant No. 2 and defendants Nos. 3—9 preferred separate appeals to the Court of the District Judge, the appeal of defendant No. 2 being No. 90 of 1917 and the appeal of defendants Nos. 3—9 being numbered Appeal No. 65 of 1917. Appeal No. 65 of 1917 was, however, dismissed for default by the learned District Judge, so that on the day when the learned District Judge took up the case he had two appeals and a cross-appeal before him; Appeal No. 75 of 1917, No. 90 of 1917 and a cross appeal preferred by the plaintiff.

Mr. Sheepshanks, who heard the appeals in the first instance, being of opinion that the learned Additional Subordinate Judge should have ascertained the shares of the defendants in order to determine in what proportion the shares awarded to the plaintiff were to be taken from the defendants, framed an additional issue and remanded that issue for re trial by the Additional Subordinate Judge. That additional issue was "What are the respective shares of the several defendants?' Mr. Sheepshanks obviously acted under Order XLI, rule 25, and the plaintiff could not challenge that order by an appeal to this Court. Nor was it necessary for him to challenge that order because it prejudiced nothing which had already been adjudged in his favour by the Additional Subordinate Judge. In my view, the order of Mr. Sheepshanks was wrong and if it had not been a consent order it could not be supported. On the pleadings of the parties the question of the extent of shares of the defendants did not directly arise. It was not a suit for partition nor was it a suit for possession. I can quite understand that if the Court had to pass a decree for possession in favour of the plaintiff against several defendants having distinct interests in the estate, it might be necessary to determine the shares of the defendants in order to enable the Court to say in what proportion the shares awarded to the plaintiff were to be taken from the defendants. But the suit of the plaintiff was, in my judgment, not a suit for possession, nor did the Court of first instance give him a decree for possession. Therefore, in my view, the issue framed by Mr. Sheepshanks did not arise at all. Mr. Sheepshanks should not have framed an additional issue which did not arise at all in the case and remanded that issue for trial by the Court of first instance. But it is abundantly clear that Mr. Sheepshanks did not intend that the question of plaintiff's share should be re opened on remand. He obviously thought that in order to give complete relief to the plaintiff it was necessary for him to know what were the respective shares of the defendants in the estate.

The Additional Subordinate Judge in his judgment on remand said that it was impossible for him to determine the shares of the defendants unless it was open to him to reconsider the question of the plaintiff's share in the estate. Rightly or wrongly he pointed out that if the shares of the plaintiff were to remain as initially determined by him, it might be that on his adjudication of the respective shares of the defendants the total might exceed sixteen annas. With this expression of opinion he sent the case back to the Court of the learned District Judge. When the matter came before the learned District Judge, Mr. Boyce this time, that learned Judge took the view that the whole case should be remanded to the Court of first instance and remanded the whole case by the order which that learned Judge passed on the 11th of April 1919. It is against this order that the present appeal and application are directed.

In order to appreciate the preliminary objection raised by the learned Vakil on behalf of the respondents, it is necessary to see under what authority the learned District Judge acted in remanding the case to the Court of first instance. It is conceded that he did not and could not have acted under rule 25 of Order XLI. The question is, did he act under rule 23, Order XLI, or did he act in the exercise of his inherent power?

It is remarkable that the learned District Judge gives no indication whatever in his judgment as to the jurisdiction which he has exercised in remanding the case to the Court of first instance. There is, however, one line in his judgment which suggests that he acted in the exercise of his inherent power recognised and preserved by section 151 of the Code. I will accept the argument advanced to me by the learned Vakil on behalf of the respondent and assume that the learned District Judge acted in the exercise of his inherent power under section 151 of the Code. One consequence of this is that the appeal preferred by the appellant is incompetent and must accordingly be dismissed. I have still to deal with the revision petition of the plaintiff and if I am satisfied that in acting as he did the learned Judge exercised a jurisdiction not vested in him by law or that he acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity, I have complete power to set aside the order of the learned District Judge.

The power of the lower Appellate Court in remanding in cases other than those specified in Order XLI, rule 23, is undoubted, but it is a power which can only be exercised for the ends of justice. It has been said that section 151 of the Code confers no new power upon the Court. It merely recognises and saves all the powers which a Court had for doing justice irrespective of any provision of the Code of Civil Procedure and, I may add, inspite of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. We might take section 151 of the Code then as the legislative recognition of what the Courts could always do for the ends of justice. Just because the Courts have wide powers when acting within their jurisdiction to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice, it is necessary that the limits of the jurisdiction should be clearly recognised and carefully guarded.

Now what are the limits of the powers of the Court to act in the exercise of its inherent power? It seems to me that the Code itself which, as it has been said, recognises and preserves that power gives a sufficiently clear answer to the question. The Court may pass such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court. In these words, you have the limits on the jurisdiction of the Court to act in the exercise of its inherent power. In my view, the order passed by the Court must show, on the face of it, that such an order was necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court.

It is not urged before me that the order complained of was passed to prevent the abuse of the process of the Court. It is remarkable that the learned Judge does not say anywhere in his order that the order was necessary for the ends of justice, but he does say that there was no proper trial of the case. But I do not think that the mere fact that there was no proper trial of the case in the first Court is sufficient by itself, without further facts, to vest the lower Appellate Court with power to remand a case in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. The Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Abdul Karim Abu Ahmed Khan Ghaznavi v. Allahabad Bank Ltd. (1) expressly refused to answer the question whether it was competent to a Court to remand a case in which in the opinion of that Court there had been no proper trial. The learned Chief Justice of that Court in the course of his judgment said as follows:—"As regards the second part of the reference," that is to say, the question which I have just stated, "I think on further consideration that it is couched in too general terms, and that an answer to such a general question might lead to difficulty and misapprehension and inasmuch as the answer to the first part of the reference is really sufficient to dispose of the matter, I do not think it necessary to give a specific answer to the second part of the reference." Mr. Justice Woodroffe, in the same case, said as follows:—"The second part of the reference is in such wide terms that I feel a difficulty in answering it in a manner which will not lead to misapprehension. Thus the words a 'proper trial' might include cases within Order XLI and an answer in the affirmative might enable the Courts to order wrongly a new trial although the particular case ought to be dealt with under the provisions of Order XLI." It is, to my mind, quite clear that the mere fact that there has not been a proper trial of the case apart from other circumstances in the case is not sufficient to vest the Appellate Court with jurisdiction to remand the case in the exercise of its inherent power. I must not be understood as suggesting that the Court has no power to order a remand when there has been no proper trial of the case. It may often happen that owing to some neglect on the part of the Court itself there has been no proper trial of the case. When the neglect is on the part of the Court itself, the Appellate Court would have ample jurisdiction in the exercise of its inherent power to remand the case for further trial. But the question is if owing to the neglect or default on the part of any of the parties to the litigation there has been no proper trial of the case, is it open to the Appellate Court to remand the case to the Court of first instance? I am of opinion that there is no such power at all in the lower Appellate Court in the exercise of its inherent power.

(1) 41 Ind. Cas. 598; 26 C. L. J. 49; 41 C. 929; 21 C. W. N. 877.

It is necessary, therefore, to consider the order of the learned Judge to see whether he had the power necessary for the ends of justice to remand the case to the Court of first instance. His reasons may be given in his own words: "It appears to me that the case has not been properly tried, since there has been no determination as to the share or shares of the defendants from which the share declared to be in the plaintiff's possession is to be taken. Any judgment like the present one that does not take into account the whole 16 annas in the patti will only lead to further litigation, and since all the persons interested in the patti are on the record, there is no reason why it should not be finally and completely determined." Speaking with the utmost respect, I do not see how there has not been a proper trial of the case because the Court of first instance did not determine the shares of the defendants. Nor do I see how the shares are to be taken from the defendants since the lower Appellate Court found that the plaintiff was in possession of the shares. I can quite understand, as I have said before, that if the Court of first instance had passed a decree for possession against different defendants having distinct shares in the estate without determining the proportion in which the share awarded to the plaintiff was to be taken from the defendants, there would be something in the decree which might make it unworkable and the lower Appellate Court in the ends of justice might find itself compelled to remand the case for determination of an essential issue in the case. But that is not the case here. The plaintiff asks for a declaration of his title to certain specific shares in the estate, and it was not necessary in order to give complete relief to the plaintiff that the shares of the defendants should be determined. It may be said, of course, as was said in this Court by the learned Vakil for the respondents, that if the defendants succeeded in proving that they own between themselves such shares in the estate as would make it impossible for the plaintiff to have the share claimed by him because the whole estate consists only of 16 annas, the share of the plaintiff must necessarily be reduced. In other words, the question of the shares of the defendants was never directly in issue in the suit, as it would be in a suit for partition or in a suit for possession, though it was incidentally in issue for the purpose of determining the shares which ought to have been adjudged to the plaintiff. But if that question was incidentally in issue in the Court of first instance, the defendants had every opportunity to adduce all the evidence bearing on that point. Either they have produced that evidence or they have not produced that evidence. If they have produced that evidence, then it was open to the lower Appellate Court to take that evidence into consideration in determining what are the proper shares of the plaintiff in the estate. If they have not produced that evidence, surely the ends of justice do not demand that there should be a remand in order that the defendants may have another opportunity of strengthening their case by producing such evidence as they ought to have produced in the first instance.

Nor do I see why, because owing to the neglect and default on the part of the defendants there may be further litigation between them, the plaintiff's shares should again be put in the melting pot. On the judgment of the Court of first instance the plaintiff has proved his title to certain specific shares in the estate. It may be that if the defendants had produced all the evidence in the first instance, the plaintiff would have been unable to prove his title to the entirety of the shares claimed by him. It may be that owing to their default and neglect there may be litigation as between themselves as to their respective titles to the remaining shares, but the plaintiff having established his title to certain specific shares, those shares can again be drawn into controversy in any future litigation as between the defendants. Why then should the question of his title be re-investigated? I can see no justice in the course proposed by the learned Judge. It will only encourage the belief that it is unnecessary for the parties to be diligent in the first instance because the lower Appellate Court has always the power to remand a case in order to give the parties sufficient opportunity to produce their evidence. In my judgment, the order of the lower Appellate Court does not, on the face of it, show that in the interest of justice it was necessary to pass the order which he did. That being my view, I must allow the revision application and set aside the order of the learned District Judge ordering a remand of the case and direct the learned District Judge to hear the appeals on merits.

The Stamp Reporter has drawn my attention to the fact that there is a deficiency in the Court fee amounting to Rs. 19-8 0 due from the respondent. Let the deficiency be made good in the Court below before the appeals are heard. I make no order as to costs.

Order set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 84 OF 1919.

August 12, 1919.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, KT., and Mr. Justice Panton.

Maharaja Sir RAMESWAR SINGH BAHADUR—APPLLEANT

versus

CHUNI LAL SHAHA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage, suit on—Receiver, appointment and position of—Order for appointment of Receiver obtained by first mortgagee, effect of, on second mortgagee—Second mortgagee purchasing equity of redemption, position of—Mortgagee, when can ask for appointment of Receiver.

Where there are two mortgages on the same property, it is open to the first mortgagee to obtain an order for the appointment of a Receiver and such order is binding on the mortgagor as also the second mortgagee, and a Receiver so appointed holds the property for the benefit of the first mortgagee and is bound to make over to him the entire income for the satisfaction of his dues The fact that the second mortgagee has obtained a decree and in execution thereof has purchased the equity of redemption places him in no position of advantage. In his character of purchaser in execution of his own decree he is as much bound by the order appointing a Receiver as the mortgagor. [p. 840, col. 2]

A mortgagee, whether he is or is not entitled to possession, may invite the Court to appoint a Receiver if the demands of justice require that the mortgagor should be deprived of possession. [p. 841, col. 1]

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court, Dacca, dated the 25th February 1919.

Mr. N. Sarkar and Babu Ambicapada Chowdhury, for the Appellants.

Babu Gobinda Chandra Dey Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order made on the Receiver in a mortgage-suit, who was appointed at the instance of the first mortgagee, now appellant before us. It appears that on the 4th May 1915 the first mortgagee, who held a mortgage over the entire property, instituted a suit to enforce his security against the mortgagor and the second mortgagee. Seven days later, he applied for the appointment of a Receiver for the preservation of the property, for payment of arrears of rent due to the superior landlord, for the realization of rent and other incomes from the property and for the payment of the income to the plaintiff in reduction of his claim under the mortgage. The Subordinate Judge made a conditional order for the appointment of a Receiver on the same day. The order was made absolute on the 15th July 1915. Since then, the Receiver has been in possession and the order for payment of the profits in reduction of the dues on the first mortgage has been duly carried out. On the 12th July 1916 the mortgagee obtained a decree for Rs. 1,21,540. Meanwhile the second mortgagee, who held a mortgage on one half only of the property, had instituted a suit to enforce his security, without joining the first mortgagee as a party. He obtained a decree on the 2nd August 1915 for the sum of Rs. 6,177. This decree was put into execution, and, at the sale which followed, the second mortgagee purchased the equity of redemption in relation to his mortgage for a sum of Rs. 425 on the 10th August 1916. It appears that during the pendency of these proceedings, the second mortgagee had managed to obtain an order in his suit, directing the Receiver to pay him a portion of the income in his hands derived from the mortgaged property. What followed is not clear, but we find that on the 23rd August 1918 the second mortgagee made an application to the Court for the purpose of intercepting the whole of the income of the property purchased by him and to receive the amount for the satisfaction of his own dues. This application was opposed by the first mortgagee, but the Subordinate Judge made an order in favour of the second mortgagee on the 25th February 1919. The legality of this order is called in question in the present appeal.

On behalf of the first mortgagee, it has been contended that the order for the appointment of a Receiver of the 11th May 1915 is binding upon the mortgagor as also the second mortgagee in whose presence it was made and that the circumstances which had happened did not justify a modification of that order. Our attention has been invited to the case of Penney v. Todd (1), where it was ruled that the possession of a Receiver in a mortgage suit was prima facie for the benefit of the party who had obtained the appointment. On this principle it has been argued that the Receiver, who was appointed at the instance of the first mortgagee, holds the property for his benefit alone and is bound to make over to him the entire income for the satisfaction of his dues. In our opinion this contention is clearly well founded.

The order for the appointment of the Receiver made conditionally on the 11th May 1915, and confirmed on the 15th July 1915, was passed in the presence of the mortgagor as also the second mortgagee. They are equally bound by the order in question. Nothing has happened since then which would entitle either of them to avoid the consequences of that order. The second mortgagee has contended that the fact that he has obtained a decree on his mortgage and has purchased the equity of redemption in execution of that decree has altered the position. We are of opinion that there has been no change in his position in relation to the Receiver at the instance of the first mortgagee. If neither the second mortgagee nor the mortgagor is entitled to question the propriety of the order for the appointment of the Receiver, the circumstance that the equity of redemption has been transferred from the mortgagor to the second mortgagee cannot place the latter in a position of advantage. In his character as purchaser in execution of his own decree, he is as much bound by the order for the appointment of the Receiver as the mortgagor. If the mortgagor had made an application to the Court to modify the order for the appointment of the Receiver and had attempted to intercept the profits, no Court would have listened to him. The second mortgagee does not now stand in a different position. An argument was addressed to us on the assumption that the first mortgagee was a mortgagee by way of conditional sale and that as such he had obtained a decree for foreclosure. On that assumption it was argued, on the authority of the decision in Khubsurat Koer v. Saroda Charan Guha (2), that a Receiver should not have been appointed at his instance. On an examination of the record, however, it transpires that the decree was for sale of the mortgaged properties, consequently no question can arise as to the propriety of the order for the appointment of a Receiver. It was suggested by the second mortgagee that a Receiver could not be appointed at the instance of a mortgagee who held a simple mortgage. We are unable to accept this contention as well founded on principle; there is indeed authority for the contrary view: Venkata Rajagopala Surya Row Bahadur v. Basavi Reddy (3). There is no foundation for the contention that a mortgagee who is not entitled to possession of the mortgaged properties is not entitled to ask for the appointment of a Receiver; whether the mortgagee is or is not entitled to possession he may invite the Court to appoint a Receiver, if the demands of justice require that the mortgagor should be deprived of possession. The principle applicable to cases of this character was lucidly stated in the case of Herbert v. Greene (4): "In a foreclosure suit or a suit to raise a charge affecting lands by sale of the lands, an order is not made for the appointment of a Receiver unless under the following circumstances: First, where interest is due on the security, the Court usually requiring an affidavit that interest for one year at least is due; or secondly, where the property is in danger, for example, if the lands are held under a lease and head rent has been permitted to remain unpaid and in arrears; thirdly, where there is reason to apprehend that the sum for which the lands shall be sold will be insufficient to pay the encumbrances or charges thereon." [See also Weatherall v. Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company (5), Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company v. Fakir-ud-din (6)]. If we examine the case from a somewhat different point of view, the unreasonableness of the argument advanced on behalf of the second mortgagee becomes still more patent. If the property is not of sufficient value to meet the dues of all the encumbrances, it is clear that when the property is sold, the first mortgagee will be paid first and thereafter the remainder, if any, will be applied in discharge of the claims of the second mortgagee. It is inconceivable that if the relation between the first mortgagee and the second mortgagee is of this description, the latter, by purchasing the equity of redemption, should become entitled to intercept the profits of the mortgaged property before the dues of the first mortgagee have been satisfied.

(1) (1878) 26 W. R. (Eng.) 502.

(2) 12 Ind. Cas. 165; 14 C. L. J. 526; 16 C. W. N. 126.

The result is that this appeal is allowed, the order of the Court below set aside and the application of the 23rd August 1918 dismissed with costs in both the Courts. We assess the hearing-fee in each Court at five gold mohurs.

Appeal allowed.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 936; (1914) M. W. N. 771; 1 L. W. 785; 16 M. L. T. 407; 29 M. L. J. 457.
(4) (1854) 3 Ir. Ch. Rep. 270 at p. 274.
(5) 9 Ind. Cas. 985; 13 C. L. J. 495.
(6) 17 Ind. Cas. 849; 17 C. W. N. 16.

PATNA HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 105 OF 1918.
February 26, 1920.
Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coutts.
Musammat MANKI KOER—PETITIONER—APPELLANT
versus
Musammat MANRAKHAN KUER AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENTS.

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 8—Executor, appointment of, provided he is fit for the work, meaning of—Executor, death of—Procedure—Universal or residuary legatee, when may be granted Letters of Administration.

Where a person appoints one of the sons of his executor to be an executor after the death of the latter provided that the son is fit for the work, this merely means that the person named as executor is free from any of the legal disabilities mentioned in section 8 of the Probate and Administration Act. [p. 843, col. 1.]

Where an executor appointed under a Will dies, a universal or residuary legatee may be admitted to prove the Will, and Letters of Administration with the Will annexed may be granted him of the whole estate or of such portion thereof as may be unadministered, and where such universal or residuary legatee is a minor, his mother may be appointed administrator during his minority. [p. 844, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Patna, dated the 17th June 1918.

Messrs. Fakhruddin and Panchanan Banerji, for the Appellants.

Messrs. P. K. Sen and G. Das, for the Respondents.

MANKI KOER v. MANRAKHAN KUER.

JUDGMENT.

MILLER, C. J.—This is an appeal from a decision of the District Judge of Patna, dated the 17th June 1918. The appeal arises out of an application by Manki Kuer, the widow of Nathuni Sahu, for revocation of Probate of the Will of her husband granted to Lakhan Lal and Sita Ram, his nephew's sons, and for a grant of Letters of Administration with the Will annexed in respect to his property to herself. It appears from the evidence that the testator executed a Will on the 9th April appointing Mannu Lal his nephew as his executor. Mannu Lal applied for Probate before the District Judge, but during the Probate proceedings he died and the application was carried on in the name of Lakhan Lal his son through Manki Kuer, the widow of the testator, as his next friend, Lakhan Lal and his brother Sita Ram being at that time minors. His application to have his name substituted in place of that of his father in the Probate suit was granted and on the 13th December 1917 a grant of Probate was made to Lakhan Lal. On the 7th March 1918 Lakhan Lal applied through his mother Manrakhan Kuer as his next friend that the name of Manki Kuer, the widow of the testator, should be struck out and the name of his own mother Manrakhan substituted in her stead. On the 23rd March Manki Kuer's name was removed and Manrakhan's name was substituted as guardian and next friend of Lakhan Lal. About the same time Manki Kuer herself filed an application that the Probate be withdrawn and Letters of Administration granted to her, on the ground that she was the widow of Nathuni Sahu the testator and was interested in the property and that Lakhan Lal had no right under the Will to obtain Probate. On the 9th April 1918 Lakhan Lal through his next friend Manrakhan Kuer filed a petition that his brother Sita Ram should be added in the Probate as executor with him and that the Probate should be corrected or that Letters of Administration should be granted to them both, and on the 10th April in the same year Manki Kuer filed another petition claiming revocation of Probate and the grant of Letters of Administration to herself.

The matter came before the District Judge on the 17th June 1918, when all these questions were considered and determined and the learned Judge made an order revoking the grant of Probate to Lakhan Lal and Sita Ram, on the ground that the Probate had been granted per incuriam, these persons being in fact minors at that time, and he further ordered that Letters of Administration with the Will annexed be granted to Manrakhan Kuer mother and guardian of Lakhan Lal and Sita Ram, minor executors of the Will of Nathuni Sahu deceased limited until one of them should attain majority.

It is from that order that the present appeal is brought by Manki Kuer, and she contends that under the Will of her late husband neither Lakhan Lal nor his brother Sita Ram were appointed as executors at all and that, therefore, the order of the learned Judge granting Letters of Administration to their mother Manrakhan Kuer cannot stand as it was based upon the hypothesis that Lakhan Lal and Sita Ram were in fact appointed executors of the Will upon the death of their father Mannu Lal. It is necessary in order to decide this question to consider that part of the Will in which executors are appointed. There can be no doubt that the testator, who died leaving no male relations nearer than his brother's son Mannu Lal, although he left a wife and a daughter and a granddaughter, did appoint Mannu Lal his executor and in a subsequent part of his Will he provided: "If the aforesaid executor dies, then after his death his son and heir's representatives who shall be fit for the work will act as executor representative to carry on the work in place of the deceased executor in regular succession in perpetuity." It will be seen from that that the person or persons who were appointed to act as executor or executors in the event of the death of Mannu Lal were his descendant or descendants in the male line who should be fit for the work, and the contention on behalf of the appellant is that there was on the death of Mannu Lal no person alive who was fit to carry on the work, of executor as the only two people who would otherwise have complied with the description were Mannu Lal's sons, Lakhan Lal and Sita Ram, who were minors and, therefore, unfit. There was in fact no specific appointment of either Lakhan or Sita Ram as executors and that being so, section 31 of the Probate and Administration Act had no application because in fact Lakhan and Sita Ram, not fulfilling the description mentioned in the Will, were not executors so that their legal guardian was not entitled, as the learned Judge assumed was the case, to be appointed administrator during the period of their minority. Some question has arisen during the course of the hearing and certain arguments have been placed before us as to what is the exact meaning of the words "shall be fit for the work." It is contended on the one hand that these words mean not only that the person there referred to shall be under no legal disability such as that mentioned in section 8 of the Probate and Administration Act but that they shall be persons who have shown a particular aptitude for the class of work which is required from an executor and that in any case as they are not fit under the provisions of section 8 of the Probate and Administration Act they are, therefore, not persons who are named in the Will as executors. On the other hand it is contended that the words "who shall be fit" simply mean that they shall not be excluded by reason of minority or unsoundness of mind as provided in section 8. If the first contention be accepted, viz., that although they are of age and of sound mind, they must nevertheless be persons who have disclosed some particular aptitude for this class of work, then the appointment is void for vagueness and uncertainty and if that were the proper construction, I should be inclined to agree that the appointment was void on the ground that it is too uncertain and too vague as it is a matter of considerable difficulty for anybody to say which, if any, of the persons otherwise qualified was fit for the particular class of work. I think, however, speaking for myself, that the words used in that clause of the Will merely mean that the person to be appointed executor should be a person who was suffering under no legal disability such as that referred to in section 8 of the Probate and Administration Act.

That, however, does not solve the whole of the question to be considered in this case, because even taking the narrower construction of the words it is quite clear that neither Lakhan Lal nor Sita Ram were persons who came within the description in the Will and, therefore, it cannot be said that there was any appointment of them as executors after the death of their father Mannu Lal. The result is that, in my opinion, the learned Judge was wrong in appointing the mother of the two minors as administrator on the ground that she was the mother of the executors appointed under the Will. There were in fact in the circumstances no executors appointed under the Will after the death of Mannu Lal, at all events until either Lakhan or Sita Ram attain their majority, so that until that time arrives there will be a period during which there are no executors appointed under the Will.

That, however, does not dispose of the whole question, because although it may be true that the learned Judge was wrong in appointing Manrakhan Kuer administrator on the ground that she was the guardian of the executors, he may nevertheless have been justified in appointing her as administrator on other grounds, and the respondents contend in this case that they can support the learned Judge's decision upon the ground that for other reasons Manrakhan Kuer was in the circumstances the proper person to be appointed administrator and not Manki Kuer, the appellant. Two courses are open to us in such circumstances. We might either send the case back to the learned District Judge for him to consider the question of who is the proper person to be appointed administrator, or, as the whole of the evidence is before us which would enable the Court to determine this questior, we may ourselves go into it and decide it. After intimating to the learned Vakil who appeared for the appellant and the learned Counsel who appeared for the respondents that we were disposed to deal with the question ourselves to save the time and expense of remanding it to the District Judge, we invited them to address themselves to us upon this question which they did, and after hearing arguments upon it I have come to the conclusion that the order of the learned District Judge was justified, if not upon the ground which he gave at all events upon other grounds, and that his order ought not to be reversed. The reason why I arrive at this decision is that as between the claims of Manki Kuer, the widow of the testator, and Manrakhan Kuer, the mother of the two minors, it seems to me that the provisions of the Probate and Administration Act point rather to the claim of the latter as being that which we ought to recognise. Although Lakhan and Sita Ram are not in fact under the terms of the Will appointed executors, they have a very considerable interest as reversionary legatees. Manki Kuer, on the other hand, has under the Will a life-interest in the income of half the residue after making provision for certain religious endowments, but this interest ceases if she should re-marry. The other two ladies Golabo Kuer, the daughter of the testator, and Matukni, his granddaughter, also have a life-interest in equal shares in the income of the other half. Under section 19 of the Probate and Administration Act, which applies to a case where an executor has not been appointed or when an executor appointed has died, which is the case here, a universal or risiduary legatee may be admitted to prove the Will, and Letters of Administration with the Will annexed may be granted to him of the whole estate, or of so much thereof as may be unadministered. It is true that in the present case although Lakhan and Sita Ram are reversionary legatees, they cannot claim themselves to be administrators because they are not of age, but in a few years time that disability will have disappeared and it seems to me more fitting and proper that in the meantime their mother Manrakhan Kuer should be appointed administrator during their minority. Another reason which induces me to this conclusion is, as the learned Judge points out in his judgment, that Manki Kuer had already been removed from the position of next friend of the minors because it was found that she had a conflict of interest. In these circumstances I think that the order made by the learned District Judge ought to stand for the reasons I have given and that this appeal should be dismissed. In the result the order made by the learned Judge in the last paragraph of his judgment will be modified to this extent that the words "executors of the Will of Nathuni Sahu deceased limited until one of them attain majority" will be struck out.

In the particular circumstances of the case we think that both parties should pay their own costs of the appeal.

COUTTS, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 1729, 1849, 1850 AND 1851 OF 1917.

March 31, 1919.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, Kt.

ANWAR BEWA, WIDOW OF BAZAR SHEIKH CHOUKIDAR, AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SURENDRA NATH RAHUT AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

*Landlord and tenant—Under-*raiyat, status of—Lands held as korfa chasi or korfa raiyati—Appeal, second—Point involving question of fact not raised at trial, whether can be taken in second appeal.

Where in a kabuliyat the holdings are described as korfa chasi and korfa raiyati and the predecessors-in-interest of the holders under the kabuliyat had portions at least of the lands comprised in khas cultivation, the status of the holders is that of under-raiyats. [p. 845, col. 1.]

A point which ought to be, but is not, taken in the trial Court and in respect of which no direct evidence is given cannot be taken in second appeal, especially if it involves a question of fact. [p. 845, col. 2.]

Appeals against the decrees of the District Judge, Rungpur, dated the 7th of May 1917, reversing that of the Munsif, 2nd Court at Gaibandha, dated the 17th of April 1916.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Atul Chandra Gupta, for the Appellants.—The appeals arise out of four suits for ejectment after notice under section 49 (a) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The defence was that the defendants had been holding over for 3 years. The first Court dismissed the suits. The Court of Appeal below decreed them. The learned Judge could not reverse the judgment of the Munsif without displacing the findings which are in my favour. A korfa raiyat does not necessarily mean an under-raiyat. Refers to Second Appeal No. 1557 of 1915 [Emaduddin Chowdhury v. Danesh Mamud (1)] decided by Fletcher and Richardson, JJ. The case should go back for a finding on the point as to what is the status of the defendants and, secondly, on the learned Munsif's findings in my favour. Refers to Dougal v. McCarthy (2).

Babu Surendra Chandra Sen, for the Respondents.—The question is whether the plaintiff is a raiyat and the defendant under-raiyat. Ryots generally take lands for purposes of cultivation. Korfa means under

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 240.

(2) (1893) 1 Q. B. 736; 62 L. J. Q. B. 462; 4 R. 402; 68 L. T. 699; 41 W. R. 484; 57 J. P. 597.

and chasi, cultivator. The lower Appellate Court's finding is a conclusive finding of fact. As regards the question of holding over, the mere fact of the landlord's demanding rent and the tenant's not paying it does not create the relationship of landlord and tenant. The parties should be restricted to their pleadings. The point is now for the first time urged.

Babu Atul Chandra Gupta replied in brief.

JUDGMENT.—All the four appeals were heard together by the District Judge. They arose out of four suits for ejectment. The defence was that the plaintiffs were tenure-holders and the defendants were raiyats and were, therefore, not liable to ejectment. The learned Munsif found this point in favour of the defence and dismissed the suits. The learned District Judge has held that the defendants were not raiyats but that they were under raiyats. He based his judgment upon the documents filed by the plaintiffs, including Kabuliats which had been executed by the defendants or their predecessors in respect of the tenancies. In all these Kabuliats the holdings are described as korfa chasi or korfa raiyati. Having regard to that and also having regard to the fact that the original holders of the jotes had at least portions of the land comprised therein in khas cultivation, he held that the defendants were under-raiyats.

Reliance has been placed on an unreported judgment of this Court of Fletcher and Richardson, JJ., in Second Appeal No. 1557 of 1915 [Emaduddin Chowdhury v. Danesh Mamud (1)], in which the learned Judges say that an under-raiyat may mean a raiyat under a tenure-holder. But, I think, having regard to the facts set out by the learned District Judge he was right in coming to the conclusion that the defendants were under-raiyats.

A further point has been raised before me by the learned Vakil appearing for the appellants that the Munsif found that the plaintiff's gomasta admitted that he had been demanding rent from the defendants in these cases after the expiration of the term of the Kabuliat for every year. This he construes as an express consent to the defendants holding over after the expiry of the term of the lease, involving waiver of the forfeiture clause in the Kabuliats, granting them to be otherwise valid and operative. The learned Munsif also said that continuous demand of rent after the expiration of the terms surely indicates an intention to treat the defendants as tenants and the leases as subsisting. The learned Vakil contends that that being so, the defendants were entitled to notice under section 43 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The difficulty about this matter to my mind is this that there is no indication of any such case in the written statement filed by the defendants. There is nothing to suggest in the written statement that they ought in any event to be held as tenants holding over, having regard to the fact that rent was demanded from them after the expiration of the term of the lease. No issue was raised specifically about this, although there is a general issue, "are they liable to ejectment?" It is not competent for the defendants now to take the point which involves a question of fact which was not before the trying Court and upon which no direct evidence was given, a point merely based upon a statement made by a witness under cross-examination. The point also does not seem to have been taken before the learned District Judge and is clearly an afterthought.

I am unable to allow these appeals and must dismiss them with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 203 OF 1919.

September 18, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Findlay, A. J. C.

RAMKRISHNA—DEFENDANT No. 2—APPLICANT

versus

NARAIN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT No. 1—NON-APPLICANTS.

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 81, decree under—Appeal—Valuation—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2 (2), 102, O. IX, r. 8—Suit for rent of malik makbuza field—Amount less than Rs. 500—Appeal, second, whether lies—Decree passed on "admission", meaning of—Appeal, whether lies—Jurisdiction—Court, whether can pass decree against party against whom plaintiff does not seek decree.

RAMKRISHNA v. NARAIN.

The criterion for determining whether an appeal lies from a decree under section 81 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act is the nature of the suit as originally framed, and not the form it may subsequently assume. [p. 847, col. 1.]

Lakshmandas v. Anna, 32 B. 356, followed.

Although a suit for rent due by a tenant of malik makbuza fields is not triable by a Small Cause Court, it is nonetheless one of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and unless the subject-matter involved in the suit exceeds Rs. 500 in value, there is no second appeal from a decree in such a suit. [p. 847, col. 1.]

The word "decree" in Order IX, rule 8 of the Civil Procedure Code, is governed by the definition thereof given in section 2 (2) of the Code: a decree, therefore, passed upon the admission of the defendant is appealable by the person aggrieved thereby. [p. 847, col. 2.]

A Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree against a person against whom the plaintiff does not seek one, and who is joined as a defendant on his own application. [p. 848, col. 1.]

The position of a person who is made a defendant on his own application and that of a person who is so made without any such application are very different, in that the former has to make out a prima facie case before the plaintiff can be asked to meet it. [p. 848, col. 2.]

Revision of the judgment of the Additional District Judge, Nagpur, in Civil Appeal No. 87 of 1917, decided on the 29th October 1917.

Messrs. M. B. Khinkede and M. R. Bobde, for the Applicant.

Messrs. A. Bhagwant and V. V. Ohitale, for the Non-Applicants.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of the case leading to this second appeal are somewhat peculiar. The plaintiff-respondent Narayan sued the other respondent Laxmibai for Rs. 101-9-6, being arrears of rent due on account of her tenancy of 2 malik makbuza fields. In the course of the suit Ramkrishna, the present appellant who is alleged to be the adopted son of Laxmibai, applied to be made a party on the ground that the fields are recorded in his name at the settlement and that he has paid the rent therefor to the plaintiff. The first Court on the 6th July 1917, on which date the plaintiff was absent, passed an order to the effect that Ramkrishna was a necessary party to the suit and constituted him one accordingly. Its grounds for doing so were that in the jamabandi as well as in the settlement Parcha Ramkrishna's name was shown; it accordingly on the admissions of the two defendants passed a decree against them both for Rs. 82; interest and costs were disallowed in view of their having proved that the plaintiff had on several occasions refused to accept revenue money orders sent to him by Ramkrishna. The plaintiff came up on appeal to the Court of the Additional District Judge and asked that Ramkrishna's name should be struck off from the decree, and that Court upheld the appeal holding that the Additional Munsif had no power to pass a decree against Ramkrishna against the wishes of the plaintiff. The latter defendant has now come up on appeal, urging that his name should be restored in the decree. A preliminary objection has, however, been raised on behalf of the respondent to the effect that no appeal lies in the present case under section 81 of the C. P. Tenancy Act. It is held that the Additional District Judge, unlike the Additional Munsif, being in the exercise of powers no less than those of Assistant Commissioner of the First Class as defined in the C. P. Civil Courts Act, 1885, no appeal lay in view of the fact that no question of title or interest in the land was involved. On behalf of the appellant it has been urged that a question of title was involved, inasmuch as the present plaintiff-respondent in his appeal to the Court of the Additional District Judge urged in terms that Ramkrishna, the present appellant, was not a tenant of the land. The appellant in short takes up the position that the question of title was at the basis of the decree, his position being that he has an interest in the land: there must, therefore, be of necessity a decree against him. As a matter of fact in the present case the subject-matter of the suit was originally a sum above one hundred, and it seems to me that although the amount decreed by the lower Appellate Court as well as by the first Court was an amount less than one hundred, for the purposes of section 81 we must take the subject-matter of the suit to be that stated in the plaint. From this point of view, therefore, the case is not covered by section 81, C. P. Tenancy Act, and so far as that provision goes, it would not bar the appeal in the present case. As, however, a connected case, Second Appeal No. 158 of 1919 in which the subject-matter of the suit is admittedly under rupees one hundred, stands or falls with the decision in the present case also, it is necessary to determine the question also as to whether, even if the subject-matter of the present appeal had been below Rs. 100, in that event this second appeal would have been barred under condition (b) in the section of the Tenancy Act quoted. In my opinion it cannot be said that the lower Appellate Court has in the present case determined any question of title. It has not by implication even confirmed either the position of the plaintiff or of the defendants on the alleged question of title. What it has done is to decide a purely legal point to the effect that the defendant Ramkrishna could not be included in the decree against the wishes of the plaintiff. Its decision in short amounts to a refusal to adjudicate on the question of title arising between Ramkrishna and the plaintiff. From this point of view, therefore, the present appeal would have been barred under section 81 had it not been for the fact that the subject matter of the suit exceeded one hundred. I may add that in determining whether a second appeal lies in such a suit as the present the criterion should be the nature of the suit as originally framed and not the form it may subsequently assume: Lakshmandas v. Anna (1).

I am of opinion, however, that in any event under section 102 of the Civil Procedure Code no second appeal lay in the present case. Although not triable by a Court of Small Causes a suit like the present for the recovery of rent was nonetheless one of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. In this connection I am referred to the decision of the Full Bench of the Madras High Court in Soundaram Ayyar v. Sennia Naicken (2). As pointed out therein, to take the opposite view would lead to a somewhat anomalous position, for it is hardly conceivable that the Legislature, when enacting the Civil Procedure Code, could have regarded rent suits of below Rs. 500 as being suitable for second appeal and yet by enacting Article 8 of the 2nd Schedule to the Small Cause Courts Act could have regarded such suits as being suitable under notification of the Local Government for trial by a Court of Small Causes, in which case not even a first appeal would lie as regards them. For these reasons I think that from that point of view the present second appeal was barred. It is, however, open to this Court to allow the second appeal to be treated as an application for revision and in view of the nature of the legal question involved in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, I sanction this course and am prepared to hear the parties on the merits of the case.

I have already set out the facts leading to this application in my order, dated the 5th instant, in Second Appeal No. 71 of 1918. In that order I gave permission for the second appeal to be treated as one for revision. It now remains to dispose of the grounds urged therein. The first contention which the Pleader for the applicant has put forward is that having regard to the words "shall pass a decree against the defendant upon such admission" in Order IX, rule 8, of the Civil Procedure Code and to the definition of 'decree' in section 2 (2) idem, there could not be said to have been a formal adjudication determining the rights of the parties against which an appeal could have lain to the lower Appellate Court: I am unable to accept this contention. There is no reason to suppose that the word 'decree' in Order IX, rule 8, is not governed by the definition thereof referred to and an appeal certainly lay.

As regards the second contention that the plaintiff was not aggrieved by the decree but by the procedure adopted in his absence, this also seems to me to be quite untenable. The plaintiff, it was true, was absent on the date on which the order admitting Ramkrishna was passed, but his joinder as a defendant had been strongly opposed by the plaintiff on the ground that he was not a necessary party to the suit and in these circumstances the plaintiff is most certainly aggrieved by the decree which has been granted to him. The third point urged is that in any case the lower Court, having regard to the terms of Order IX, rule 8, had no alternative but to pass the decree it did against Ramkrishna, once he had admitted the claim. It is urged in short that the lower Appellate Court had no power to go into the merits and that the trial Court had no alternative but to pass the decree. I do not think the contention of the applicant can be upheld in the present connection. The suit was one for money for arrears of rent and the plaintiff claimed no rights against the defendant Ramkrishna. Order IX, rule 8, clearly has in view the case of a defendant admitting the claim made against him by the plaintiff and I concur with the Judge of the lower Appellate Court in thinking that the Court had no power to pass a decree against Ramkrishna when the plaintiff sought no such decree. This finding is one which also squares with the equities of the case, for it would be a most undesirable and inequitable circumstance if a third party like Ramkrishna could come in in a simple suit for rent and seek to have a question of title determined in the manner the Court of first instance adopted in the present case. I may add that the position of a person who is made a defendant on his application and that of a person who is so made without any such application of his are very different. The former has to make out a prima facie case before the plaintiff can be asked to meet it, and that was the position in the present case. It seems to me doubtful whether the Court of first instance had viewed the case sufficiently from this aspect, but in view of my findings on the grounds of revision which have been urged on behalf of the applicant it is unnecessary to elaborate this point. These findings govern the application for revision which is dismissed. The applicant must bear the non applicant's costs. Pleader's fees to be Rs. 30.

(1) 32 B. 356.

(2) 23 M. 547; 10 M. L. J. 329; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 785.

Petition dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 126 OF 1920.

May 29, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Shadi Lal, Chief Justice.

FAQIR CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

DULLAH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Courts Act (IX of 1919), s. 44—Revision—Error of law, whether good ground for interference.

An error of law does not amount to a material irregularity and is not a good ground for interference in revision.

Where upon an examination of all the relevant facts and the law bearing upon the subject a suit was dismissed as time-barred:

Held, that the High Court could not interfere in revision simply on the ground that the Court below had come to a wrong conclusion.

Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh, 11 C. 6; 11 I. A. 237; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 559; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 83; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760, followed.

Petition, under section 44 of Act IX of 1919, for revision of the decree of the District Judge, Attock at Campbellpore, dated the 17th October 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Attock, dated the 20th June 1919.

Mr. Bhagat Ram Puri, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Ghulam Rasul, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The learned District Judge has, upon an examination of all the relevant facts and the law bearing upon the subject, reached the conclusion that the suit brought by the petitioners was barred by time. The view taken by him may be erroneous, but as pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (1), the Court of revision cannot interfere simply on the ground that the lower Court, which had jurisdiction to hear the case, has come to a wrong conclusion. After hearing the learned Counsel for the petitioners I am of opinion that the contention raised by him amounts simply to this, that the District Judge has erred in law in holding that the suit was barred by time. As observed above, an error of law does not amount to a material irregularity.

I must, therefore, dismiss the application for revision with costs.

Application dismissed.

(1) 11 C. 6; 11 I. A. 287; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 559; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 83; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPLICATION FOR ADMISSION OF CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 15 OF 1920.

February 18, 1920.

Present :—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

HATHIM MONDAL—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860, s. 411—Receiving stolen property—Trial by Jury—Charge to Jury—Judge, duty of—Jury, functions of—Burden of proof.

Where a prisoner is charged with receiving stolen property, when the prosecution has proved the possession by the prisoner and that the goods had been recently stolen, the Jury may be told that they may, not that they must, in the absence of any reasonable explanation, find the prisoner guilty. But if an explanation is given which may be true, it is for the Jury to say on the whole evidence whether the accused is guilty or not, that is to say, if the Jury think that the explanation may reasonably be true though they are not convinced that it is true, the prisoner is entitled to an acquittal, because the Crown has not discharged the onus of proof imposed upon it of satisfying the Jury beyond reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt. That onus never changes; it always rests on the prosecution. [p. 850, col. 1.]

In a prosecution under section 411 of the Penal Code it is the duty of the Judge in delivering his charge to the Jury to point out that the possession of the stolen goods must be possession soon after the theft or that the stolen goods must have been "recently" stolen. [p. 849, col. 2.]

Application for admission of appeal against the order of the Officiating Sessions Judge, Jessore, dated the 23rd December 1919.

Babu Frolodh Chandra Ray, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.

SANDERSON, C. J.—In this case we do not admit the appeal. The charge against the accused was under section 411, Indian Penal Code, viz., dishonestly receiving stolen property, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen property.

The only question which had any real importance in this case was the identity of the person who was in possession of the bundle, which contained the stolen articles at Jessore Station on the 1st of October last year: and, there is no misdirection, as far as I can see, in the learned Judge's charge to the Jury in that respect. The Jury came to the conclusion that the accused person was the individual who was in possession of the bundle containing the stolen articles on the 1st of October, the burglaries having been committed between the 28th of September and the 1st of October. Therefore, it may be said that the accused was in possession of recently stolen articles. The Jury found that the accused person was in possession of them, and he offered no explanation of such possession. Consequently, we see no reason to admit this appeal.

But there is a passage in the learned Judge's charge which in our judgment is not a correct direction: and, although it is immaterial to this case, we think it is desirable to draw attention to the misdirection, in order that it may not be repeated on subsequent occasions. The learned Judge says this: "It is the business of the prosecution to prove its case entirely; and no inference should be made against an accused because he examines no witnesses, and does not attempt to explain the evidence against him. But the matter is different in a case under section 411, Indian Penal Code. When it is established that an accused is found in possession of stolen property, it is his business to show that he came by it honestly, and that he did not know that it was stolen property. In the present case the accused denies his possession altogether: he, therefore, does not make any attempt to show that he was in honest possession of the property." Therefore, (unless "there appears strong reason to the contrary) if the Jury find that the accused was in possession of the property and that the property was stolen, they should presume that the possession of accused was dishonest and that he had reason to believe that the property was stolen." In our judgment, that is not a correct direction. In the first place it is not pointed out that the possession of stolen goods referred to must be possession soon after the theft, or that the stolen goods must have been "recently" stolen. Further, the charge is not in our judgment sufficient in other respects. I think the best way of dealing with it is to draw attention to a judgment of the Lord Chief Justice of England in the case of R. v. Isaac Schama and Jacob Abramovitch (1), and as that book may not be available in all Courts, I propose to read what the

(1) (1914, 11 Cr. App. R. 45 at p. 49; 84 L. J. K. B. 396; 112 L. T. 480; 79 J. P. 184; 59 S. J. 288; 31 T. L. R. 88.

Lord Chief Justice said. Having stated the facts, he said: "It is clear that on those facts, and on a proper direction, there was sufficient evidence on which the Jury, if so minded, could convict the appellants. It is admitted by Counsel for both appellants that there was evidence to go to the Jury. The case really resolves itself into one question, whether the Judge gave a proper direction to the Jury before they arrived at their decision. Cases of this kind have come frequently before this Court complaining of language used by the Judge at the trial in pointing out the principle of law for the guidance of the Jury. It is essential in cases of this character that there should be a careful and proper direction. Where the prisoner is charged with receiving recently stolen property, when the prosecution has proved the possession by the prisoner, and that the goods had been recently stolen, the Jury may be told that they may, not that they must, in the absence of any reasonable explanation, find the prisoner guilty. But if an explanation is given which may be true, it is for the Jury to say on the whole evidence whether the accused is guilty or not; that is to say, if the Jury think that the explanation may reasonably be true, though they are not convinced that it is true, the prisoner is entitled to an acquittal, because the Crown has not discharged the onus of proof imposed upon it of satisfying the Jury beyond reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt. That onus never changes; it always rests on the prosecution. That is the law; the Court is not pronouncing new law, but is merely re stating it, and it is hoped that this restatement may be of assistance to those who preside at the trial of such cases." I concur in the Lord Chief Justice's hope that this statement may be of assistance to those who preside at the trial of such cases.

The application for admission of this appeal must be rejected for the reasons that I have already mentioned.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

Application dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1449 OF 1919.

December 17, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway.

SANDHI—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

KHEM CHAND AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859), ss. 2, 3—Loan disguised as advance—Breach of contract—Workman, whether liable.

However carefully it may be sought to disguise the fact that an advance is really a loan, the Workman's Breach of Contract Act would not apply to such a case [p. 851, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Muhammad Din, 22 Ind. Cas. 74?; 23 P. R. 1913 Cr.; 96 P. L. R. 1914; 15 Cr. L. J. 166, followed.

S. received Rs. 30 from the firm of K. in advance and agreed to work in their factory. Rs. 2 were to be deducted from his monthly wages to make up the money received in advance. Not having fulfilled the terms of the agreement, he was prosecuted under Act XIII of 1859:

Held, that the advance was really a loan and, therefore, the Act did not apply. [p. 851, col. 1.]

Case reported by the District Magistrate, Jullundur, with his No. 3820, dated the 30th November 1919.

FACTS.—That one Sandhi Lohar agreed with the firm of Khem Chand-Bhola Nath to work at the firm and received Rs. 30 in advance and agreed to do the Balti work in the factory and that Rs. 2 will be deducted from his monthly wages to make up the money received in advance, and in case of non compliance the accused agreed to be punished under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859). As the accused has not fulfilled the terms of the agreement, hence he was prosecuted under section 2 of Act XIII of 1859. The full particulars are given in the body of the lower Court's judgment.

The accused, on conviction by Malik Abdul Haq exercising the powers of a Magistrate of the 1st Class in the Jullundur District, was sentenced by order, dated the 12th August 1919, under section 2, Act XIII of 1859, to go to Khem Chand-Bhola Nath's factory and work there till the obligations are over. Failing he shall incur the penalty of section 3 of the Act XIII of 1859.

GROUNDS.—The money advanced was certainly a loan, not an advance on account of work to be performed. Also this Act cannot be meant to be used to compel a man to work in a factory 4 years after he left work. The Act ought to be used at once, if at all.

I recommend cancellation of the lower Court's order.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Badur ud Din Kureshi, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—After a careful consideration of the contract in this case and the arguments of Counsel for the parties, I agree with the learned District Magistrate that the order passed by the Magistrate under Act XIII of 1859 is not maintainable.

No doubt the contract recites that the advance was made for work to be done but the re-payment was not to be made out of the wages. In this the Magistrate has erred, as has been pointed out by Mr. Kureshi.

As laid down in Emperor v. Muhammad Din (1), however carefully it may be sought to disguise the fact that an advance is really a loan, the Act does not apply. See also Ganeshi Lal v. Shugan Chand (2).

I accordingly set aside the order of the Magistrate, dated 12th August 1919.

Order set aside.

(1) 22 Ind. Cas. 742; 23 P. R. 1913 Cr.; 96 P. L. R. 1914; 15 Cr. L. J. 166.

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 914; 9 P. R. 1910 Cr.; 12 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.; 11 Cr. L J. 329.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCES Nos. 165, 166 AND 167 OF 1919.

December 18, 1919.

Present:—Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, KT., Mr. Justice Newbould and Justice Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, KT.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

AKUB ALI MAZUMDAR AND OTHERS—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 412, 429, 439—Petroleum Act (VIII of 1899), s. 15 (a)—Guilty, plea of—Written statement by accused, value and effect of—Procedure.

Accused was charged with having in his possession a quantity of kerosine oil without a license or pass: he pleaded guilty and filed a written statement in which he raised the defence that he did not trade in kerosine oil, that the oil belonged to a firm which had a transport license, and that under that license he had been employed to convey the oil from the Railway station to the firm's godown:

Held, that the plea of guilty must be taken in connection with the written statement, that the plea was really not a plea of guilty and was of no value, and that it was incumbent on the Magistrate to try the case on the merits. [p. 853, col. 1.]

Per Newbould, J.—The principle of section 412 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should ordinarily be applied in cases in which the High Court is asked to exercise its revisional powers. [p. 851, col. 2.]

Where a Court of revision holds the conviction of an accused person to be bad on the ground that a plea of guilty should not have been recorded, it should order a retrial of the accused. [p. 852, col. 1.]

Queen v. Mittun, 11 W. R. 53 Cr., followed.

Criminal references by the Sessions Judge, Tipperah, dated the 18th November 1919, against an order of the Sub-Divisional Officer, Chandpur, dated the 12th August 1919, convicting the accused under section 15 (a) of the Petroleum Act.

JUDGMENT.

NEWBOULD, J.—Each of these three accused was separately tried on a charge of keeping more than 300 tins of kerosine oil in his boat without a license or pass, an offence punishable under section 15 (a) of Act VIII of 1899. Each accused pleaded guilty and filed a written statement. The Magistrate after recording the plea of guilty adjourned the cases. At the next hearing after examining one Court witness in each case, he convicted each accused and sentenced them to pay a fine of Rs. 10 each.

The learned Sessions Judge of Tipperah has referred these cases with a recommendation that the convictions and sentences be set aside, on the ground that the accused merely carried the kerosine tins under the orders of the sub-agent of Messrs. Bullock Brothers and Company who had a general license for the transport of kerosine oil.

Differing with regret from my learned brother I would hold that we should not interfere in this case There can be no doubt that the principle of section 412, Criminal Procedure Code, should ordinarily be applied in cases in which we are asked to exercise our revisional powers. This section provides that where a person has pleaded guilty and has been convicted on such plea, there shall be no appeal except as to the extent or legality of the sentence. I agree with the remarks of Sargent, J., in Empress v. Jafar M. Talab (1), and would hold that by their pleas of guilty the accused waived their right to question the legality of their convictions. The case of Queen v. Mittun (2) seems to me distingulishable, on the ground that it was held in that case that the accused never intended to plead guilty and the plea should not have been recorded. In the present case it has not been alleged by the accused in their petitions to the Sessions Judge that they did not intend to plead guilty. In none of the grounds taken it is suggested that the plea was wrongly recorded. As I read their written statements, they were not inconsistent with the pleas of guilty but were filed in order to set out extenuating circumstances that might mitigate the sentences.

(1) 5 B. 85; 5 Ind. Jur. 423; 3 Ind Dec. (N. s.) 55,

Further if the convictions be held to be bad on the ground that the pleas of guilty should not have been recorded, I think a retrial should be ordered as was done in the case of Queen v. Mittun (2). As the accused were convicted on their plea of guilty, the question has not been investigated whether the license held by Bullock Brothers and Company was sufficient to cover possession by the accused of an excess amcunt of kerosine oil.

As my learned brother and I are divided in opinion, the case will be submitted to the Hon'ble the Chief Justice in order that it may be laid before another Judge of the Court under section 429 read with the concluding portion of clause (1) of section 439, Criminal Procedure Code.

SHAMSUL HUDA, J.—The facts of the case are set out in the letter of reference submitted by the learned Sessions Judge to this Court. On the point of law I agree with him. I do not think it makes any difference that the accused pleaded guilty to the charge. The plea of guilty was accompanied with a statement in writing filed by the accused. In that statement the accused said that they worked for Bullock Bros. who had a license, that the accused were illiterate persons and were not aware that a pass was necessary and that in future they would take out a pass. The plea of guilty cannot be dissociated from the statement that accompanied it and taking that statement into consideration, it seems to me that the plea was based on a mistake of law and should not have been accepted : Queen v. Mittun (2).

I regret I am unable to agree with my learned brother in holding that we should refuse to interfere with the conviction and sentence in this case in the exercise of our revisional jurisdiction because a person who is convicted on his own plea cannot appeal against the conviction.

CHAUDHURI, J.—These three cases have been referred to me under section 429, Criminal Procedure Code.

The three accused were separately summarily tried for having kept more than 300 tins of kerosine oil, each in his own boat, without a license or pass, which is an offence punishable under section 15 (a) of Act VIII of 1899. The record shows that they pleaded guilty and filed written statements. The trying Magistrate examined one Hemanta Kumar Mukherjee, Station Master, on the point as to who took delivery of the oil at the railway station and he also appears to have examined the accused. There is no record of what the accused were asked and what they said other than a note in each case. He says "the oil belonged to Khamesh Chandra Rakkhit, sub-agent of Messrs. Bullock Bros. and Company, Limited." Each written statement is to the following effect: "I work under Bullock Bros. They have a license. I do not know that a pass has to be taken under the rules. I am an ignorant man. In future I shall work after taking a pass. It is prayed that the Court will show kindness in doing justice. I have no objection to this Court trying me." It further appears from the record in Jalaladdi Chowkidar's case that a notice was issued on him on the 16th July 1919 to show cause on the 25th why he was not to be prosecuted under section 15 (a) of the Petroleum Act (Act VIII of 1899) "for transporting without license about 400 tins of kerosine oil in his boat from the Hazigunge Railway station to the Bazar." He showed cause and filed a petition on the 25th July to the effect he did not trade in kerosine oil : that he only carried the oil from the railway station to the Bazar in the dry season in gharries and in the rainy season in boats: that he used to take kerosine oil belonging to Bullock Bros. under orders of their officers to their godown: that he had done so for a considerable time: that Bullock Bros. had a transport license from Government and under that license he had been employed to take the oil from the railway station to the godown: that it was, therefore, not necessary for him to take any license.

(2) 11 W. R. 53 Cr.

All the accused clearly raised the same defence. The plea of guilty as recorded must be taken in connection with their written statements. I am not prepared to hold that there was really a plea of guilty. All they meant to admit was that they had not a license or pass, and that the oil was in their boat. The written statements make it perfectly clear that they were relying on the transport license of Bullock Bros. as exonerating them. There is also on the record a letter from Bullock Bros. which was filed with Jalaluddi's petition, that they hold a general transport license for the transport of oil throughout India and that the oil is under their control until it leaves the hands of their sub agents. It also said that the oil in these cases was being conveyed to their sub agent's godown and was covered by their license.

The plea of guilty in these cases to my mind is of no value and it was incumbent on the Magistrate to try them on their merits. He was dealing with illiterate men and ought to have been very careful. He has clearly failed to consider the defence raised in the written statements. The convictions and sentences ought, therefore, to be and are set aside. The fines, if paid, are to be refunded.

The question whether the license held by Bullock Bros. was sufficient to cover possession by the accused of an excess amount of kerosine oil has not been investigated. It is, therefore, left open to the Magistrate to proceed with a retrial if he thinks it necessary. I find it noted that the trying Magistrate wanted to see the general transport license of Bullock Bros. Whether he saw it or not does not appear. There can be no difficulty in getting it from them. It should be asked to be produced and if found to cover the possession of the accused, the cases ought not to be proceeded with.

Convictions set aside.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL CRIMINAL REVISIONS NOS. 2 AND 3 OF 1920.

April 15, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

BIRAN RAI AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195, 476—Order under s. 476—Judicial proceeding, existence of, whether necessary—Court sanctioning prosecution under s. 195—Sanction subsequently altered to order under s. 476, legality of—Time limit for passing such order.

For the purposes of section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is not necessary that judicial proceedings should be in existence before an order under that section is made; all that is required is that the order should be passed with respect to an offence which may have been committed before the Court or brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding. [p. 854, col. 2.]

Where a Court sanctions a prosecution under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, and is subsequently directed by the Appellate Court to which it is subordinate to draw up a proceeding under section 476 as being more appropriate, a compliance with such a direction is not fatal to the proceedings, as the granting of sanction to prosecute at an earlier stage of the proceedings was present in the mind of the Court. [p. 854, col. 2; p. 855, col. 1.]

Although there is no time limit fixed for the making of an order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, yet where there has been undue delay, the High Court is entitled to set aside the order and arrest further proceedings. [p. 856, col. 1.]

Civil criminal revisions against the order, dated the 2nd March 1920, of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad, directing the prosecution of the petitioners under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, for an offence under section 186, Indian Penal Code.

Messrs. S. K. Banerji and A. B. Mukherji, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Manohar Lal (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application against an order passed by the Subordinate

Judge of Shahabad under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, directing the petitioners to appear before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Arrah for trial for an offence under section 186, Indian Penal Code.

The facts of the case may be shortly stated as follows:

There was an execution proceeding in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, in the course of which an application was filed by the decree holder under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, for the prosecution of the petitioners under section 186, Indian Penal Code.

The learned Subordinate Judge granted the application of the decree-holder and sanctioned their prosecution under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code.

The petitioners thereupon applied to the learned District Judge against the order of the Subordinate Judge granting sanction. The learned District Judge on the 22nd December 1919 passed an order, portions of which relevant to the point that I have to consider may be quoted.

He says: "I think that a prima facie case has been made out. I could not reasonably revoke the sanction which the learned Subordinate Judge has given. The application is rejected" Then later on he says—"It may be pointed out that a prosecution under section 186, Indian Penal Code, ought to be conducted by the Crown and not by any private party. It is manifest that if at any stage in the proceeding this case is to be withdrawn or abandoned, it should be withdrawn or abandoned by the Crown and not by the decree-holder. I think, therefore, that before criminal proceedings are actually instituted in this case, the Subordinate Judge should be moved to take action in the regular way under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code."

In pursuance of this order the decree-holder filed an application before the Subordinate Judge for a direction for the prosecution of the petitioners under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code.

The learned Subordinate Judge thereupon on the 2nd March 1920 drew up a proceeding directing the prosecution of the petitioners under section 186, Indian Penal Code, and in that proceeding he says—"And whereas under the direction of the District Judge this Court has been moved to take action under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, and being satisfied that there is a prima facie case against the said persons, I hereby under section 476 direct that the said persons accused in the case do appear before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Arrah for trial and the connected papers be sent to him for necessary action."

It is against this order that this Court has been moved, and the learned Vakil, appearing for the petitioners, has contended that there was no judicial proceeding pending before the Subordinate Judge at the time when he passed the order under section 476; and that, therefore, the order is without jurisdiction. In my opinion this contention has no force. It is not necessary that there should be in existence a judicial proceeding in the course of which an order under section 476 should be passed; all that is required by law is that the order should be passed with respect to the offence which may have been committed before it, or brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding; and that being so, in my opinion, this contention must fail. The offence under section 186, Indian Penal Code, was brought to the notice of the Subordinate Judge in course of the section 195 proceeding, which was a judicial proceeding. The necessity of a judicial proceeding pending, in the course of which an order under section 476 is passed, arises in exceptional cases, where, for instance, an officer, who heard the judicial proceeding, in the course of which the offence was brought to his notice, is succeeded by another officer—see the case of Ram Nigah Singh v. Emperor (1).

The second point urged by the learned Vakil, appearing for the petitioner, is that the Subordinate Judge did not pass the order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, suo motu, but he was simply carrying out the direction of the District Judge, when he directed the prosecution of the petitioners on the 2nd March 1920.

There can be no doubt that the idea of the prosecution of the petitioners was present in the mind of the learned Subordinate Judge at the time when he passed his order, because he had already passed an order under section 195 granting sanction for the prosecution of the petitioners at an earlier stage at the instance of the decree-holder. Apart from that, the proceeding itself shows that he was himself satisfied that an offence had been committed.

(1) 41 Ind. Cas. 1007; 1 P. L. W. 772; 18 Cr. L. J. 895; (1918) Pat. 64; 4 P. L. W. 141.

In my opinion, the learned District Judge should have himself passed an order under section 476; but I am inclined to follow the decision of Jwala Prasad, J., in the case of Awadh Behari Lal v. Emperor (2) where an order like the one I am considering was upheld.

The third ground urged is that the order under section 476 was passed by the Subordinate Judge after the lapse of the sanction under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, granted by him and as such the order was wrong and liable to be set aside; and reliance is placed for this contention on the decision of my brother Das, J, in the case of Lalji Tewari v. Emperor (3). With due respect to him I regret that I find myself wholly unable to agree, either with his reasonings or his decision on this point in that case. The learned Judge, and I say so again with the greatest respect to him, has ignored the cardinal difference between a sanction under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, and a direction for prosecution under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. He has introduced into section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, the provisions of section 195, clause (6), Criminal Procedure Code, for which there is no authority whatsoever. As was laid down by Sharfuddin, J, in Rajkumar Singh v. Emperor (4) section 476 is a self contained section and the reference made to section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, in section 476 is only for the purpose of avoiding the enumeration of the sections mentioned in section 195, Criminal Procedure Code. Even if this view be held to be too narrow and the words "any offence referred to in section 195" in section 476 be held to read "subject to the restrictions contained in clause 1, sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c) of section 195", yet they cannot, by any stretch of reasoning, be held to read "subject to the restrictions laid down in clause (6) of section 195."

I am confirmed in the view that I take of this matter by a reference to section 195, clause (6), itself. That clause in the first part points out the appellate authority to grant or revoke sanction. There is no authority for the suggestion, if made, that this part applies to an order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, as it is well established that the latter order is only revisable by the High Court. If this part of clause (6) does not apply to section 476, I fail to see why the second part which fixes the period during which a sanction under section 195 is to remain in force can be held to control an order under section 476. The cases reported as Nawal Singh v. Emperor (5), Emperor v. Tilak Pandey (6), Lakshmidas Lalji, In re (7) and Waman Dinkar Kelkar v. Emperor (8) also support the view that no time limit can be fixed when an order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, should be passed.

The last ground taken is the undue delay which has occurred in passing the order under section 476. The offence was alleged to have been committed in February 1919. The order under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, was passed by the Subordinate Judge on the 5th July 1919; the order of the District Judge in appeal under section 195, clause (6), was passed on the 22nd December. The Subordinate Judge passed the order under section 476 on the 2nd March 1920. There can be no doubt that this delay is unduly long. Whatever may be said with respect to the time taken up to the 22nd December 1919 when the District Judge disposed of the appeal, there is no explanation whatsoever for passing the order under section 476 about two and half a months after the District Judge's order. The learned Assistant Government Advocate has, however, referred to the decision of my learned brother Jwala Prasad, J., in Awadh Behari Lal v. Emperor (2)

(2) 50 Ind. Cas. 162; 20 Cr. L. J. 274.

(3) 54 Ind. Cas. 894; 5 P. L. J. 58; 1 P. L. T. 147; (1920) Pat. 125; 21 Cr. L. J. 190.

(4) 37 Ind. Cas. 487; 1 P. L. J. 298; 18 Cr. L. J. 135; 3 P. L. W. 33.

(5) 14 Ind. Cas. 766; 34 A 393; 9 A. L. J. 481; 13 Cr. L. J. 302.

(6) 29 Ind. Cas. 97; 37 A. 344; 13 A. L. J. 466; 16 Cr. L. J. 465.

(7) 32 B. 184; 10 Bom. L. R. 28; 7 Cr. L. J. 35; 3 M. L. T. 116.

(8) 51 Ind. Cas. 257; 43 B 300; 20 Bom. L. R. 998; 20 Cr. L. J. 433.

where it has been held that mere delay is not a ground for interference by the High Court.

On a fair reading of that judgment I think my learned brother made the observation referred to with reference to the facts of the case before him. I cannot induce myself to believe that he laid down any general proposition of law and by doing that he meant to differ from the observations of the learned Judges composing the Full Benches of the Calcutta and Madras High Courts in the cases of Shaikh Bahadur v. Erodatullah Mallick (9) and Rahimadulla Sahib v. Emperor (10) respectively, in which it was held that action under section 476 should be as far as possible prompt and expeditious.

In my opinion whether in a particular case there has been undue delay in making an order under section 476, is a question which must be decided on the facts of each case, and where undue delay has been established, the High Court is entitled to set aside the order and arrest further proceedings.

On the facts of the case before me I have come to the unhesitating conclusion that the petitioners have been prejudiced by the delay and will be further prejudiced in their defence if there be a trial of an offence alleged to have been committed by them over 14 months ago, when the responsibility of the delay in passing the order under section 476 of at least two months and a half cannot be fastened on their shoulders. The result, therefore, is that I set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge directing the prosecution of the petitioners under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, for an offence under section 186, Indian Penal Code.

This order will also govern Civil Criminal Revision No. 3 of 1920.

Orders set aside.

(9) 6 Ind. Cas. 801; 37 C. 642; 14 C. W. N. 799; 12 C. L. J. 45; 11 Cr. L. J. 407.

(10) 31 M. 140; 17 M. L. J. 581; 3 M. L. T. 79; 7 Cr. L. J. 54.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 75 OF 1920.

March 20, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh.

MAHBOOB—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 411—Receiving stolen property—Stolen property, value of—Evidence, nature of—Criminal trial—Procedure—Evidence for defence, method of recording—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 439—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

In a case in which a person is charged with receiving or being in possession of property alleged to have been stolen, an important factor is the value of the property and as to this the Court should insist on having direct evidence, as the accused is entitled to have some sworn testimony of value which he can cross-examine. [p. 857, col. 1.]

A Magistrate should record the evidence for the defence with the same amount of care and precision as that for the prosecution, as otherwise his opinion that the evidence is false is not easy to test. [p. 857, col. 2.]

In dealing with an application under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, the High Court has to see not merely whether it disagrees with the findings but whether there is something in the way in which the trial Court has looked at the law or in the method by which it has dealt with the evidence which makes it so doubtful whether the conviction is right that it would amount to a miscarriage of justice to allow it to stand. [p. 857, col. 1.]

Application for revision of an order passed by the Sessions Judge, Moradabad, upholding a conviction by a First Class Magistrate, Moradabad.

Mr. Sitol Prasad Ghosh, for Mr. Satya Chandra Mukerjee, for the Applicant.

Mr. Malcomson (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is a revision application from an order passed in appeal by the Sessions Judge of Moradabad, upholding a conviction by a First Class Magistrate. The charge was originally against two men, named Munir and Mahbub, for dishonestly receiving or being in possession of stolen property which they must have known to be stolen. The theft is clearly established and although it is not quite true to say that Munir was convicted of the theft, he was convicted of being in wrongful possession of the cattle so shortly after their loss as to raise a strong presumption that in fact he was a thief; though this has not been proved, yet for the purposes of this case it must be taken that he was either the thief or wrongfully came into possession of the animals well knowing that they had just been stolen. He has not appealed, and that fact and his conviction must necessarily form part of the case against his associate Mahbub. That is a risk every man runs who deals with other persons in the purchase of cattle whom he does not know to be absolutely honest.

This is not an appeal. It is an application in revision and, therefore, I have to see not merely whether I disagree with the findings, but whether there is something in the way in which the trial Court has looked at the law or in the method by which it has dealt with the evidence which makes it so doubtful whether the conviction is right that it would amount to a miscarriage of justice to allow it to stand.

Personally I always endeavour to look at the facts in applications in revision in this light rather than in the light of an ordinary appeal. There are two matters about this case to which Mr. Sital Prasad Ghosh on behalf of the applicant has rightly referred and which, I think, would have been enough to upset the conviction altogether if it were not for the other circumstances to which I am going to refer. These two matters are: (1) Both Courts have rightly attached great importance to the fact that these buffaloes were sold by the present applicant for Rs. 79 when their value was really Rs. 190. That is in such cases as this an almost certain test. A man in the ordinary way of business does not sell a thing at less than half price where there is an ordinary market in which he can get anything like the real value. The fallacy in this case is that there was no evidence in law to support a finding that the value of these baffaloes was Rs. 190 and I would warn the lower Courts, if they should happen to read this judgment, to insist in future in these rather difficult cases on having direct evidence of value. There is only a report. Really a report is a dignified name for that which is in truth a complaint by the owners who have lost their animals, and what a man says his own property is worth when he has lost it, and not when he is asking somebody to give him a price, does not always fit in with the real value. Nor does the estimated value always fit in with what a thing actually fetches in the market, so that to establish a value in this case of Rs. 120 in the case of one of the buffaloes, Rs. 50 in the other and Rs. 20 in the third, the accused were entitled in every case to have some sworn testimony of value which they can cross-examine. You cannot examine a report or a complaint, and I have known cases in which owners of property took a very different view of the value when they had been asked some fairly obvious and relevant questions by a hostile critic. So that this view of the case against the applicant, to my mind, breaks down. Neither of the owners was even called. The Courts below were content with the evidence of the man who was grazing them and with the so-called reports. The reports, I think, were admissible, but anyhow they prove nothing except what the men who had lost their cattle thought they were worth.

The other point is that the affirmative evidence for the defence does not appear upon the record. I think this is a sound objection. In a case, however tiring it may be, the Magistrate ought really to take down the evidence for the defence with the same care as he does that for the prosecution. He might see reason afterwards to think it was true, but anyhow his opinion that it is false is not easy to test at all unless the evidence is recorded.

I now come to the circumstances which, in my opinion, justify this conviction and prohibit me from interfering. According to the findings of the first Court Munir and Mahbub were known to one another for two years; secondly, it was a remarkable coincidence that they should run up against one another so shortly after the loss of the cattle; thirdly, the Court has held that Munir never sold to Mahbub and that Munir and Mahbub were really working together. Mahbub himself admits in his statement that after the purchase from Munir he actually took this cattle dealer with him at Re. 0 4 0 a day, not only that but he took him to the sale and relied upon him as surety in one of the re-sales which took place shortly afterwards. Lastly, and the most important of all, he must have heard in the course the address which had been given by Munir in his presence and which he must have known perfectly well to be false. Whether he heard Munir give it does not matter, the receipt was read out to him. All this is conduct pointing strongly to his guilt justifying the view which the Courts below have taken of the facts and leading me to think, although this is really immaterial, that these two men are really the thieves themselves. I see no reason to interfere either with the conviction or the sentence and dismiss this application.

Application dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 663 OF 1919.
February 18, 1920.
Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Walmsley.
Mir MOUZE ALI—ACCUSED—APPELLANT
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 297, 439—Trial by Jury—Previous proceedings against accused—Failure to warn Jury to disregard result of such proceedings—Misdirection—Joint trial of two accused—Appeal by one—High Court, power of, to deal with non-appealing accused.

Where in his summing up to a Jury the Judge considers it necessary to refer to previous proceedings against the accused, he ought to deal with them in such a manner as to avoid, if possible, the minds of the Jury being affected by the result of the proceedings. It is his duty to warn the Jury to pay no attention to the result of those proceedings, and his omission to so warn the Jury amounts to a misdirection sufficient to vitiate the whole of the proceedings. [p. 859, col. 2.]

The High Court in the exercise of the powers vested in it under section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure can, in a proper case, while setting aside the conviction and sentence of an accused appellant, also release his co-accused who has not appealed. [p. 860, col. 2.]

Appeal against the order of the Sessions Judge, Barisal, dated the 1st November 1919.

Babus Manmatha Nath Mukherjee, Jyotish Chandra Guha and Radhika Ranjan Guha, for the Appellant.

Mr. Orr (Deputy Legal Remembrancer), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

SANDERSON, C. J.—In this case the appellant, who was a Head Constable named Mir Mouze Ali, has been convicted at a trial by the Jury of offences under section 384 (extortion), 448 (house trespass), 342 (wrongful confinement) and 323 read with section 109 for abetment of the offence of voluntarily causing hurt. He was tried along with another man who was a constable called Belat Ali, who was found guilty of an offence under section 354 which offences is that of assaulting or using criminal force to a woman with intent to outrage her modesty. He was also convicted of offences under sections 323 and 342 of the Indian Penal Code. The second accused has not appealed.

We have to deal at the present moment with the appeal of Mir Mouze Ali alone.

There were other charges against these two men in respect of which they were acquitted. The first accused was charged with abetment of rape under section 376 read with section 109 and the second accused was charged with rape under section 376. Of these charges the accused were acquitted. There was a further charge against the first accused under section 354 together with section 109, that is, the abetment of assaulting a woman with intent to outrage her modesty. He was acquitted of that charge. There was a charge against the second accused under section 384, together with section 109, that is, the abetment of extortion, and the second accused was acquitted of that charge.

The learned Vakil has argued that the direction of the learned Judge was wrong inasmuch as he referred to certain previous proceedings against these two accused and that such reference was inadmissible. The reference which the learned Judge made is as follows: After referring to the visit of Khorshed (the husband of the complainant) and his wife Baroo Bibi (the complainant), who appeared before Purna Chandra Mukerji, Mukhtear, and told him their story, whereupon the Mukhtear drafted a petition, Exhibit 2, and filed it in Court and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate examined the complainant Baroo Bibi on solemn affirmation on the same day, the learned Judge said: "The

MIR MOUZE ALI v. EMPEROR.

Sub-Divisional Magistrate, in accordance with departmental rules, made a local investigation into the case and on the 9th of November made a report to the District Magistrate recommending the prosecution of the head constable and the constable under sections 342, 384, 448, 354 and 323, Indian Penal Code. The District Magistrate ordered their prosecution as recommended and sent the case for trial to the Additional District Magistrate. The Additional District Magistrate tried the case, and on the 23rd of December 1918 he convicted both the accused and sentenced them to 6 months' imprisonment each under the above sections. Though the woman repeated to him her story of rape by the constable and two others, he held that the story of rape was an exaggeration and a fiction. In appeal the Additional Sessions Judge affirmed the conviction and sentence on the 24th February 1919. Thereafter the two accused men moved the Hon'ble High Court and the High Court on 10th June* reversed the conviction and ordered that the case be committed to the Court of Session for trial. Accordingly on 18th July the two accused men were committed to this Court for trial." My learned brother Mr. Justice Walmsley was a member of the Court which reversed the conviction and ordered a new trial, and as I understand the view which he and the other learned Judge took was that inasmuch as the story on behalf of the prosecution involved a charge of rape against one of the accused and abetment of rape against the other accused, the case ought to have been tried by a Court of Session, and ought not to have been tried by the Additional District Magistrate. Consequently they set aside the conviction and directed a new trial.

We have been informed by the learned Vakil for the appellant that although there may have been during the course of the trial a reference made to the evidence which the individual witnesses gave on the previous occasion when the two accused were tried, there was no reference either by the prosecution or the defence to the result of those proceedings and, after reading the summing up of the learned Judge, we think we must take it that that was so. The learned Judge, as I have shown by reading a part of his judgment, not only referred to the previous proceedings but referred to the result of those proceedings, and also referred to the fact that the Additional District Magistrate convicted them of certain offences and that his decision was upheld by the Additional Sessions Judge. The learned Vakil has pointed out that there was no warning given to the Jury that they must disregard altogether the result of the previous proceedings and that the responsibility was upon the Jury, and that they must act upon the evidence which was given in the case and upon that evidence alone. He urged that the fact that the learned Judge has referred to those previous proceedings and to the result of the previous proceedings and the omission to warn the Jury to pay no attention to the result of those previous proceedings may have affected the minds of the Jury materially in arriving at the conclusion at which they did. In my judgment that does amount to misdirection. In my judgment, if it was necessary for the learned Judge to refer to the previous proceedings, he certainly ought to have warned the Jury that they must not allow the result of those previous proceedings to affect their minds. It would have been much better if all reference to the previous proceedings could have been avoided. I am not in a position to say whether it was, but assuming for the sake of argument that it was necessary to refer to the previous proceedings, then I think that the learned Judge ought to have dealt with them in such a manner as to avoid, if possible, the minds of the Jury being affected by the result of the previous proceedings.

I need not consider the further points raised by the learned Vakil, because in my judgment the matter to which I have already referred amounted to misdirection.

Then we have to consider what course should be taken. The appellant has already stood his trial on two occasions and in my judgment it would not be right, having regard to the circumstances of this case, to direct that he should stand his trial a third time.

It remains for me to consider whether

*See Mir Moze Ali v. Emperor, 54 Ind. Cas. 58; 30 C. L. J. 7 132; 23 C. W. N. 1031; 21 Cr. L. J. 10.—Ed.

MIR MOUZE ALI v. EMPEROR.

I should accede to the argument of the learned Counsel for the Crown that the misdirection of the learned Judge was not sufficient to vitiate the whole of the proceedings and that we ought to uphold the conviction of the appellant having regard to the evidence which was given in the case.

The facts of this case are extraordinary. The charges are that the head constable and the constable went to the house of the complainant's husband with the main object of ascertaining the whereabouts of a man who was supposed to be connected with a dacoity and who was also supposed to be a paramour of the complainant; that the offences of which these two men were charged were committed on that occasion in daylight with a considerable number of people in the immediate neighbourhood. The woman's story is that the second accused went into her house, her husband having been previously bound in the courtyard of the house by the first accused, and that the second accused ravished her in her house; that the first accused was close by and the ravishing practically took place under his nose, so to speak; that she called out that she was being ravished and losing her honour and begged her husband to pay money to the head constable in order that she might be released from the oppression which was being practised upon her. Thereupon, her husband begged the first accused to accept money and release his wife and after some haggling as to what the amount should be, the husband of the complainant paid to the first accused the sum of Rs. 80.

As I have already pointed out, the Jury have rejected the charge of rape against the second accused. They have rejected the charge of abetment of rape against the first accused. They have further found the second accused to be guilty of an offence under section 354, which is assaulting a woman with intent to outrage her modesty, but they have rejected the charge of abetment against the first accused: and the learned Counsel for the Crown was constrained to admit that he did not understand how they could find the second accused guilty of an offence under section 354 and at the same time acquit the first accused of the abetment of that offence, which, if it took place at all, must have taken place under the nose, so to speak, of the first accused. The facts of this case are so bound up together and the evidence with regard to them is so dependent one part upon the other, that I find it very difficult to say—seeing that the evidence with regard to the rape and the abetment of rape is taken by the Jury to be unreliable and seeing that the evidence with regard to the abetment of an offence under section 354 against the first accused is taken by the Jury to be unreliable with regard to the rest of the evidence, that the other charges were made out. In my judgment in this case when part of the evidence as regards the main charges against the accused men must be rejected, it would not be safe to convict the accused upon the rest of the evidence.

For these reasons in my judgment the conviction and sentence of the appellant must be set aside and he must be released. If he is on bail, his bail bond must be discharged.

With regard to the second accused Belat Ali Khan, who has not appealed, the judgment which we have just delivered with regard to the misdirection will affect his case as much as the case of the first accused. We asked the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer if he had anything to say why we should not set aside the conviction in his case also. He having nothing to say, we are of opinion that we ought to exercise the powers vested in us under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code and relying upon the authority of the case of Broja Rakhal Mozumdar v. Empress (1), we exercise the powers vested in us under that section and set aside the conviction of and the sentence passed on the second accused, Belat Ali Khan, and direct that he be released.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 5 C. W. N. 330.

EMPEROR v. JAGAT SINGH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 668 OF 1920.

June 12, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

EMPEROR—PETITIONER

versus

JAGAT SINGH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 439 (3)—Enhancement of sentence—High Court, power of, extent of.

In revision the High Court can enhance a sentence and inflict any punishment for the offence which in the opinion of the Court has been committed which might have been inflicted for such offence by a Magistrate of the first class, even although the trial Magistrate was invested only with second or third class powers. [p. 862, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Kamal, 30 Ind. Cas. 100; 16 Cr. L. J. 712; 9 S. L R. 82, followed.

The accused were convicted by a Magistrate of the second class of an offence under section 325, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to 3 months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 25 each. Their appeal was rejected by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, who sent the record to the District Magistrate with a recommendation that the High Court should be moved to enhance the sentences which in his opinion were inadequate. The District Magistrate reported the case to the High Court:

Held, that the Court had power to enhance the sentences to the limit of the sentence which could have been passed by a Magistrate of the first class, inspite of the fact that the trying Magistrate could only have awarded six months. [p. 862, col. 1.]

Case reported by the District Magistrate, Lahore, with his No. 1467 of the 29th March 1920.

FACTS.—Fauja, a mehra, had ceased working for the accused some time before. On 5th November 1919 they saw him taking water for his cattle from the pond. They were angry and they said that they would not let him take water as he would not supply water for them, and they at once attacked him. He was helped by Sohni, a relative, who had also been getting water there, and thereupon the accused turned on him and beat him severely; he then ran away and on the way came up with Phuman, a relative who was washing clothes. Phuman tried to help him and then the accused turned on him and ferociously attacked him with lathis, so that the parietal bone of his head was broken and two wounds were inflicted on the back and the right side of the head. The accused were challaned and convicted. They appealed, which was rejected by Mr. P. Marsden, Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Kasur. He found that while the lower Court had come to a right finding in the case, the sentences passed were quite inadequate. The case should have been heard by a higher Court, and the offence called for a punishment of at least three years' rigorous imprisonment. I agree with Mr. Marsden that the attack by the accused was a most wanton and savage one and that the punishment awarded is not sufficient either from a retributive or a deterrent point of view. Therefore, the case is submitted for enhancement of sentence.

Dewan Ram Lal, Government Advocate, for the Petitioner.

Dewan Mehar Chand, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—Bur Singh, Jagat Singh and Arur Singh were convicted by a Tahsildar exercising powers of a Magistrate, 2nd Class, of voluntarily causing grievous hurt to Phuman Singh and Sohni, and were sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 25 each. Their appeal was dismissed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Kasur who sent the record on to the District Magistrate, with a recommendation that the High Court should be moved to enhance the sentences which he considered to be inadequate. The District Magistrate has now reported the case to this Court in order that the sentences may be enhanced.

The sentences of imprisonment awarded by the Tahsildar expired more than two months ago and the accused are, therefore, now at liberty. It has been the practice of the Chief Court in the past, when an accused person has completed his sentence of imprisonment, not to enhance the sentence and send him back to jail except in exceptional circumstances. I have considered the facts of this case and I am satisfied that the accused have been rightly convicted. They made a very ferocious and unprovoked attack upon Phuman Singh. The latter received no less than three injuries on the head, one was on the forehead and caused the fracture of the skull. There was another serious injury on the back of his head and the ulna bone of his left arm was broken. In addition he received other injuries on other parts of the body. The fracture of the skull was a very serious one and his life was in danger from it. I agree with the Sub-Divisional and the District Magistrates that the sentences imposed in this case were grossly inadequate.

It is contended by Diwan Mehar Chand on behalf of the accused that this Court cannot enhance the sentences and inflict a greater punishment for the offence than might have been inflicted by the Tahsildar who tried the case. He has, however, no authority in support of this proposition and section 439 (3) is against him. It runs as follows:—

"Where the sentence dealt with under this section has been passed by a Magistrate acting otherwise than under section 34, the Court shall not inflict a greater punishment for the offence which, in the opinion of such Court, the accused has committed than might have been inflicted for such offence by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the 1st Class."

The power of enhancement of sentence conferred upon the High Court by section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, is limited only by clause (3) of that section which clause does not regard the difference in the powers of the trying Magistrate under section 32 of the same Code, but lays down the general rule that in cases of sentences passed by Magistrates not empowered under section 34, the limit of enhancement shall be the sentence that may be inflicted by a Presidency or a 1st Class Magistrate. This was the view taken by two Judges of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court in the case reported as Emperor v. Kamal (1). In accordance with this interpretation of law this Court can inflict any punishment for the offence which in the opinion of the Court has been committed which might have been inflicted for such offence by a Magistrate of the First Class. In other words, it can inflict a sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment in spite of the fact that the Magistrate who tried the accused could only have inflicted a sentence of 6 months' rigorous imprisonment.

I have perused the evidence for the prosecution and I find that all the witnesses say that Bur Singh struck Phuman Singh the blow upon his forehead. Arur Singh then came up and aimed a blow at his head and felled him to the ground but Phuman Singh warded off the blow with his arm and the consequence was that it did not hit his head, but his arm was broken. Jagat Singh then came up and hit him on the head and all the accused gave him a sound beating. Under the circumstances there is very little to choose between any of the three accused and I can find no reason for making any difference in the sentences imposed upon them.

I consider the case to be a very bad one and I enhance the sentences to one of two years' rigorous imprisonment each and the fine as imposed by the Magistrate.

Sentences enhanced.

(1) 30 Ind. Cas. 1000; 16 Cr. L. J. 712; 9 S. L. R. 82.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 59 OF 1920.

February 12, 1920.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Wälmsley.

NANDO LAL GUHA—PETITIONER

versus

THE CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1899), ss. 299, 575, proceedings under—Stay of proceedings—Proceedings, revival of, after long delay, effect of.

Criminal proceedings under section 575 of the Calcutta Municipal Act were initiated against the petitioner on the 15th August 1916, but at his request the proceedings were stayed pending negotiations between himself and the Municipal Corporation. Nothing came of these negotiations, and on the 28th February 1919 application was made to revive the proceedings and on the 20th November 1919, the petitioner was sentenced to pay a daily fine for 30 days from the 16th May 1916:

Held, that, in view of the special circumstances of the case and the very great delay that had occurred, it must be taken that the proceedings had been abandoned, and that the conviction for an offence from the 16th May 1916, made on 20th November 1919, was invalid. [p. 864, col. 1.]

Rule against the order of the 2nd Municipal Magistrate, Calcutta, dated the 20th November 1919.

NANDO LAL GUHA v. CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA.

Babu Manmotha Nath Mookherjee, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.

SANDERSON, C. J.—This is a Rule calling upon the Chairman of the Corporation and the Municipal Magistrate to show cause why the order complained of should not be set aside or why such other order should not be made in the matter as may seem fit to this Court. The order complained of is dated the 20th of November 1919, and by that order the Municipal Magistrate sentenced the petitioner to a daily fine of eight annas for 30 days from the 16th of May 1916, that is, Rs. 15 in all, under section 575 read with section 299 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, III of 1899.

The facts of this case are to my mind exceptional, and the decision at which we have arrived depends upon the exceptional facts of this case and should not be taken as covering any other case in which the facts are different.

It appears that the petitioner was convicted on the 28th of January 1916 for not having complied with the requisition which was served upon him in May 1915, requiring him to do certain things in connection with his premises and relating to the drainage thereir: and he was fined Rs. 2. Apparently he did not even then comply with the requisition and on the 15th of August 1916 a fresh complaint was made against him. The charge was for failing to comply with the requisition under section 299 of the Act requiring him within 60 days to make a house drain emptying into the sewer and to do other matters "(after being convicted and fined Rs. 2 on the 28th January 1916)." These proceedings were taken under section 575 of the Act. On the 29th of August the accused's son appeared and said he was making arrangements for departmental execution of work. The order was: "Two weeks' time allowed. Fix 12th September 1916." Then on the 12th of September proceedings were stayed for one month at the instance of the prosecution. Apparently, negotiations were then entered upon between the petitioner and the Municipal authorities, the petitioner alleging that he was too poor to carry out the requisition. It is not necessary for me to go into the details of the negotiations, but they seem to have lasted for a very long time. Eventually, they fell through and nothing came of them. Then on the 25th February 1919, more than two years after the proceedings had been stayed, an application was made to the Municipal Magistrate. I will read the application, because the wording of it to my mind is somewhat unusual:—

"The prosecutor prays that Case No. 2580 in which proceedings were stayed in this Court on the 12th of September 1916 may be revived as the accused has not complied with the requisition of notice served. Proceeding was stayed in the case pending the disposal of the party's application for departmental execution of work, as the application for departmental action has been refused, the present application for revival of proceedings is being made." Upon that application the Magistrate made this order: "Case revived. Issue summons for 16th October 1919. Inform Sub Inspector of the date." On the 18th of September the application was granted and the case was revived. Then on the 20th of November, as I have already stated, the petitioner was convicted and the period for which he was fined was for 30 days commencing from the 16th May 1916. The Municipal Magistrate stated in his judgment "the period for which the accused has been prosecuted is mentioned as the 29th of January to the 4th of August, but as the complaint was filed on the 15th of August I cannot take into consideration the days previous to the 16th of May." Presumably he was acting under the provisions of section 631 and he was of opinion that he could not deal with any period more than three months prior to the 15th of August 1916.

The Rule that has been obtained has been supported upon the grounds, first, that inasmuch as the proceedings were stayed on the 12th of September 1916 for one month at the instance of the prosecution and as at the expiration of that one month nothing was done by the complainant, and as he did not appear at the expiration of that month, it was the duty of the Magistrate under section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code to acquit the accused unless the Magistrate thought proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day. The Magistrate did not adjourn the case and the complainant did not appear at the end of the month. It was further argued that having regard to the great delay which had occurred from the date when the proceedings were stayed until the application for revival (namely, from the 12th September 1916 to the 25th of February 1919), it must be assumed that those proceedings were abandoned and that the application for revival on the 25th of February, if it is to be regarded at all as a competent proceeding, must be regarded as a fresh complaint. I prefer to rest my judgment upon the second ground, namely, that having regard to the special circumstances of this case the very great delay that has occurred, namely, that from the 12th of September 1916 till the 25th February 1919 nothing was done with regard to the proceedings, it must be taken that those proceedings were abandoned, and, consequently I am of opinion that the order of the Municipal Magistrate convicting the petitioner of offences committed from the 12th of May and 30 days afterwards, which conviction was made on the 20th November 1919, was invalid.

This Rule must, therefore, be made absolute.

The fine, if paid, must be refunded.

WALMSLEY, J.—I agree in the order proposed. I should like to add that such reluctance as I may feel in interfering in this case springs from the fact that it was the petitioner who in the first instance caused the proceedings under section 575 to be held in abeyance.

Rule made absolute.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 95 OF 1920.

June 8, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C.

MOHAN—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—NON-APPLICANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 107, proceedings under—Hearsay evidence.

Proceedings under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, cannot be based upon hearsay evidence.

Revision against the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Saugor, in Miscellaneous Case No. 2 of 1920, decided on 8th April 1920.

Mr. P. Lobo, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The Saugor Police have received information from an informer that Daolat Darji, aged 25, and Mohan Ganoo, aged 30, two cultivators of Parsone, are about to become dacoits. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate upon this ordered these two persons to furnish security under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code. Not being able to furnish the security, they are undergoing imprisonment and have applied to this Court for revision.

The Sub-Inspector on special duty states that he was informed by a reliable informer that five persons, including these two persons, were to run away from their village and join the gang of dacoits headed by Kunjalsingh and Baldwansingh. This information was received in August last and the Sub-Inspector submitted a confidential report to the District Superintendent of Police at the time. Three of the persons named have since the 19th January last become untraceable and it is believed that they have joined the gang of dacoits, though the evidence on the point is purely hearsay.

The learned Magistrate is quite right in calling this a novel case, but I cannot agree with him when he says that the Sub-Inspector has first hand knowledge of the applicants' intention. He does not depose to a single fact within his knowledge. The whole of his evidence is hearsay based upon statements made to him by informers whom he does not name and whom he does not produce. Proceedings under section 107 cannot be based upon hearsay evidence. The order is so palpably and manifestly wrong that it must be set aside, and the applicants ordered to be immediately released.

Order set aside.

KARM ILAHI v. HAKIM SHAH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 92 OF 1920.

April 27, 1920.

Present—Mr. Justice Scott Smith.

KARM ILAHI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS

versus

HAKIM SHAH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 107 (2), O. VII, r. 10, O. XLIII r. (1) (a)—Order returning memorandum of appeal for presentation to proper Court—Appeal, whether lies—"Plaint" in O. XLIII, r. (1) (a), whether includes memorandum of appeal—Revision, maintainability of.

No appeal lies against an order returning a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court. A revision is, however, competent against such an order. [p. 866, col. 2.]

The word "plaint" in Order XLIII, rule (1) (a), of the Civil Procedure Code does not include a memorandum of appeal. [p. 866, col. 2.]

Petition, under section 44 of Act IX of 1919, for revision of the order of the Additional District Judge, Gujrat, at Gujranwala, dated the 17th January 1920.

FACTS.—Plaintiffs brought a suit under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code in respect of certain waqf property, alleging that defendants, who were mutwallis of the waqf, had been guilty of acts of waste and were, therefore, unfit to hold the office of mutwalli of the waqf. Plaintiffs also claimed to be appointed mutwallis of the waqf property in place of the defendants and to be put in possession of the same. The defendants objected to the valuation of the suit and the trial Court appointed a Commissioner to value the properties in dispute. The Commissioner assessed the total value of the properties at over Rs. 8,000. The plaintiffs were called upon to make up ad valorem Court fees on the value assessed by the Commissioner, but this order was subsequently set aside by the Court and eventualy the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed on the merits. The plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge, who held that inasmuch as the value of the property in dispute had been assessed at over Rs. 8,000, he had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. He, therefore, made an order that the memorandum of appeal should be returned to the plaintiffs for presentation to the proper Court. Against this order the plaintiffs filed a petition for revision in the High Court on the ground that inasmuch as the bulk of the property in respect of which the suit had been brought consisted of land which was permanently assessed to land revenue, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction was not the market value of the land but thirty times the land revenue, and that the value of the suit, calculated in this manner, fell far below Rs. 5,000, so that the District Judge had in refusing to hear the appeal failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri (with him Mr. Hargopal), for the Respondents, raised a preliminary objection that a petition for revision was not competent in this case. Order VII, rule 10, of the Civil Procedure Code, read with section 107 (2) of the Code, empowers an Appellate Court to return a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court. Order XLIII, rule 1 (a), provides that an appeal shall lie against an order under Order VII, rule 10. By virtue of section 107 (2) an appeal under this rule would also lie from an order returning a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court. Therefore, an appeal being competent, a petition for revision does not lie.

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—Order XLIII, rule 1 (a), applies only to orders returning plaints. It has no application where a memorandum of appeal is returned. Plaint does not include a memorandum of appeal.]

Section 107 (2) gives an Appellate Court the same powers as an original Court has.

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—This only means that an Appellate Court can make such orders as an original Court can. It does not mean that where an appeal lies from an order of an original Court, an appeal would also lie from a similar order of an Appellate Court.]

It has been held that the word "plaint" in Order XLIII, rule 1 (a), includes a memorandum of appeal. Kunhikutti v. Achotti (1).

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—I can hear this petition as an appeal.]

Your Lordship can treat an appeal as a revision, but it is not the practice to convert a petition for revision into an appeal.

[SCOTT SMITH, J.—If the petition has been filed within limitation and bears the requisite

(1) 14 M. 462; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 323.

stamp, the mere fact that it has been presented in the form of a revision and not in the form of an appeal should make no difference. It is a case of a bona fide mistake.]

Mr Zafrulla Khan, for the Petitioners.—The view expressed by your Lordship that in Order XLIII, rule 1 (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, the word "plaint" does not include a "memorandum of appeal" is the correct view, and, therefore, the proper remedy in this case was by way of revision and not by way of appeal. Nur-ud-din v. Pran Kishen Chakravarty (2). In that case a Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court took the same view. It was held that a memorandum of appeal is not a plaint, and that, therefore, no appeal lay from an order returning a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court. Sections 104 and 105 of the Civil Procedure Code expressly provide that no appeal shall lie from any original or appellate order except where the Code itself provides for an appeal. The Code nowhere lays down that an appeal shall lie from an order returning a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court. I submit, therefore, that the revision is competent.

[SCOTT SMITH, J.—Mr. Puri, do you still maintain that the revision is not competent ?]

Mr. Puri.—In view of Nur-ud-din v. Pran Kishen Chakravarty (2) I admit that the petition is competent.

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—On the merits do you support the District Judge's order ?]

I submit that the valuation fixed by the District Judge cannot be questioned under section 12 of the Court Fees Act.

[SCOTT-SMITH, J.—That section does not apply. The petitioners do not object to the assessment of the market value. They contend that a wrong rule of law has been applied in valuing the suit.]

So far as the valuation is concerned, I admit that in respect of the land permanently assessed to land revenue the rule to be applied is that which is put forward in the grounds for revision. But there is a plot of banjar land about 123 kanals in area which has not been valued at all and which is not assessed to land revenue. The market value of that plot must be ascertained and added to the value given in the grounds for revision.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of the order of the Additional District Judge, Gujranwala, returning a memorandum of appeal to the petitioners for presentation in the High Court. Mr. Mukand Lal Puri for the respondents raises a preliminary objection that an application for revision is not competent because an appeal lies under Order XLIII, rule 1(a), read with section 107 of the Civil Procedure Code. Section 107 (2), Civil Procedure Code, lays down that an Appellate Court shall have the same powers and shall perform as nearly as may be the same duties as are conferred and imposed by this Code on Courts of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted therein. Order XLIII, rule 1(a), allows an appeal from an order under rule 10 of Order VII, returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court. Counsel's contention is that the word 'plaint' here includes a memorandum of appeal. Now under section 107 an Appellate Court no doubt has powers to return a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court just as a Court of original jurisdiction has the power to return a plaint for a similar purpose, but while an order returning a plaint is made appealable under Order XLIII, rule 1(a), nothing is said about an appeal lying from an order returning a memorandum of appeal. It was held by a Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court in a case reported as Nur ud-din v. Pran Kishen Chakravarty (2) that a memorandum of appeal was not a plaint and that no appeal lay against an order of an Appellate Court directing a memorandum of appeal to be returned for presentation to the proper Court. Mr. Puri in support of his argument refers to Kunhikutti v. Achotti (1) in which it was held that an appeal did lie from an order returning a memorandum of appeal. I, however, prefer the Allahabad ruling reported as Nur-ud-din v. Pran Kishen Chakravarty (2) which is, in my opinion, in accordance with the actual wording used in Order XLIII, rule 1 (a), of the Code. I, therefore, hold that no appeal lay from the order of the Additional District Judge and that the petition for revision is competent.

(2) 47 Ind. Cas. 16; 16 A. L. J. 630; 40 A. 659.

JAG SAHU v. RADHA KISHUN.

In the first Court a Commissioner was appointed to assess the value of the property in dispute, and the value fixed by him exceeded Rs. 8,000. In order to arrive at this he valued 159 kanals 17 marlas of land, part of the property in dispute, at Rs. 5,957, which he held to be the market value. This land, however, is assessed to land revenue as appears from the fard attached to the plaint, the land revenue being Rs. 23-1-3. The value of this land for purposes of Court fee and jurisdiction is ten times and thirty times respectively of the assessed land revenue and it was incorrect for the lower Appellate Court to adopt the market value as the correct value for these purposes. In addition to this land there is another plot of 123 kanals 14 marlas out of which $2\frac{1}{2}$ kanals is cultivated and the remainder uncultivated. The cultivated portion is assessed to land revenue at Re. 0-6-9 and the uncultivated portion does not appear to have been assessed at all, and if this is so its market value should be ascertained.

I, therefore, allow the revision and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court, remand the case thereto in order that it may assess the value of the property in suit (1) for purposes of Court-fee and (2) for purpose of jurisdiction in accordamce with the rules. Having done this, it will be able to see whether the total value is within its jurisdiction or not and will be in a position to pass a proper order. Costs in this Court to be costs in the cause.

Revision alloured;
Case remanded.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 139 OF 1917.

March 23, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Adami.

JAG SAHU AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Rai RADHA KISHUN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow, alienation by—Cesses, payment of, whether legal necessity—Interest, high rate of, necessity for, proof of—Burden of proof.

The reversionary heirs of a Hindu widow are not bound by a debt incurred by her for the payment of cesses. [p. 869, col. 1.]

Where a mortgagee from a Hindu widow sues to enforce his mortgage against the reversioners of the widow, and the principal is found to have been advanced for necessity, the question as to the necessity for the rate of interest does not arise and ought not to be gone into, unless the defendants by their written statement specifically raise that question. [p. 869, col. 2; p. 874, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Mozafferpore.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, C. C. Das, Sunder Lal and Satya Sunder Bose, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Kulwant Sahay and Kailaspatti, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

ADAMI, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit in which the plaintiffs sought to recover Rs. 14,500, the principal and interest, due on a simple mortgage bond. The plaintiffs alleged that the bond was executed on the 21st October 1902 by Musammat Bachu Koer, widow of Rai Gudur Sahai, in favour of Tulshi Das and Harakh Das, who, by a deed dated 13th February 1905, assigned it to the plaintiffs. The consideration for the bond was a payment of Rs. 775 bearing interest at the rate of Rs. 2 per cent. per mensem with six-monthly rests, and the document shows that the objects of the loan were:

(a) to re-pay Rs. 125 due to Dr. Leakat Hussain on a hand-note;

(b) to re-pay Rs. 204 due to Damri Das on a hand-note

(c) to re-pay Rs. 275 lent by Damri Das, and (d) to provide the widow with Rs. 171 in cash.

The defendants, the minor sons of the late Rai Mahabir Prashad who succeeded to the estate of Rai Gadur Sahai as nearest reversionary heir, contested the suit denying that the bond was genuine or that consideration passed. They asserted that, even if the bond was executed by Musammat Bachu Koer as alleged, she was kept in ignorance of its contents and that there was no legal necessity for the borrowing, while they described the rate of interest stipulated for in the bond as being "contrary to law and enquity and altogether improper" and contended that the estate of Rai Gudur Sahai could not be bound by it.

The learned Subordinate Judge found that the bond was genuine and was duly executed by Musammat Beebu Koer, who understood its contents and received Rs, 171 in cash, the balance being set off against the antecedent debts mentioned in (a), (b), (c) above. He held that at the time the loan was taken there was pressure on the estate and money was wanted. The deed of assignment of the bond to the plaintiffs was also found to be genuine and for consideration. In considering, however, the items making up the sum of Rs. 775, the Subordinate Judge decided that only the items (a) and (b) could be held to be debts incurred by Musammat Beebu Koer for legal necessity. With regard to item (c) it was found that the sum of Rs. 275 had been borrowed with the object of recovering property sold for arrears of cesses, and a debt incurred for that object by a Hindu widow could not bind the reversionary heirs, while item (d) Rs. 171 was taken in cash partly if not wholly for the purpose of paying cesses and, therefore, could not bind the defendants.

With regard to the interest claimed, the lower Court found that there was no evidence to show that the pressure for re-payment of the debts was so great as to compel Musammat Beebu Koer to agree to pay compound interest at the high rate stipulated and that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that she could not get money at a lower rate. The Subordinate Judge awarded simple interest at the rate of 24 per cent. As a result the plaintiffs obtained a decree only for re-payment of the items (a) and (b), namely, Rs. 329 with simple interest as above stated.

The plaintiffs have appealed to this Court on the ground that the lower Court erred in finding that the sums of Rs. 275 and Rs. 171 [items (a) and (d)] were not borrowed for legal necessity, and in changing the rate of compound interest under the bond into simple interest. There is a cross-objection by the respondents that the findings of the Subordinate Judge as to the genuineness of the bond and deed of assignment were wrong, and that, even if the bond was duly executed, there was no legal necessity for the debt due to Dr. Leakat Hussain or for the hand-note executed in favour of Dumri Das, and that there had wrongly been thrown on the defendants the onus of proving absence of legal necessity.

We have carefully considered the evidence as to the execution of the bond and of the deed of assignment and the passing of consideration in both cases; it is quite one-sided and fully proves not only that the two documents were duly executed as alleged by the plaintiffs, but also that consideration passed, and that Musammat Beebu Koer was cognisant of the terms and conditions of the bond.

The existence or absence of legal necessity for each one of the items included in the bond has been questioned by either one or the other of the parties to this appeal and cross-objection.

It is quite clear from the oral and documentary evidence that the debt of Rs. 125 to Dr. Leakat Hussain was incurred for his fees and medicine during the illness of Musammat Beebu Koer's daughter, Musammat Bhagwati Koer, and there is no doubt that there was legal necessity for the debt.

Similarly in the case of the debt due to Dumri Das of Rs. 204, the evidence goes to show that the money was borrowed for lodging and other necessary family expenses. At the time these loans were taken, Musammat Beebu Koer was involved in litigation with her daughter-in-law regarding Probate of the Will of Rai Gudur Sahai and by reason of this dispute, though the property left by her husband brought in an income of over a lakh yearly, rents could not be collected, while it seems that Rai Gudur Sahai left debts amounting to five lakhs. We are satisfied that due inquiry was made by Dumri Das as to the necessity for the loan and that Musammat Beebu Koer was at that time in need of money to supply the necessities of life.

The respondents' cross-objection that these two items of debt were not incurred for legal necessity cannot be upheld.

With regard to the two other items, which have been disallowed on the same ground, namely, that the money was borrowed to satisfy a personal obligation, to pay cesses or to get the sale of a portion of the estate sold for arrears of cesses set aside, the learned Counsel for the appellants, while agreeing that it is settled law that the payment of cesses by a Hindu widow is a personal obligation which cannot bind the reversioners, contends that there may be cases where such payment would become a legal necessity. He suggests a case where the whole estate is about to be sold for arrears of cesses so that after the sale the widow will have no source of income from which to meet the daily necessities of life or to pay off debts the payment of which is a legal necessity, and urges that in such a case the payment of the cess would be a legal necessity. That is an extreme case and does not fit in with the circumstances of the present one, and we see no reason to depart from the well-settled principle that the reversionary heirs of a Hindu widow are not bound by a debt incurred by her for the payment of cesses.

It is next contended by Mr. Sen for the appellants that, with regard to the loan of Rs. 275, only Rs. 200 was to be spent on payment of cesses and the rest was for family purposes. The evidence, however, as to the portion of the total sum which was to be taken for cesses is uncertain, while Damri Das from whom the money was taken says that the whole sum was for payment of cesses.

We thus uphold the findings of the lower Court with regard to all four of the items.

We finally come to the question whether the lower Court was right in reducing the interest from compound to simple interest. The learned Subordinate Judge held that it lay on the plaintiffs to prove that the pressure on the estate was so heavy, and the difficulty of getting money at a less rate of interest was so great, that the compound interest agreed on in the bond was reasonable. He relied on Harmanoje Narain Singh v. Ramprosad Singh (1).

In the case of Nawab Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh (2) their Lordships of the Privy Council decided that it is incumbent on those who support a mortgage made by a manager of a joint Hindu family to show not only that there was a necessity to borrow but that it was not unreasonable to borrow at a high rate of interest, and that decision has been followed by the Allahabad High Court in Makrand Singh v. Kallu Singh (3). The same principle would apply even more in the case of a mortgage by a Hindu widow.

In the case of Prem Sukh Das v. Ram Bhujawan Mahto (4) my learned brother, sitting with Coutts, J., considered the case of Nawab Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh (2), and pointed out that there the want of necessity for the high rate of interest was put forward in the written statement of the defendants and held that the ruling of the Judicial Committee applied where want of necessity was pleaded.

We have then to look at the written statement of the defendants. There they aver that "the rate of simple and compound interest is altogether contrary to law and equity and is altogether improper. It is never fit to be enforced in any way nor are the plaintiffs entitled to get the same. Moreover, these defendants beg to submit that the estate of Rai Gudur Sahai is not and cannot be bound by such heavy rate of interest, especially after expiration of such a long period the rate of simple and compound interest cannot be allowed."

This is not an averment of want of necessity for the high rate of interest, it is a contention that the interest is unconscionable, and it has not been found to be such. There is in fact no plea in the written statement that there was a want of necessity for the high rate of interest and there was no issue framed on this point.

Under the circumstances, following the ruling of this Court in the case of Prem Sukh Das v. Ram Bhujawan Mahto (4),

(1) 6 C. L. J. 462.

(2) 50 Ind. Cas. 434; 41 A. 571; 36 M. L. J. 521; 17 A. L. J. 591; 23 C. W. N. 700; 21 Bom. L. R. 484; 26 M. L. T. 40; 30 C. L. J. 86; (1919) M. W. N. 498; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 49; 11 L. W. 188; 46 I. A. 145 (P. C.).

(3) 50 Ind. Cas. 640; 41 A. 581; 17 A. L. J. 647; 1 U. P. L. R. 73.

(4) 52 Ind. Cas. 964; (1919) Pat. 451; 1 P. L. T. 54.

we must hold that in the absence of a plea by the defendants that there was no necessity for compound interest, the lower Court was wrong in holding it incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove that there was necessity and that the rate was reasonable.

As a result the cross-objection is disallowed and the appeal allowed in part. The decree of the lower Court will be modified to this extent that in place of simple interest at 2 per cent. per mensem compound interest at the rate claimed will be allowed. The appellants will get costs proportionate to their success.

DAS, J.—I agree. I desire, however, to express my opinion on the question whether, when the mortgage transaction is established against the estate as having been entered into for a justifying necessity, it is open to the Court to reduce the rate of interest mentioned in the bond on the ground that there was no necessity to borrow at the rate of interest mentioned in the bond. In dealing with this question, it is necessary that there should be no confusion between the different principles on which the Courts of law have reduced the rate of interest. Acting on one principle, the Courts of law have reduced the rate of interest when they have been of opinion that the agreement to pay an exorbitant rate of interest was the result of undue influence on the part of the money-lender. On this point, I expressed my opinion as follows in a recent case [Prem Sukh Das v. Ram Bhujawan Mahto (4)]: "When all the cases relating to money-lending transactions are examined, it will appear that the Court has relieved the debtor by reducing the rate of interest only when it has been satisfied that the lender was in a position to dominate the will of the borrower and that the 'bargain' was unconscionable within the meaning of section 16 of the Contract Act. It is only the concurrence of these two elements that can justify the Court in granting relief to the borrower." I still adhere to the view which I expressed in the case of Prem Sukh Das v Ram Bhujawan Mahto (4) and I am still of opinion that, in the absence of these essential elements, the Court is not at liberty to make a new contract for the parties. It is sufficient to say that in this case it has not been found that the money-lender was in a position to dominate the will of the borrower.

The other principle is that the Court is at liberty to reduce the rate of interest if it is not shown that there was any necessity to borrow at the rate of interest mentioned in the bond. In other words, the necessity for the loan being established, it is still open to the Court to enquire into the necessity for the rate of interest. I desire to discuss the question whether there is any justification for this view in Hindu Law and how far the decisions of the Judicial Committee have gone in this matter.

It may be taken as established that under the Hindu Law, a Hindu widow has a special estate in the properties left by her deceased husband which cannot be described by any of the well-known terms of the English Law of real property. For certain purposes, however, her powers are as wide as those of a full male owner. The restriction on her power of alienation is not an absolute one. For certain purposes denominated necessary purposes, she is competent to alienate the estate and to bind that estate in the hands of the reversioners. This is admitted; but what is not admitted is that she can bind the estate in the hands of the reversioners for the payment of interest agreed to be paid by the widow without further proof of necessity. It is admitted that the necessity supports the alienation for the principal sum secured, but it is denied that the alienation stands good for the entirely of the interest due in respect of the transaction without proof of further necessity.

It is remarkable that very little is to be found in the ancient texts on the subject, but this is because, as Mr. Myane suggests, restriction under the Hindu Law was the rule, absolute power the exception. But it is undoubted that the power of the Hindu widow to deal with the estate is placed on the same footing as the power of the managing member of a joint family. It is certain that the power possessed by a Hindu widow is not less, though it is not more, than that which resides in the managing member of a joint family. I can find no text that deals with the question of interest in relation to the transaction of the managing member of a joint family, but we may usefully consider in this connection the question of the liability of a son to pay the interest due in respect of a debt incurred by his father. In referring to this branch of the law, I am not forgetting that the liability of a son to pay the debt of his father arises only on the death of his father and is determined on a somewhat different principle from that adopted to fix his liability on the transaction of his father as the managing member of the joint family. But, in my view, once the liability is ascertained, the question of interest must stand on the same footing, whether you seek to make him liable on the debts of his father after the death of his father, or whether you seek to make him liable on the transaction of his father as the managing member of a joint family. It is, in my view, very important to see whether there are any ancient texts dealing with the question of interest. If it is established that a son, where he is bound to pay the debt of his father, is bound to pay the same with the interest agreed to be paid by the father,—if it is not open to him to say, "I may be liable to pay the principal, but there is no reason whatever why I should be compelled to pay the excessive interest agreed to be paid by my father," I do not see on what principle it can be said that a son sued as a member of a joint family on a transaction entered into by his father as the manager of the family can challenge the rate of interest where he admits the necessity for the loan itself, except, as I have said before, on the ground of undue influence. Once the liability of the joint family for interest on a transaction by the manager thereof is established, there is no escape from the conclusion that the estate is equally liable for interest on a transaction by the widow, for, as I have said before, the power of a Hindu widow to deal with the estate is placed by the Hindu lawyers on the same footing as the power of the manager of a joint family. In my view, the liability of the estate for interest due is the same, whether that liability arises on the transaction of a Hindu widow or of the manager of the joint family, and is co-extensive with the liability of a son in respect of the debt incurred by his father.

There is a text of Vrihaspati to the effect that sons must pay the debt of their father, when proved, as if it were their own, that is with interest (see Shayama Charan Sarkar's Vyavastha Chandrika, Volume I, page 241). This rule is of course subject to exceptions as regards immoral debts, which need not be considered. According to the text, therefore, debt includes such interest as was agreed to be paid by the debtor. The liability of the son to pay the debt being established, he must discharge it, as if the debt were his own, that is to say, with such interest as was agreed to be paid by the father. In my view, the liability of the reversioners stands exactly on the same footing. Once the necessity for the debt is established, it must be assumed that the widow completely represented the estate, and thereafter it is the estate that is liable to discharge the debt as if the debt was incurred by it. Once the complete identity of the widow with the estate is established, it is difficult to see on what principle the estate can be allowed to take up a position different from the widow herself. In my view, once the necessity for the debt is established, the estate cannot be heard to put forward a defence not available to the widow herself. The original necessity supports the transaction and binds the estate, into whoever's hand the estate may come.

It is necessary now to consider how far the cases have gone. The foundation of all the decisions of course is the case of Hunoomanpersand Panday v. Musammat Babooee Munraj Koonweree (5). After laying down under what circumstances the manager for an infant heir can charge an estate not his own, Lord Justice Knight Bruce proceeded to say as follows:—"Their Lordships think that the lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. But they think that if he does so inquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged, sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and they do not think that, under such circumstances, he is bound to see to the application of the money." It seems to me that this case is no authority for the proposition that the creditor must not only prove the necessity for the loan, but also the necessity for the rate of interest. All that the creditor is required to do is to inquire into the necessities for the loan and to satisfy himself that the borrower is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. There is no suggestion at all that, once the creditor is satisfied as to the necessity for the loan, he must solemnly proceed to inquire whether the loan could be secured at a lower rate of interest elsewhere. The necessity for the loan being established, it must follow that the loan could not be secured on better terms elsewhere, for, if it could, there is no reason why the widow, who, it must be remembered, completely represented the estate, and was entitled to the income of the estate for her lifetime, should agree to reduce her income by taking a loan on more onerous terms. Speaking with great respect, it seems to me that the discussion of this question has missed one important point, and it is this, "the Court is entitled to presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case." Section 114, Evidence Act The simple question is this, a person has an opportunity to borrow at a lower rate of interest, is it likely that he would borrow at a higher rate of interest? Is it the common course of natural events for a person to borrow at a higher rate of interest, when he has the opportunity to borrow on less onerous terms? There is a general rule of universal application that a man having a right to act in either of two ways shall be assumed to have acted according to his interest. This rule is founded on the still more general rule that a person is assumed to know his own interest. If it is permissible to make the assumption in the case of a Hindu widow taking a loan for a justifying estate necessity, it is difficult to see why it should be for the creditor to show that the borrower could not have obtained the loan on more advantageous terms elsewhere. Only in two cases would the assumption be wrong, firstly, when there is no justifying necessity for the loan, for then the widow would be eager to obtain the loan on whatever terms she may secure, and secondly, when the creditor is in a position to dominate the will of the widow, for then her consent to take the loan on onerous terms is not a free consent. In my view, the necessity for the loan being established and there being no proof that the creditor was in a position to dominate the will of the borrower, it must follow in the common course of natural events that the borrower could not have secured the loan on more advantageous terms elsewhere.

(5) 6 M I A. 393; 18 W. R. 81*n*.; Sevestre 253*n*.; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147.

There is another matter which must be considered in this connection. According to the decision of Lord Justice Knight Bruce, the creditor is amply protected so long as he makes the enquiry and honestly satisfies himself that the necessity exists. Now, what form is this enquiry to take? Is he expected to make a tour through the principal banking houses in the town or is it enough for him to ask the borrower whether he could not secure the loan on more advantageous terms elsewhere. My object in raising this question is to show that either the undertaking must be an impossible one for the creditor, for the banking houses would be within their rights in refusing to disclose their business to a rival, or the enquiry must, in the nature of things, degenerate into an absured formality and would consist in the lender putting certain formal questions to the borrower. When Lord Justice Knight Bruce said that the lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan, he never meant to lay down that the lender must proceed further and solemnly satisfy himself as to what he is entitled to assume, namely, that in the common course of natural events, the borrower would not agree to his terms if he could secure the loan on better terms elsewhere.

There is one argument, however, which I must not omit to consider. It is said that if the properties hypothecated afford a sufficient security for the loan, there is clearly no necessity to borrow at an exorbitant rate of interest. It must be remembered that the question under discussion arises only in connection with the dealings of qualified owners, and in dealings by qualified owners it can never be said with confidence that the securities offered by him or her are a good or sufficient security. A creditor lending money to a qualified owner lends with a certainty of knowledge that litigation will follow, and, when it is remembered that the costs allowed by our Courts are only a small proportion of the costs actually incurred in prosecuting the claim through the tedious processes of Court after Court, when it is remembered that it takes years for the creditor to realize his money, during which time every procedure known or unknown to law is resorted to for the purpose of delaying or defeating and, in any event, harassing the creditor, the injustice of reducing the interest agreed to be paid becomes manifest. If there were no later decisions of the Judicial Committee to guide or control us, I would unhesitatingly hold that once the necessity for the loan is established, there is no power in the Court to reduce the interest except on proof that the lender was in a position to dominate the will of the borrower, or that the "bargain" was unconscionable within the meaning of section 16 of the Contract Act.

The first case which I ought to consider is the case of Hurro Nath Rai Chowdhuri v. Randhir Singh (6). The interest agreed to be paid in that case was 18 per cent. per year. With reference to the interest charged, the High Court said as follows:—"We do not think that the plaintiff is entitled to this high rate of interest as a charge upon the estate. But we are of opinion that the ends of justice would be quite met by allowing him interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum * * *." The passage cited leaves no doubt in my mind that the decision rested, to quote the words of Lord Phillimore in the case next to be cited, "upon a supposed discretion in the Court or an inference by the Judges as to the sum which would be sufficient to compensate the mortgagee." It is now established that there is no such discretion in the Court, and that the Court is not at liberty to make a new contract for the parties. The decision of the Judicial Committee on appeal was in these words:—"Was there a necessity to borrow at the rate of 18 per cent? That is a question to which he ought to have applied his mind; and if it were unreasonable to suppose that the widow could not borrow the money at a less amount than 18 per cent, he ought not to have charged her that interest. Their Lordships think, therefore, that the High Court was right in not allowing interest as against the estate at a higher rate than 12 per cent." It may be said that the Judicial Committee accepted the view of the High Court in the matter, a view which did not commend itself to Lord Phillimore in the case which I must next consider. But it is impossible to ignore that the Judicial Committee did cast on the lender the duty of considering the propriety of charging interest at the rate claimed by him. If there was nothing in the later decision of the Judicial Committee to suggest that a different rule should be adopted, I would, with all humility, be bound to give effect to that decision, whatever my own view may be in the matter.

The next case is the case of Nawab Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh (2). The written statement filed in that case specifically denied that there was any necessity to borrow the money at the rate of interest mentioned in the bond. This will appear from the judgment of the High Court reported as Rao Raghunath Singh v. Nazir Begam (7). With reference to this specific denial in the written statement, Lord Phillimore delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee said as follows:—"In the view which the High Court took of this plea, a view from which their Lordships see no reason to differ, it made it open for the defendants to contend that though the necessity for borrowing the principal sum was accepted, there was no necessity to borrow on the very onerous terms of this mortgage. This line of defence being thus open to the defendants, the principles laid down by this Board in Hurro Nath Rai Chowdhuri v. Randhir Singh (6) and in Nand Ram v. Bhupal Singh (8) apply."

(6) 18 C. 211; 18 I. A. 1; 15 Ind. Jur. 34; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 642; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 207.

(7) 19 Ind. Cas. 639.

(8) 13 Ind. Cas. 5; 8 A. L. J. 1294; 34 A. 126.

In my view, it is impossible to misunderstand the decision of the Judicial Committee. The principles laid down in the cases cited do not apply, if the line of defence is not open to the defendants, and such a line of defence is not open to the defendants if it is not specifically raised in the written statement. I take it as settled by the Judicial Committee in this case that the plaintiff is not called upon to prove the necessity for the rate of interest unless he is required to do so by the defendant. To this extent then the Judicial Committee has encroached on the rule which I find established on principle, namely, that the necessity for the loan being found to exist, and there being no proof that the lender was in a position to dominate the will of the borrower, the necessity for the rate of interest must be assumed to exist until the contrary is shown. On this case I am bound to hold that if the defendant does specifically deny the necessity for the rate of interest, but not otherwise, the Court is entitled to, and even bound to, investigate into the necessity for the rate of interest, and to reduce the interest if it is not satisfied that there was a necessity for the rate of interest.

I now come to the last case, the case of Manna Lal v. Karu Singh (9). The judgment of the High Court, so far as I know, has not been reported, but I have examined the original records of the case and I find that the High Court reduced the rate of interest in this case on the ground that the bargain as to interest was unconscionable on the face of it and that, therefore, the Court was at liberty to reduce the rate of interest. The exact words of the High Court were as follows :—"As regards issue No. 5, there can be no doubt that under the provisions of section 74, Contract Act, the stipulation for enhanced compound interest is a penalty. The unconscionable character of the bargain is apparent on the face of it, and we are, therefore, clearly of opinion that the stipulation in the contract cannot be enforced and that all that can be decreed is the principal of the two bonds, with simple interest at the original bond rate of 18 per cent." It is this view which prevailed in the Judicial Committee. Lord Phillimore delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee said as follows :—"There is, however, a question as to interest, as to which their Lordships are inclined to agree with the view taken by the High Court." His Lordships then quoted with approval the decision in the case of Nawab Nazir Begam v Rao Raghunath Singh (2) and concluded as follows :—"These principles must be applied to the present cases. In conformity therewith, the necessity for the high rate of interest secured by these bonds must be proved, if it is to stand. And in this matter their Lordships are not disposed to interfere with the view taken by the High Court." This decision, in my judgment, cannot be read as having departed either expressly or by implication from the principle laid down in the case of Nawab Nazir Begam v. Rao Raghunath Singh (2).

On an anxious consideration of the decisions of the Judicial Committee, I hold that the question as to the necessity for the rate of interest does not arise and ought not to be gone into, unless the defendant by his written statement specifically raises that question. In this case the defendants did not raise that question, and, therefore, the Court below erred in going into that matter.

I agree with the order proposed by my learned brother.

(9) 56 Ind. Cas. 766; 1 P. L. T. 6 (P. C.).

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 591 OF 1920.

June 22, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

ILA-UD-DIN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

AMIR ULLAH—PLAINTIFF—

Musammat SUBA JAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation by widow—Consent of reversioner—Acquiescence—Mutation, failure to object to, effect of—Alienee making improvements—Silence—Estoppel.

ILA-UD-DIN v. AMIR ULLAH.

A widow permitted an occupancy tenant to exchange one of his occupancy fields with a non-occupancy one. Plaintiff, one of the collaterals of the last male holder and a lambardar, not only did not object to the exchange but was present when mutation was sanctioned and affixed his seal to the patwari's report. Subsequently the occupancy tenant sank a well in the field obtained by him under the exchange and even then the plaintiff raised no objection. Six years after the exchange had been effected, he brought a suit for a declaration that the exchange would not affect his reversionary rights;

Held, that the plaintiff, having acquiesced in the exchange and having failed to object to the sinking of the well by the defendant, was equitably estopped from now objecting to the exchange. [p. 876, col. 2]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Attock at Campbellpore, dated the 12th December 1919, modifying that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Attcok, dated the 25th August 1919.

Mr. Zafrulla Khan, for the Appellant.

Mr. Chaman Lal Gulati, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Sardar Bahadur, the last male proprietor, having died, his mother Musammat Suba Jan and his grandmother Musammat Hasham Nur succeeded him. They exchanged the lands in dispute to which mutation entries No. 238 sanctioned on the 13th of August 1913 and No. 325 sanctioned on the 12th of June 1917 relate. The plaintiff as a reversioner brought a suit for a declaration that the two exchanges effected by the two females mentioned above shall not affect his rights after the death or re-marriage of the two alienors. Musammat Hasham Nur, the grandmother of Sardar Bahadur, having died, the Court of first instance passed a declaratory decree as regards the share of the surviving lady, Musammat Suba Jan, and gave a decree for possession qua the share of the deceased Musammat Hasham Nur. The alienee Ila-ud-Din appealed and the lower Appellate Court modified the decree by disallowing the claim for possession and by passing a decree for declaration with respect to the entire property. In all other respects the decree of the first Court was allowed to stand. Ila-ud-Din, the transferee, has come up in second appeal to this Court.

His learned Counsel has confined his argument to the mutation No. 238 dated the 13th August 1913 and has admitted the correctness of the decree of the Court below with respect to the mutation No. 325 dated the 13th of June 1917. I shall accordingly deal in my judgment with questions raised in respect of the alienation effected under mutation No. 238 only. The facts found with respect to this mutation by the Courts below and not challenged here are as follows:—

Musammat Suba Jan and Musammat Hasham Nur permitted Ila-ud-Din, an occupancy tenant, to take possession of a portion of field No. 1154 (7 kanals) in exchange for the same area of the field No. 1155, which was the occupancy holding of Ila-ud-Din. There were four collaterals at the date of the exchange, all of whom with the exception of the plaintiff Amir Ullah expressed their consent to the exchange from the very commencement. The Patwari made a report relating to the exchange in July 1913. This report was signed by Ila-ud-Din the alienee and Ghulam Qadir the agent of the widows. The plaintiff Amir Ullah also put his seal on it. The final order, as already mentioned, sanctioning the mutation was made on the 13th day of August 1913. The present suit was instituted on the 14th of March 1919, i. e., nearly six years after the alienation. In the meantime Ila-ud-Din had constructed a well in the land acquired by the exchange and had incurred considerable expense (Rs. 800). The suit was resisted by the defendant Ila-ud-Din on the ground that the plaintiff had consented to and acquiesced in the exchange and was, therefore, not entitled to question it after the expiration of such a long period. He further contended that having stood by and having allowed the defendant to construct a well on the land with considerable expense, the plaintiff was equitably estopped from questioning the alienation. Both the Courts below refused to entertain this plea. On the question of acquiescence the lower Appellate Court found that the mere fact that the plaintiff affixed his seal to the Patwari's report could not establish acquiescence of the plaintiff in the exchange, inasmuch as the plaintiff being a Lambardar had to affix his seal in his capacity as a Lambardar. On the question of estoppel the lower Appellate Court recorded a somewhat vague and inconclusive finding in these words: "it is admitted that the well was being constructed when the second exchange was effected and, therefore, the sinking of the well could have no effect on the second exchange. And even as regards the first the reversioners could not be responsible for the money laid out by an alienee at his risk."

It is contended on behalf of Ila-ud-Din appellant that on the facts found the plea of acquiescence and equitable estoppel are fully made out. For the respondents it is contended that the findings on the question of acquiescence and estoppel are findings of fact and cannot be challenged in second appeal. There is no force in this objection, as the appellant does not seek to challenge the findings of fact. His contention is that the conclusions drawn from the findings of fact are not legitimate conclusions in law. There is force in this argument and I hold that the question raised is a question of law and not of fact.

In the case of Sewa Singh v. Ganeshi Lal (1) it was found that the reversioner in his capacity of a Lambardar had realized revenue from the alienee and it was held that a reversioner who recognises an alienee's right is estopped from disputing the validity of the alienation. Realizing revenue of the alienated land in the capacity of a Lambardar was held to be an act of acquiescence.

In the case of Ismail v. Jagannath (2) Mr. Justice Banerji held that the fact that the reversioner had signed the sale-deed executed by a Hindu widow established acquiescence on the part of the reversioner.

In the case of Ganda Singh v. Gulab Singh (3) it was held that a reversioner by attesting as a witness the deed of exchange of the property in dispute was estopped from contesting the validity of its alienation.

In the case of Gopi Chand v. Ram Chand (4) the facts were these:—The plaintiff sued for possession of a house property which had been sold by his father. The vendees had taken possession immediately on the sale and it was proved that soon afterwards they had commenced building and from time to time had continued their building operations, spending a considerable sum of money and largely enhancing the value of the property. The learned Judges Mr. Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Chevis, who decided the case, held that the plaintiff's long silence, coupled with the fact that he knew all along of the building operations, must be taken to show acquiescence in the alienation. In the opinion of the learned Judges on the facts of that case the plaintiff was held to be estopped from contesting the alienation.

In the present case the plaintiff knew perfectly well that out of the four collaterals three had clearly given their consent to the exchange. He himself did not put forward any objection to it. On the contrary he signed the Patwari's report in respect of the exchange and was present during the proceedings relating to mutation. The alienee commenced to construct a well by spending a considerable sum of money. The plaintiff then also did not raise any objection. When the well had been constructed and the value of the property had been considerably enhanced, plaintiff thought of defeating the rights of the alienee and laid claim to the property after its value had been enhanced. In my opinion the legitimate conclusion from the facts disclosed in this case is that the plaintiff had no objection to the exchange and had actively acquiesced in it; but now that he finds that the value of the property has been greatly increased, he wishes to avoid the exchange. He is clearly estopped from doing so and it will be highly inequitable to allow him to question the alienation after nearly six years.

I accordingly accept the appeal in respect of mutation No. 238 of 1913 and dismiss the suit of the plaintiff with respect to that portion of the claim. The decree of the lower Appellate Court will be modified to the extent above indicated. The parties will receive and pay costs throughout in proportion to their success and failure.

Appeal accepted; Decree modified.

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 59?; 8 P. W. R. 1910.
(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 255.
(3) 25 Ind. Cas. 724; 66 P. W. R. 1914; 159 P. L. R. 1914.
(4) 12 Ind. Cas. 729; 177 P. W. R. 1911.

MATA DIN v. MADHO CHARAN.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECTION 115 APPLICATION No 42 OF 1917.

April 10, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, J. C.

MATA DIN—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

MADHO CHARAN—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II Arts. 15, 35 (ii)—Suit for return of article lent or for compensation, whether cognisable by Court of Small Causes.

A suit for the return of an article lent by the plaintiff to the defendant or, in the alternative, for compensation is not cognisable by a Court of Small Causes. [p. 877, col. 2.]

Application for revision of the order of the Munsif, Sitapur (Exercising Small Cause Court powers), dated the 8th January 1917.

Mr. Ali Ausat, for the Applicant.

Mr. Ganga Dayal Khare, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application under section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, and the ground raised by the applicant, who was the plaintiff in the suit, is that the suit was not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. A reference to the plaint shows that the case was based upon the following allegations. The plaintiff alleged that he had lent, by way of bailment, a certain dushala to the defendant to enable him to go and pay a visit to some relations. It was alleged that the understanding between the parties was that the dushala was to be returned after the purpose for which it had been lent had been fulfilled. The plaintiff went on to say that the defendant had, in spite of a notice sent to him, refused to return the dushala. Consequently two reliefs were prayed for. In the first instance the Court was asked to pass a decree directing return of the dushala which the plaintiff had lent. In the alternative it was prayed that if for any reason the dushala could not be returned, the plaintiff should be awarded a sum of Rs. 100 compensation, that being the estimated value of the garment. It is a little difficult to understand how the case was dealt with after it was filed, as I have been unable to get any one to read the orders recorded on the plaint and the fard ahkam, but what I am inclined to think happened is this. The suit was clearly presented on the regular side. The Munsif for some reason or other called upon the plaintiff to show cause within four days why the suit should not be dealt with as a Small Cause Court suit. On the 6th June, the date fixed for the plaintiff's appearance in this matter, it is stated that the plaintiff did not appear; and thereafter we find an order transferring the case from the Court of the Munsif to the Court of the Bench of Honorary Munsifs. It may be remarked here incidentally that unless the case were a case of a Small Cause Court nature, the Bench of Honorary Munsifs would not be able to entertain it. After the case got to the Bench, the defendant made an application to the District Judge to have the case returned to the Court of the Munsif and an order was made accordingly. After the case was brought back, it seems to have been treated as a Small Cause Court case and thereafter all the proceedings taken by the Court were taken professedly in the exercise of Small Cause Court jurisdiction. I agree with the contention which has been put forward here on behalf of the applicant that the suit was not cognizable in the Court of Small Causes. So far as it was a suit for return of the specific article mentioned in the plaint, it fell within Article 15 of the Second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act; and so far as it purported to be a suit for compensation, it was excluded from the cognizance of the Small Cause Courts under Article 35 (ii), one of the new articles which have been introduced by Act VI of 1914. I should not have been disposed to interfere in this matter merely on the ground that there had been a wrong assumption of jurisdiction, for it is apparent that the case has been very carefully tried out by the Munsif, the record is a very voluminous one and it is not possible to argue that there was anything in the nature of a summary trial. But the fact remains that if the case is to be treated as having been dealt with on the Small Cause Court side, the party who has lost is deprived of the right of appeal. That is an important point to be borne in mind. Further this much is to be said in the plaintiff's favour that he took the case to the right tribunal in the first instance and it appears to be no fault of his that the case was subsequently transferred to the Small Cause Court side and dealt with there erroneously. I must allow the application. I set aside all the proceedings which have taken place including the decree. The case will be transferred to the Court of the Munsif of Biswan sitting at Sitapur, with directions to deal with it as an ordinary suit and give judgment accordingly. The plaintiff is entitled to his costs of this Court.

Application allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 274 OF 1916.

November 28, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Wilberforce.

JHANDA SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat LACHHMI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte decree—Suit to set aside decree, whether competent—Remedy, proper—Minor—Compromise sanctioned by Court under material misapprehension—Decree, whether binding on minor.

In order to impeach an ex parte decree not tainted with fraud, the proper remedy is by an appropriate proceeding taken in the suit in which the decree was passed, e. g., an application under Order IX, rule 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, to set aside the decree, or an application for review, or an appeal to a superior Court. A separate suit to set aside the decree will not lie. [p. 879, col. 1.]

Where the sanction of the Court is obtained to a compromise on behalf of a minor under a misapprehension of a material fact as to the true position of the minor, a decree based on such compromise is not binding on the minor. [p. 879, cols. 1 & 2.]

First appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Sialkote, dated the 16th December 1915.

Mr. Sham Lal, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Devi Dial and B. A. Cooper, for Musammat Lachmi Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The property in dispute belonged to one Jiwan, and was inherited upon his death by his son Buta Singh. It appears that Buta Singh died in 1892 and was succeeded by his mother, Musammat Bhagan. This lady remained in the enjoyment of the property for many years, and it appears that upon her death the collaterals of Buta Singh seized the estate. On the 8th of February 1914 Musammat Lachhmi, the daughter of Jiwan Singh and the sister of Buta Singh, brought a suit against the collaterals for the recovery of the property, and on the 29th of May 1914 a compromise was arrived at between the parties upon which a decree followed on the same date. The present plaintiffs, who were some of the defendants in that case, have brought this action for setting aside the decree based on the compromise. Their main contention is that the compromise was the result of a fraud practised upon them but they have produced no satisfactory evidence in support of their allegation. It is true that Musammat Lachhmi brought the previous suit on the ground that she, as the daughter of Jiwan, was entitled to succeed to the estate, and that she did not refer to the fact that Jiwan was succeeded by his son Buta Singh. It appears that Buta Singh died during his minority, and it is probable that she thought, as often happens in cases of this kind, that she was entitled to claim the estate as the daughter of his father. It is, however, clear that she did not intend to practise any fraud upon her adversaries, who, it is to be remembered belonged to the village of Jiwan and could easily ascertain the true fact if they were not already aware of it. Indeed, the judgment of the Divisional Judge, dated the 22nd of August 1912, to which they were parties, makes a distinct mention of Buta Singh and leads us to the conclusion that the collaterals were aware of the fact that Buta Singh inherited the estate on the death of his father. We consider that there was equal knowledge on both sides or, at any rate, means of knowledge, and that no fraud has been established. This ground of attack must, therefore, fail.

It is further contended that the plaintiffs were not present at the time when the compromise was arrived at and did not give consent to the terms of the compromise. The decree was consequently ex parte so far as they were concerned and should not adversely affect their interests in the estate. The simple answer to this contention is that the proper remedy to impeach a decree is by an appropriate proceeding taken in the suit in which the decree was passed, e. g., an application under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, to set aside the ex parte decree, or an application for review or an appeal to the superior Court. But if the decree is not tainted with fraud, no suit lies to set it aside, vide, inter alia, Sadho Misser v. Golab Singh (1).

Upon both the grounds set out above, the action brought by the plaintiffs must fail. It, however, appears that two of the plaintiffs, Budha Singh and Ishar Singh, are minors, and the case stands on quite a different footing so far as they are concerned. It is undeniable that the sanction of the Court to the compromise was obtained under a misapprehension of a material fact, viz., the status of Musammat Lachhmi qua the estate. She was represented as the daughter of the last male owner, but as a matter of fact she could come in only as a sister. There can be no manner of doubt that under the customary law there is a great deal of difference between the right of inheritance of a daughter and that of a sister, and that if the Subordinate Judge had been aware of the real state of affairs, he would not have sanctioned the compromise; indeed, Mirza Zafar Ullah, who sanctioned the compromise, has been examined as a witness and states that if he had been informed of the fact that Musammat Lachhmi was the sister of the last male owner, and not his daughter, he would not have granted the minor's guardian leave to enter into the compromise.

There can be no doubt that the compromise was sanctioned by the Court under a misapprehension of a material fact, and that the decree based upon such compromise is not binding upon the minors, vide Bibee Solomon v. Abdool Aeeez (2). It is unnecessary to consider whether it was due to fraud, practised by either of the parties to the previous litigation, or to the negligence of the guardian that the matter was not brought to the knowledge of the Court. In any case it is beyond dispute that an important fact was not present to the mind of the Court, and the compromise sanctioned under a misapprehension of the true position of the minors cannot stand.

We accordingly accept the appeal so far as to pass a decree in favour of the plaintiffs, Budha Singh and Ishar Singh, that the compromise, dated the 29th of May 1914, and the decree based thereupon, shall not be binding upon them. These plaintiffs are entitled to their costs in both the Courts. The appeal preferred by the other plaintiffs is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 3 C. W. N. 375

(2) 6 C. 687; 8 C. L. R. 169; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 446.

PATNA HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 196 & 197 OF 1917.
March 10, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Das and
Mr. Justice Adami.
IN F. A. No. 196 OF 1917
SHEOTAHAL SINGH AND OTHERS—
APPELLANTS
versus
B. ARJUN DAS AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS.
IN F. A. 197 OF 1917
SITA RAM SINGH AND ANOTHER—
APPELLANTS
versus
ARJUN DAS AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Manager, power of, to alienate family property, extent of—Test to be applied.

SHEOTAHAL SINGH v. ARJUN DAS

In order to determine whether a mortgage by the manager of a joint family is binding on the family, the real test is the benefit to the family and not a justifying legal necessity for the transaction. The manager of a joint family has implied authority to do whatever is best for all concerned and the test in each case is, was it a transaction into which a prudent owner would enter in order to benefit the estate. [p. 881, col. 2.]

Appeals from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Monghyr.

Messrs. Naresh Chandra Sinha and Sishir Kumar Mitra, for the Appellants.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, Gangadhar Das and Sivnandan Rai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

DAS, J.—These analogous appeals come before us from the judgment of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Monghyr and arise out of suits instituted by the respondents to enforce mortgage-bonds against the appellants.

It appears that the defendants in each of the actions are members of a joint Mitakshara Hindu family. The two families, who were once joint but are now separate, joined in taking a lease for 7 years of certain valuable lands in Mouza Chor Kusumbha, for which they had to pay a premium of Rs. 1,500. They paid the earnest money out of their own funds and on the 14th July 1909 they raised the balance from the plaintiff and executed the mortgage-bonds in question in his favour. Exhibit 1 is the mortgage bond executed by Sita Ram Singh, who is one of the appellants in First Appeal No, 197 of 1915. The other appellant in this appeal is the minor son of Sita Ram Singh. Exhibit 2 is the mortgage-bond executed by Sheo Tahal Singh and Ram Tahal Singh, who are the appellants in First Appeal No. 196 of 1917. The other appellants in this appeal are the minor sons of Ram Tahal Singh and a son of Sheo Tahal Singh, who was a minor at the time of the transactions in question but who has since attained majority. The learned Subordinate Judge discussed all the issues raised in the suit and gave the plaintiff the usual mortgage decrees.

The learned Vakil for the appellants, in the first place, urged before us that the signatures, purporting to be the signatures of Ram Tahal Singh as an attesting witness in Exhibit 1 and as one of the executants in Exhibit 2, are in fact not the signatures of Ram Tahal Singh and that the bonds consequently cannot be sued upon. In the second place he argued, an argument confined to First Appeal No. 196 of 1917, that Sheo Tahal Singh delivered to the plaintiff 3,969 maunds of grain valued at Rs. 7,131 12-0 by way of part payment and that the plaintiff ought to have given him credit for the whole of this amount in his account, whereas he has given him credit only for Rs. 1,000.

The consideration of these points need not detain us long. I will first deal with the question of forgery. On this point the chief criticism is that the Subordinate Judge should have given Ram Tahal Singh a reasonable opportunity to call a handwriting expert. After a careful perusal of the order-sheet in the case I am unable to agree with the learned Vakil. But although I am clearly of opinion that the question of adjournment was in the discretion of the learned Subordinate Judge and that it has not been shown in this case that that discretion was unreasonably exercised, still we intimated to the learned Vakil that we would give him an opportunity to call an expert witness, if the evidence recorded in the case left any doubt in our minds as to the genuineness of Ram Tahal's signatures. A perusal of the evidence in the record has, however, left no manner of doubt in our minds that the signatures of Ram Tahal in Exhibits 1 and 2 are genuine and that an impudent attempt has been made to escape from the liability under the mortgage-bonds.

It is worthy of note that though Ram Tahal denies his signatures in Exhibits 1 and 2, he admits having admitted execution of Exhibit 2 before the Sub-Registrar. His story is that he and his brother were threatened with a criminal prosecution if he refused to admit the execution of the document before the Sub-Registrar. This story I absolutely disbelieve for two reasons: first because until he filed his written statement in the Court he never told anybody that the plaintiff had caused his signature to be forged in Exhibit 2, although, if his evidence is to be believed, he certainly knew of the forgery on the 16th July 1909 when he admitted having executed the document before the Sub-Registrar, and secondly because Sheo Tahal in his written statement did not attack the signatures of his brother as forgeries although that would be a complete defence to the suit.

In my view the evidence is conclusive on this point, and it would have been useless to adjourn the hearing of the appeal to enable the appellants to call an expert witness. Experts, like lawyers, differ in their opinion, and when the admitted facts lead to one conclusion and to one conclusion only, it would be in the highest degree unsafe to rely on expert testimony, assuming that that testimony would be in favour of the appellants.

The second point is equally without merit. The plaintiff has produced his books of accounts, whereas the defendants have withheld them. There is, no endorsement of the payment of Rs. 7,131·12·0 on the back of the bond, although the bond itself provides that no payments other than those endorsed on the back of the bond would be recognised. I hold that the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge on these points is right and must be affirmed.

I now come to the main and indeed the only point in the case, namely whether the mortgage bonds are enforceable against the joint families. In his very able argument before us Mr. Naresh Chandra Sinha contended that the transactions must inevitably fail on the very recital of the necessity for the loans in the mortgage bonds themselves. The mortgage bonds show that the money was borrowed in order to pay the premium in respect of a lease for 7 years which they took from certain persons. It is established that the lease was of considerable benefit to the joint family, for though they had to pay a premium of Rs. 1,500 and a yearly rental of Rs. 30,000, they made a profit of Rs. 15,000 or Rs. 16,000. This is what Sheo Tahal himself, in the course of his evidence in a previous suit, admitted. Raj Kumar Singh, one of the witnesses called by the defendants, admitted that the income from the property taken over by the defendants was Rs. 40,000. In my view there can be no doubt at all that the families have greatly benefited by the mortgage transactions. The defence is, therefore, a dishonest one, but it may still be a legal one, and the question for our determination is—is the defence put forward by the defendants a legal defence?

Mr. Sinha argues that the real test is, not whether the transaction was for the benefit of the joint family but whether it was for a justifying legal necessity. I can find no support for this proposition in the cases. In the leading case of Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Musammat Babozee Munraj Koonwaree (1) Lord Justice Knight Bruce laid down the law as follows:—"The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge an estate not his own is, under the Hindu Law, a limited and qualified power. It can only be exercised rightly in a case of need, or for the benefit of the estate. But where, in the particular instance, the charge is one that a prudent owner would make in order to benefit the estate, the bona fide lender is not affected by the precedent mismanagement of the estate. The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it, in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded." This passage has always been understood as recognising the powers of the manager of a joint Hindu family to affect or dispose of joint family property in the ordinary course of management and for the benefit of the joint family. In my view the manager of a joint family has an implied authority to do whatever is best for all concerned, and the test in each case is, was it a transaction into which a prudent owner would enter in order to benefit the estate? Mr. Sinha, however, argues that the latest decisions of the Judicial Committee have modified the rule laid down by Lord Justice Knight Bruce and that the rule is now well-recognised that in order to bind the joint family properties the mortgagee must show that there was a justifying family or estate necessity for the loan. In other words, according to Mr. Sinha, the creditor must show that there was a calamity affecting the whole family requiring the alienation or that the support of the family rendered it necessary or that the indispensable religious duties made it unavoidable. It becomes necessary, therefore, to examine the cases on which Mr. Sinha relies.

The first case relied upon by Mr. Sinha is the case of Sahu Ram Chandra v.

(1) 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81*n*.; Sevestre 253*n*.; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147 (P.C.).

Bhup Singh (2). It was not suggested in that case that the joint family was in any way benefited by the debt contracted by the karta and consequently it was not necessary for the Judicial Committee to discuss the point that has been raised before us. But Lord Shaw in the course of his judgment did say as follows: "The law of the Mitakshara has, however, given to the father in his capacity of manager and head of the family certain powers with reference to the joint family property. The general principle in regard to that matter is that he is at liberty to affect or to dispose of the joint property in respect of purposes denominated necessary purposes. The principle in regard to this is analogous to that of the power vested in the head of a religious endowment or Mutb, or of the guardian of an infant. In all of the cases where it can be established that the estate itself, that is under administration, demanded, or the family interests justified, the expenditure, then those entitled to the estate are bound by the transaction." It will be noticed that the term deliberately used by Lord Shaw is "necessary purposes," which, in my view, is wider than the term "necessity". Family or estate necessity is undoubtedly a "necessary purpose" for which the manager of a joint Hindu family can affect or dispose of joint family property, but is by no means the only 'necessary purpose' contemplated by Hindu Law, as understood and administered in our Courts. In my view the case of Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (2), far from narrowing down the dictum of Lord Justice Knight Bruce, has recognised and approved of it.

The next case relied upon by Mr. Sinha is that of Palaniappa Chetty v. Sreemath Deivasikamony Pandara Sannadhi (3). In that case, the grant, at a fixed rent and on payment of a premium, of a permanent lease by a Shebait of a portion of the lands dedicated to the worship of the idol, of which he was a trustee, was in question before the Judicial Committee, and the Judicial Committee held that such a grant was invalid as against the successor in Shebaitship, as the evidence did not establish that the Shebait was constrained by any necessity to make such a lease, or that any benefit accrued to the estate from it. When the case is carefully examined, it will be found that the decision really rests on the view of the duty of a trustee to act in accordance with the trust deed. Lord Atkinson, in the course of his judgment, said as follows:—"Should the property, the subject of such an endowment as this, have been formally dedicated to the deity or the idol for worship in the temple by a deed of endowment, it would presumably contain directions as to the mode in which the property is to be used, and its income applied for the particular religious or charitable purposes mentioned in the instrument. But where, as in the present case, no deed of this kind is forthcoming, the rules according to which the property and its income are to be dealt with in order to carry out the intention of the original endower can only be ascertained by inference from the practice proved by evidence to have been followed in the particular case of Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (4). But these rules, so to be inferred, must not in their Lordships' view be inconsistent with or repugnant to the very nature and purpose of the endowment. If, for instance, the worship of the idol in the temple be intended to be perpetual, as it could hardly fail to be, then the preservation and use of the dedicated property to support and maintain that worship must, they think, be assumed to have been similarly intended to be perpetual. A rule, therefore, which would authorize and empower the Shebait of such a temple, arbitrarily, at his own mere will and pleasure, to alienate the dedicated property, either bit by bit or en bloc would be so repugnant to the whole purpose and object of the endowment that it could not, in their view, be rationally held to embody the intention of the original endower." He did undoubtedly examine the meaning of the terms "necessity" and "benefit of the estate": but I do not think that his judgment contains a complete definition of those terms. The arguments before us proceed on the hypothesis that the powers of a Shebait to affect or dispose of trust properties are exactly the same as those enjoyed by the manager of a joint family property. This, in my view, is a mistake. The powers are no doubt analogous to those of the manager of a joint family property, in the sense that they correspond or bear some resemblance or proportion to the powers of the manager of a joint family property; but still, in determining whether in a particular case the authority has been exceeded or not, we must have regard to what is usually done in the ordinary course of management. The manager of a joint Hindu family may embark in money-lending business in the ordinary course of management, and for that purpose sell a property, which brings no income to the family. But the Shebait of an idol may not do so, because such an act, unless empowered by the terms of the endowment, cannot be said to be in the ordinary course of management of the debettur property, and must, therefore, amount to a breach of trust. Where the manager of a joint Hindu family, in the ordinary course of management and for the benefit of the family, sells an unprofitable piece of land and invests the proceeds in a lucrative transaction, it is proper to imply a consent of all the persons entitled to that piece of land. It is impossible to imply the consent, either of the idol or of the founder of the endowment, where the Shebait, unless expressly permitted by the terms of the endowment, disposes of trust property for the purpose of embarking with the proceeds thereof in a lucrative and attractive business. I do not think that the decision of Lord Atkinson in any way helps the argument advanced on behalf of the appellants.

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 457; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.).

(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 722; 40 M. 709; 21 C. W. N. 729; 15 A. L. J. 485; 1 P. L. W. 697; 33 M. L. J. 1; 19 Bom. L. R. 507; 22 M. L. T. 1; (1917) M. W. N. 507; 26 C. L. J. 153; 6 L. W. 222; 44 I. A. 147 (P. C.).

(4) 33 Ind. Cas. 583; 43 C. 707; 20 C. W. N. 802; 14 A. L. J. 621; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 406; 31 M. L. J. 1; 18 Bom. L. R. 490; 3 L. W. 556; 24 C. L. J. 116; 20 M. L. T. 267; 43 I. A. 73 (P. C.).

The last case relied upon by Mr. Sinha—the case of Manna Lal v. Karu Singh (5)—is a direct authority against him. In that case, as in the case before us, one of the mortgages was expressed to be for payment of premium of a lease due in respect of a certain Mouza. That mortgage was upheld by the Judicial Committee as against coparceners, who were not parties to the mortgage transaction. If the decision of the Judicial Committee in the last mentioned case is right, then the argument advanced before us by Mr. Sinha must fail.

That being so, the only other question that remains for our consideration is—was this a transaction in the ordinary course of management and for the benefit of the joint family? It cannot be disputed that the transaction, in its result, has undoubtedly benefited the joint family. But Mr. Sinha has argued with considerable force that we must carefully scrutinize the purpose for which the transaction is entered into, and that if we are unable to say that benefit must inevitably accrue to the joint family, we ought not to uphold the transaction as against persons who are not parties thereto though, in the result, benefit has in fact accrued to them. The argument is in part unassailable, but I am unable to accept the whole of it. I quite agree that the manager of a joint family has no authority whatever to affect or dispose of any portion of joint family property in order to enable him to embark on speculative transactions, but I cannot say that the mortgagee must in each case satisfy the Court that the transaction was bound to benefit the joint family. There is a certain element of risk in every business transaction and if we are to hold that when the business has succeeded and the entire family has benefited by it, we ought not to uphold the mortgage transaction entered into by the manager to enable him to embark on such a business unless the mortgagee satisfies us that the business was bound to succeed and that benefit was bound to accrue to the family, we would unnecessarily handicap the managers of joint Hindu families and place a limitation on their powers which would have the effect of stopping all business transactions in every Mitakshara family. In this connection great reliance has been placed on the judgment of Mr. Justice Mookerjee in the case of Ohakouri Mahton v. Ganga Pershad (6), in which that great and distinguished Judge summarised the provisions of all the texts relating to the non-obligation of the son to pay the debt of the father. Commercial debt is said to be one of the debts which a son is not under any obligation to pay. The short answer to the argument is that Mr. Justice Mookerji was merely summarising the texts on the subject, not giving his decision on the texts. On referring to the texts, it will appear that Gautama is the only writer who says that the son is under no obligation to pay the commercial debts of the father. Gautama made no distinction between 'gambling debts' and 'commercial debts;' but neither in the Institutes of Manu nor in the Institutes of Yajnavalkya nor in the commentary on Yajnavalkya by the author of Mitakshara is 'commercial debt' mentioned as one of the debts which a son is under no obligation to pay, although in each of them 'gambling debt' is mentioned as a debt which a son is exempt from paying. It was argued that it is at times difficult to distinguish between gambling debts and commercial debts. That may be so, but the mere difficulty of distinguishing between the two is no ground for holding that a son is not bound to pay the commercial debts of the father. The question is, in each case, a question of fact, and will be decided by application of principles which are well recognized in Courts of law. The question of the liability of the son to pay the debt of the father does not, however, directly arise in this case, though it may be conceded that a transaction which a son is not bound to recognize after the death of the father, is not a transaction which can be said to have been entered into in the ordinary course of management. In this case, we are concerned with the power of the manager of a joint family of taking a beneficial lease for the benefit of the joint family. The test, in my view, is was it a transaction into which a prudent owner would enter in the ordinary course of business; if it was, then the transaction ought to be upheld. In this case I have no doubt at all that the transaction was one into which a prudent owner would enter in the ordinary course of management of joint family properties. The lease was a lease of 3,000 bighas of khudkasht land and there was every probability that the transaction would be a profitable one for the joint family. It has undoubtedly been a profitable one and in my view the mortgage bonds ought to be enforced as against the joint families. In my view, the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge is right and ought to be affirmed. I would therefore dismiss these appeals with costs.

(5) 56 Ind. Cas. 766; 1 P. L. T. 6 (P. C.).

(6) 12 Ind Cas. 609; 15 C. L. J. 228; 16 C. W. N. 519; 39 C. 862.

ADAMI, J.—I agree.

Appeals dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3077 OF 1918.

December 1, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau.

LUCHHMAN DASS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

DEVI DIAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, rr. 3, 4—Dismissal for default—Application to set aside order—Forum, proper.

An order of dismissal for default can, under rule 4 of Order IX of the Civil Procedure Code, be set aside only by the Court which passed the order. [p. 585, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Shahpur, at Sargodha, dated the 29th June 1918, affirming that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Shahpur, dated the 28th January 1918.

Mr. Badar Din Qureshi for Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ganpat Rai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs in this case sued for Rs. 592 on the basis of an agreement to supply wheat. The suit, after being first sent for disposal to the Court of the Munsif of Shahpur, was transferred to the Court of the Munsif of Bhera, who on the 24th April 1915 dismissed it for default. The plaintiffs, who had received no intimation of the date for the hearing of the case, made an application to the Senior Subordinate Judge at Sargodha, on the 9th June 1915, inquiring in which Court the case was and asking that if it had been dismissed, it might be restored. Enquiry was made in the office and it was ascertained that the suit had been dismissed for default by the Munsif of Bhera. The plaintiffs then on the 14th June made a fresh application for the restoration of the case to the Senior Subordinate Judge, who sent it for disposal to the Munsif of Sargodha. The latter restored the case to the file and finally passed a decree for Rs. 440 in the plaintiffs' favour. The decree has been upheld by the District Judge, and the defendants have filed a second appeal in this Court.

The two main contentions on behalf of the appellants are (1) that the Munsif of Sargodha had no jurisdiction to set aside the order of the Munsif of Bhera dismissing the suit for default and (2) that the application for restoration of the case was barred by limitation.

The first contention is correct, for reading together rules 3 and 4 of Order IX, Civil Procedure Code, it is clear that the Court which can under rule 4 set aside an order dismissing a suit for default is the Court which passed the order of dismissal. The application made by the plaintiffs for the case to be restored could not be entertained either by the Senior Subordinate Judge to whom it was made or by the Munsif of Sargodha to whom it was sent. Shib Lal v. Paras Ram (1), which is referred to by the learned District Judge, is not in point, because in that case the application in question, which was one for setting aside an ex parte decree, had actually been made to the Court which passed the decree, although it was afterwards transferred to another Court. Had the plaintiffs' application in the present case been made to the Munsif of Bhera and then transferred to the Court of Munsif of Sargodha, the latter would no doubt have been competent to dispose of it, but this was not done. The application was presented to a Court which had no jurisdiction and was also disposed of by a Court which had no jurisdiction. The order of the Munsif of Sargodha setting aside the dismissal of the suit having been passed without jurisdiction, it follows that all the subsequent proceedings in the suit are ultra vires, and the decree must consequently be set aside.

There is no necessity to go into the question of limitation and consider whether the District Judge was right in applying section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code.

I accept the appeal, reverse the decrees of the Courts below, and restore the order of the Munsif of Bhera by which the suit was dismissed for default. Under the circumstances I direct that the parties shall bear their own costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 242; 84 P. W. R. 1917; 86 P. L. R. 1917.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SUIT No. 365 OF 1917.

September 24, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Kemp, A. J. C.

FIRM OF GOBINDRAM—PLAINTIFFS

versus

FIRM OF KHUSHALDAS—DEFENDANTS.

Contract, construction of—Contract for delivery of sugar—Contract on "usual terms"—Late shipment—Office contracts, meaning of—Shortage of steamers—Force majeure clause, when can be taken advantage of.

Plaintiffs entered into four contracts with the defendants at Karachi on the "usual terms" for the purchase of 60 tons of Java sugar, July-September 1917 shipment. Owing to the war and the Government requisitioning tonnage, part of the July 1917 shipment was shut out at Java and July shipment goods arrived in Karachi, some in August 1917 and the remainder in February 1918. Plaintiffs demanded delivery of the goods in August 1917 and were informed that July shipment goods were still to come. In September they again demanded delivery and were informed that the defendants were entitled to perform at any time up to the arrival of the steamer. In response to a further demand for delivery the defendants intimated that they had been advised that on account of Government requisitioning steamers August and subsequent shipments would be late and that it would be taken as a case of "Force majeure." The plaintiffs were also informed that the defendants were entitled to tender delivery at any time until arrival of the last steamer of July shipment, which was yet to come. In October, that is, before the last steamer arrived, plaintiffs instituted the present suit claiming damages for breach of contract owing to defendants' failure to tender the sugar of the July shipment by 12th September 1917, the latest date by which such shipment sugar could be tendered for delivery under the contracts. The defendants contended that the contracts were made on the usual terms of office contracts, by virtue of which in case of delay in shipment due to unavoidable circumstances they were exempt from liability. In other words, the benefit of what is known in the contract forms of importing firms as the "Force majeure" clause was claimed:

Held, (1) that the contracts between the parties were on the terms of the office contracts with the buyers, meaning thereby that the parties were bound by the terms of those contracts as to whether the goods tendered were such as could be tendered as July shipment goods; [p. 909, col. 2: p. 910, col. 1.]

(2) that the defendants were entitled to wait till the arrival of the last steamer, and could take advantage of the "Force majeure" clause; [p. 910, col. 1; p. 909, col. 1]

(3) that the plaintiffs' suit, having been instituted before the arrival of the last steamer, was premature and must be dismissed. [p. 913, col. 1.]

Mr. Ruxchand Billaram, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. T. G. Elphinston, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—By four contracts of different dates in 1917 made on "usual terms," defendants agreed to sell plaintiffs in all 600 tons white Java sugar July-September 1917 shipment, 3 equal lots at different rates. The four acceptance memos. relating to these four contracts have been put in and marked Exhibits 1 to 4 in the case. The contracts were entered into on the following dates, for the following quantities and at the following rates:—

Contract	dated	20-3-17	for	75	tons	at	19	0	0	per cwt.	(Ex. 1)
"	"	31-3-17	"	150	"	"	18	14	0	"	(Ex. 2).
"	"	11-7-17	"	225	"	"	17	8	6	"	(Ex. 3)
"	"	21-7-17	"	150	"	"	19	13	0	"	(Ex. 4)

The acceptance memos, Exhibits 1 and 2, describe the contracts referred to in them as having been made on "usual terms," etc., and acceptance memos. Exhibits 3 and 4 describe the contracts referred to in them as "subject to usual terms and conditions." The present suit relates to the July shipments aggregating 200 tons.

Plaintiffs claim that defendants committed breach of the contract in that they failed to tender the sugar of the July shipment by the 12th September 1917, the latest date when according to the plaintiffs such shipment of sugar could be tendered for delivery under the contract. They fix this date thus. They concede that the 10th August is the latest date for shipment at Java of July shipment and calculating that the voyage, without transhipment, from Java to Karachi would take three weeks and allowing 10 or 11 days for the ship to discharge her cargo on to the Bunder and for the seller to obtain the necessary delivery orders, etc, the 12th September 1917 is the reasonable date on which to expect the latest July shipment goods to be ready for delivery. The plaintiffs thereupon assess their damages as of that date at Rs. 15,515 10 0, being the aggregate amount payable under the contracts on the basis of the difference between the market rate of 12th September 1917 (Rs. 22-8-0) and the contract rates.

Defendants in their written statement contend that the contracts were made on the usual terms of office contracts by virtue of which delay in shipment due to unavoidable circumstances exempts the seller from liability. In other words, the defendants claim the benefit of what is known in the contract forms of the importing firms as the "Force Majeure" clause. The position is this. Neither the plaintiffs nor the defendants themselves import Java sugar. By their contracts they contemplate a sale of imported goods of a certain shipment ex Bunder. Performance may take place at any time upto the last date that July shipment goods can arrive and be available for delivery. Thereafter, the sale will not be ex-Bunder. But the parties have made their contract according to the terms of the office contracts, and by these July shipment goods, though shipped late, are still under certain circumstances regarded as July shipment goods and in some cases, only if the office insists on the performance. Therefore, defendants say, plaintiffs must wait till the arrival of such goods for the defendants to perform. It depends on the terms of each office contract whether the goods late shipped are by the indent to be accepted, i.e, regarded as July shipment. If they are not, then the defendants cannot rely on them as July shipment goods. This is what is meant when it is said that the "Force Majeure" clause is inserted in the contracts between the parties.

Now it is common ground that the goods shipped between 20th June and 10th August at Java are by the custom of trade regarded as July shipment goods. The defendants' contention operates on the following state of affairs which arose in 1917. Defendants say that owing to Government requisitioning all steamers of the only two regular lines of steamers that run from Java to Karachi, part of the July 1917 shipment sugar was shut out at Java. Whereas sugar of July shipment would in ordinary times arrive at Karachi at the latest in the beginning of September and be available for delivery about the date the plaintiffs contend for, it happened that in the present case, owing to the Government requisitioning the steamers, the last steamer to leave Java before the Government action was the S. S. "Rajah" which arrived here on 15th August 1917. As a matter of fact, another steamer with July shipment goods arrived here after the S. S. "Rajah" although leaving Java before her. That steamer was the S. S. "Dogra" which did not arrive here till 20th August 1917. Defendants say that there were 300 tons of July shipment belonging to David Sassoon and a quantity of similar shipment goods belonging to an Indian importer Gobindram Murlidhar, which were shut out at Java, and owing to the impossibility of obtaining tonnage these goods could not be shipped until so late as January or February 1918 on board the S. S. "Kanjean," which arrived at Karachi on 25th February 1918. Defendants say the time for performance remained open till then, as delay in shipment owing to war causes beyond the control of the importers is provided for by the terms of the contracts of the importing firms and by David Sassoon's indent and such delay is, therefore, provided for in their contracts as a "usual term" of the offices. If the plaintiffs had desired performance of the contracts, the defendants would have tendered them a delivery order from David Sassoon by the terms of whose indent the goods, though shut out, were a good tender of July shipment to their buyers. Gobindram Murlidhar's contract with his buyers being on the same terms as that of an importing firm with a printed form of contract, a delivery order tendered to plaintiff by the defendants would have had the same effect. At any rate the defendants say plaintiffs were bound to wait till the "Kanjean's" arrival to see if defendants would perform and if there had been breach then by the defendants, they would be liable at the market rate of that day for July shipment goods. They say that the "Force Majeure" clause contained in the offices' contracts extended the time for performance till the arrival of S. S. "Kanjean".

One can grasp that position better if one considers the various kinds of transactions in Java sugar which are entered into in this city, but before doing so I may refer to one further point at issue between the parties and that is this, that whilst both parties admit that July shipment covers goods shipped on board ten days before and 10 days after the shipment month July, the defendants contend that the goods are of July shipment if delivered at wharf of the port of shipment within the shipment period, viz., 20th June to 10th August. The defendants also contend that apart from the incorporation by the use of the phrase "usual terms" of the "Force Majeure" clause in the importing firms' contracts into their contracts with the plaintiffs, the action of the Government in requisitioning steamers was such as to excuse the delay in performance or the performance altogether by the defendants of the contracts. The written statement is shockingly drawn and is a model of vagueness, but this I take to be the meaning of clause 6 of the written statement, which is apparently an attempt to rely on those recent decisions which have inserted the existence of an implied condition of possibility of performance into certain contracts and to add to them the further question whether the delay excused is such as to defeat the commercial venture or not.

Also it must not be forgotten that as the case was filed long before the "Kanjean" landed at Java, defendants could not very well say in it which particular office's indent would apply.

Now to properly understand this case, it is necessary to have in view the kinds of transactions which are entered into here in Java sugar. The persons engaging in this business are, firstly, the importing firms, most of whom are Europeans. All these European firms have printed indent forms containing the terms on which they do the business with their buyers. Strictly speaking, these are not indents, for the importing firms do not place orders for the dealers but themselves buy in Java and sell to them direct. Some of the Indian importers have no printed contract forms and it is alleged that the terms on which they do business are the general terms, of the importing firms who have printed contract forms. Most of the European firms' forms of contracts have been put in (see Exhibit 30, 39 and 161). Some, if not all, of the European importing firms also buy and sell locally. In some instances they have special local purchase and sale forms, (see Exhibits 89, 139 and 175) in others they transpose the words "buyer" and "seller" in their indent forms (Exhibit 75). Besides the importing firms there are the local buyers and sellers.

Now, owing to the Government requisitioning ships, of the two lines which ordinarily carried this commodity from Java to Karachi, a portion of the July shipment sugar was shut out at Java. It is a point in issue whether it could or could not have been brought here between the arrival of S. S. "Dogra" on 20th August 1917 and the arrival of the S. S. "Kanjean" on 25th February 1918. At any rate the consequence was that a large number of disputes arose in the bazar. In the first place there were the importing firms on the one hand and their buyers on the other. Then there were the local sellers and the local buyers. A large number of suits were filed in this Court involving many lacs of rupees. The European firms, whose contracts contained printed clauses as to arbitration, claimed the benefit of those clauses and some of those suits were disposed of by arbitrators' or umpires' awards. As between the importing firm, however, which had a printed form of contract and its buyer the terms, at any rate, of the contracts were ascertained, although there might be a dispute as to the applicability or construction of those terms. The case of the local seller and buyer presented more difficulty. Apart from European importing firms who sold or bought locally, the local sales and purchases of the dealers in the bazar assumed a variety of forms. Speaking firstly of the existing practice, when a contract is made between a local seller and a local buyer, it is evidenced by a document called an acceptance letter or memo. signed by the merchant and purporting to confirm the contract made. Exhibits 1 to 4, 64 and 65 may be taken as examples of such memos in this suit and it is the meaning of the words "usual terms" which I am called upon to decide. Sometimes the acceptance memo. was on "Sidi Chiti Office" terms, in which case a direct or clean delivery order, i. e, one without any intermediate endorsements of any importing firms would have to be given. "Sidi" means direct and the advantage of this form of contract was that the buyer obtained delivery quicker, and for this he had to pay 2 annas or 3 annas more in the rate. Or again the memo. might be on "Sidi Chiti a named office" terms, in which case a direct delivery, order of that importing office had to be tendered. Or the memo. might be on "Sidi Chiti any European office" terms. in which case the direct delivery order of a European office had to be given. Lastly the memo. might state the particular indent, in which case the number of the indent was inserted in the memo. and goods of that indent had to be tendered.

So much for the existing practice, but it is material to consider what was the earlier practice, i. e., before outbreak of the war in 1914, as it is argued that the words now in use, viz, "usual terms" is the equivalent of the expressions used before acceptance memos. came into force and in consequence, each side relies on the meaning of the expressions formerly employed to support his construction of the meaning of "usual terms."

Now, before 1914, instead of an acceptance memo on "usual terms" being passed, brokers used to note the contract in the merchant's book as on "office Dhara terms," or, according to the plaintiffs, with those words in conjunction with the words "Bunder delivery" either preceding or following them. As, however, some merchants began to repudiate the authority of the brokers, the acceptance memos. came into force after 1914 and in these acceptance memos. we find instead the words 'usual terms.' This expression is, therefore, intended to cover what was intended to be conveyed before 1914 by the words "office Dhara" according to defendants and "office Dhara Bunder delivery" or 'Bunder delivery, office Dhara' according to the plaintiffs. Plaintiffs' contention is that, "office Dhara" whether alone or with the words "Bunder delivery", meant nothing more than that the delivery was to be according to the custom of the importing offices. Defendants say that the word 'office Dhara' meant that the contract was according to the terms of the importing offices and did not mean that only the delivery was according to the practice of those offices. The defendants say, the words 'Bunder delivery' have nothing to do with the words 'office Dhara' and mean simply that the goods are to be taken delivery of from the Import Yard as distinguished from the godown.

Defendants say that under such a contract on 'office Dhara' or 'usual terms' it was open to them to deliver sugar of any office if of proper shipment according to the terms of that office indent.

The following steamers brought July 1917 shipment goods from Java :—

S. S. "Bahadur" arriving Karachi 26th July 1917.

S. S. "Rajah" arriving Karachi 15th August 1917.

S. S. "Dogra" arriving Karachi 20th August 1917.

The next steamer to arrive was the S. S. "Kanjean" which left Java in January 1918 and arrived here on 25th February 1918.

On 21st August 1917 plaintiffs' Pleaders wrote to defendants saying that the last steamer bringing July shipment goods, viz., S.S. "Dorga," had arrived and demanding delivery (Exhibit 5). On 23rd August 1917 defendants replied saying July shipment goods were still to come (Exhibit P 6). On 8th September 1917 plaintiffs' Pleaders again wrote asking for delivery (Exhibit 7). Defendants replied by their letter of 13th September 1917 (Exhibit 8), saying they were entitled to perform at any time up to the arrival of the last steamer. On 17th September 1917 the plaintiffs sent their letter of demand (Exhibit 9). Defendants on 18th September 1917 (Exhibit 10) intimated that the offices and merchants had advised them that on account of Government requisitioning steamers August and subsequent shipments would be late and they intimated plaintiffs that it will be taken as a case of 'Force Majeure'. On 29th September 1917 defendants replied (Exhibit 10A) through their Pleaders to plaintiffs' Pleaders' letter of demand, saying defendants were entitled to tender delivery at any time until arrival of last steamer of July shipment which was yet to come. On 1st October 1917 plaintiffs filed this suit. Defendants filed their written statement on 19th November 1917.

Under these circumstances my predecessor in office Mr. Crouch on 14th December 1917 framed the following issues (I read them:—

1. What were the terms of the contract? (covers paragraph 2 of the plaint and 2 of written statement).

2. When did the last steamer of July shipment arrive?

3. Has there yet been breach of contract to sell and deliver sugar July shipment?

4. Are the plaintiffs estopped from contending that the July shipment is not outcoming? (Paragraph 5 of written statement).

5. Is the contract with regard to July shipment void on the ground of impossibility of performance?

6. Is defendant protected in respect of non performance or delay in performance by the 'Force Majeure' clause, if any?

7. What damages, if any, are plaintiffs entitled to?

The case was commenced before him and on 13th March 1918 he began to hear the evidence. His last hearing of the case was in May. Thereafter he went on furlough. I considered it desirable to re-hear the evidence that had been taken before him, as it appeared to me that the procedure that had been adopted in calling, first, the defendant for cross-examination only and then the plaintiff and his witnesses for cross-examination only might be open to grave objection. I, therefore, tried the case de novo. I do not know where and how I could have proceeded with the evidence at the state at which it had been left. I had also in mind the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Lal Kunwar v. Chiranji Lal (1), where their Lordships condemned the practice of compelling a plaintiff to call the defendant as his witness. It followed that as it appeared to me that the trial had up to the date Mr. Crouch left been irregular, I was unable to allow any of the evidence already recorded before him to be put in before me as such evidence could not be said to have been taken according to law, there having been no examination of the witnesses but merely cross-examination. I have had to mention this at some length, because both parties have continually wished to refer to what the witnesses who were called before Mr. Crouch said before him and I have had to rule it out. Although the case was in consequence lengthened, I felt it safer to restart the evidence from the beginning.

(1) 5 Ind Cas 549; 37 I. A. 1; 14 C. W. N. 285; 11 C. L. J. 172; 7 M. L. T. 57; (1910) M. W. N. 8; 12 Bom. L. R. 244, 20 M. L. J. 182; 32 A. 104 (P. C.).

Each party had charged the other with having altered his case since the hearing before Mr. Crouch. Plaintiffs say defendants' case as made out in paragraph 2 of the written statement is that the contracts were made on the usual terms of office contracts and that the case made out in the evidence is that only the terms of the particular office apply whose delivery order the seller selects to tender, I have already pointed out that the written sta'ement has not been very clearly drawn, but it was filed before the S. S. "Kanjean" arrived and it is clear that what the defendants have throughout been contending for is that if plaintiffs wanted performance, they were bound to wait till the arrival of the S. S. "Kanjean" before they could claim defendants had committed breach of the contracts, because on board the S. S. "Kanjean" were July shipment goods which the defendants might still have been able to tender and which, although late shipped, were so under contracts covered by a term to be found in every office contract, viz, the clause relating to 'Force Majeure' which was, therefore, one of the 'usual terms' in the contracts between plaintiffs and defendants. The correspondence shows this, as the defendants in effect wrote on 13th September 1917 (Exhibit 8) saying they were entitled to perform at any time up to the arrival of the last steamer. See also their letters (Exhibits 10 and 10A) of 18th September 1917 and 25th September 1917. It must not be forgotten that the written statement was filed before it was known the "Kanjean" could load, so defendants could not very well say at the time the terms of David Sassoon's or Gobindram Murlidhar's indent would apply until they knew what goods were coming and by which steamer. Plaintiffs do not go so far as to say that 'the seller must have already purchased goods when he makes the contract of sale. The evidence shows he need not. The point is, when could it be said the defendants could no longer perform their contract? Plaintiffs say when the July shipment goods ex-S.S. "Dogra" were ready for delivery. Defendants say when the July shipment goods aboard the S. S. "Kanjean" were ready for delivery and if he failed to tender them. This turns on the question, was the 'Force Majeure' clause in the office indents included in the contracts between the parties?

I do not think too great attention should be paid to the attempt of the witnesses who after all were only laymen to define the meaning of 'usual terms.' Plaintiffs' witnesses all meant the same thing, viz., that if by the office's indent the goods were tenderable as of the particular shipment, they were also so tenderable as between plaintiffs and defendants. They have expressed this in a variety of ways by saying the contracts of the importing offices apply, and that the terms of the office whose delivery order is tendered apply. The 'Force Majeure' clause is a clause common to all the indents and is also in David Sassoon's indent.

The first issue is what were the terms of the contract between the parties? In order to determine this we must ascertain what the parties intended by 'usual terms.' Now the first thing to note is that defendants were not selling to plaintiffs ready goods in the bazar, which they could have no apprehension they might be unable to supply. They were selling goods of a particular shipment which were to be brought from Java. There were many unforeseen things that might happen to the goods before reaching the ship and which might cause delay in shipment. It is unlikely that when the offices who import these goods inserted in their contracts with the buyers all kinds of conditions to safeguard them (the importers) against the possibility of events, over which they had no control, delaying shipment, local sellers could contract for the sale of goods to be imported without such or similar conditions. If the importers considered the probability of their being able to ship the goods within the shipment period was not unaccompanied by a certain degree of risk, it could scarcely be expected that local sellers would contract unconditionally to supply such goods. This seems to me a point against plaintiffs' contention that the words 'usual terms' merely referred to the method of giving delivery of the goods.

We have the origin of this term disclosed in the evidence. There is no disagreement about this, at any rate that before the war the brokers used to note the contracts in the books of the merchants but since the war the practice has been to pass acceptance memos. In these acceptance memos. are found the words 'usual terms'. There is a dispute as to what were the words used when the brokers noted the contracts.

The evidence shows the words were 'office Dhara' with or without the words 'Bunder delivery,' which when accompanying 'office Dhara' sometimes preceded and sometimes followed those words. Plaintiffs, in order to associate the 'Dhara' with the delivery to which alone they say it applied, attempted at first to show that the words 'office Dhara' never occurred alone but were always accompanied by the words 'Bunder delivery.' This, however, is not so. Defendants' witness, Ramji Kewalram, has produced his soudas book, which shows entries of soudas made by the broker in which the words 'office Dhara' appears unaccompanied by the words 'Bunder delivery' (see Exhibit 138). It is true that these are the only entries in the whole book in which the words 'office Dhara' appear alone, but the fact that the words are entered there alone tends to show that there is no connection between the 'office Dhara' and the delivery at the Bunder. I take this to be the effect of all such entries shown in the evidence. If this be the effect, then the mercantile equivalent before the war of the words 'usual terms' was the terms of the offices. Other entries in which the words 'office Dhara' appear alone are Exhibit 11, a Kutcha slip sent by plaintiffs' Shikarpur branch to plaintiffs in Karachi and containing the terms of a contract on which plaintiffs here issued an acceptance memo (Exhibit 12), Exhibits 114 5, Noondh entries of 1913 and 1915, and Exhibit 103 which is an entry of a contract in the books of defendants' witness Abdul Husain. This last witness says he has 27 souda entries in which the words 'office Dhara' alone appear. It is true that they go over a period of some years but the point is they are sufficiently numerous to show the words 'Bunder delivery' were not omitted by accident. These entries were made before the disputes had arisen. Moreover, the occurrence of the words 'Bunder delivery' in close proximity if not next to words 'office Dhara' does not by any means suggest that one qualifies the other. I think it is probable in writing the contract they would appear in juxtaposition.

If we turn to see how the same idea that was present to the minds of these parties was expressed by other merchants in their local sales and purchases of this commodity, we find the following expressions used in the market.

In Exhibits 27 and 28 (two acceptance memos.) "subject to usual office agreement terms", in Exhibits 54 and 55 (five acceptance letters) "subject to usual agreement terms", in Exhibits 89 and 90 (David Sassoon's local purchase and repurchase forms) "Ex-Bunder Karachi including duty usual term", in Exhibit 175 (Louis Dreyfus & Co.'s local purchase form) "on usual Bunder terms", Exhibit 139 (Mitsui Bushan Kaisha's local sale form) "terms as customary," Exhibit 104 (acceptance letter) "subject to usual terms" and again "according to office terms", Exhibits 103, 114 and 115 (Noondh entries of soudas) "office Dhara", and Exhibit 138 "office Dhara". Exhibit 27 is an important document. It is an acceptance memo. passed to plaintiffs themselves and it contains the words "usual office agreement terms." Teckchand, one of the partners in plaintiffs' firm though not the principal partner, when called upon to explain this, could only say the person who passed his acceptance memo. Exhibit 27, one Chandumal Chellaram, wrote it in English and he did not understand it. Then there are other entries relating to soudas in which the words "office Dhara" and "Bunder delivery" are separated by other words, showing that there could be no connection between them. These are Exhibit 138 (a series of entries in the witness Tekchand Pershotam's book) and Exhibit 87 (an entry in the broker Poker Kishindas and Co's Noondh).

Exhibit 87, after mentioning "the rate of Rs. 15-10-6 per cwt Bunder delivery," continues "the purchaser will be responsible for the increase and decrease in customs duty according to office usage," etc. This clearly shows that there could be no connection between the delivery and the "office Dhara." I think the deduction from all these documents is that the words "usual terms" were not intended to be restricted to the method of delivery. They suggest there are some terms which are current in the trade and so well known as to be incorporated without being specifically set out in the acceptance memos. I draw this conclusion not only from the absence of all connections in the memos. between such expressions as "usual terms", "terms as customary," "office Dhara" "and delivery," but also because, as we have seen, in the case of local purchase forms of several large firms we have an express reference to the terms intended being without words of qualification the terms of the offices. Moreover in Rupchand Ramchand v. Hukumatrai (2) we have a judicial interpretation of the translation of "office Dhara".

Before proceeding to the oral evidence of the witnesses as to the meaning of the words "usual terms" it is advisable to refer to the procedure in this business which the parties have sought to avail themselves of to support their respective contentions. I refer firstly to the sending of 'miti khari' notices. A 'miti khari' notice is a notice of arrival of the ship or readiness to deliver. The former practice used to be that when the ship carrying the particular shipment goods arrived, the importing firm sent a 'miti khari' notice to its buyer. That buyer endorsed the date with his buyer and sent the notice on to him and so on. Ultimately the last buyer went to the office of the importing firm, paid the price and obtained the delivery order. Accounts between the different sellers and buyers were subsequently adjusted (see evidence of Yusifali, lines 296 7). It is noteworthy that so long as the original chits were handed on, it was impossible for the local sellers to notify arrival of a quantity exceeding that stated in the original 'miti khari' notice. After the war, the buyer from the importing firm, on receipt of a notice of arrival from the firm, went to the office and paid the price and received the delivery orders. This delivery order was handed on from buyer to buyer and the last holder went for delivery. At the same time the 1st buyer and subsequent buyers also issued 'miti khari' notices on themselves to the purchaser but they did not state the quantity of the goods that had arrived nor the name of the steamer (see Exhibit 103). The object of this was to intimate a readiness to deliver and if, say, only 20 tons out of 50 tons contracted for were delivered under the miti khari notice of tender of the whole quantity, the rate was settled in one way or another. The point is that this practice enabled local sellers to profess to tender for much larger quantities than they would get under the delivery orders and thus encouraged speculation. Ultimately the evidence shows the issue by a local seller of the miti khari notice became altogether independent of the arrival of a ship and was utilized merely as an expression by the local sellers of an intimation to conclude the contract either by payment of damages at the market rate, effecting a cross contract or what is known as 'pich pichao.' This last expression is the settlement by which if various sellers and buyers have contracted with one another so that their transactions go round in a circle they meet together and adjust the transactions inter se. All these various ways of settling contracts are known as "bhugtan" (lit. fed.) These expressions have been used over and again in the evidence and I have, therefore, had to refer to them. The form of miti khari notice, therefore, issued since 1914 by the local sellers on their buyers did not contain the name of the importing firm whose delivery order was going to be tendered. A specimen of such notice is Exhibit 42.

This evidence regarding miti khari notices and the practice in respect of them before and after the outbreak of the war was really led to support the defendants' contention that the parties to contracts in the bazar adopted the same procedure on the ship's arrival as the importing firms did and did so in order to entail the same consequences on their buyer as followed under the terms of the indents from the service of a 'miti khari' notice on the buyer from an importing firm, viz., liability for demurrage, interest, etc, if delivery was not taken within a certain time from receipt of such notice. Defendants wanted to show that the local sellers imposed these same conditions on their buyers and to deduce therefrom that 'usual terms' or 'office Dhara' meant the terms of the offices. But it is clear from the evidence that defendants' contention cannot receive support from the practice of imitating, when a ship actually arrives, the procedure adopted by the importing firms, because the despatch of a miti khari notice has now degenerated into a method of intimating a desire to settle the contract and none of the consequences contemplated by the importing firm's notice could in such a case follow.

(2) 42 Ind. Cas. 829; 11 S. L. R. 56 at p. 59.

There has been a good deal of guess work by the various witnesses on both sides as to within what time the bazar requires a buyer to take delivery. At one time plaintiffs allege that there was a written bazar agreement on the point which required delivery to be taken within 16 days, but that agreement has been burnt and only secondary evidence of its contents can be given (see evidence of plaintiff line 331 and of Kodumal). Mr. Rupchand for plaintiffs, however, does not rely on this agreement. Turning to the importing contracts it will be seen that some of them (e. g., E. D Sassoon's and Volkart's, Exhibits 32 and 33 respectively) give the buyer 7 days for taking delivery, whilst others (e. g. David Sassoon and Ralli, Exhibits 30 and 31) give him 10 days. David Sassoon's indents provide for a re-sale and brokerage, warehousing, fire insurance, commission and interest charges after the 10 days allowed for delivery. Ralli's indent contains a similar clause except that interest is charged at 9 per cent. from the 11th day, instead of at 6 per cent. from 11th to the 20th day after ship's arrival and thereafter at 9 per cent. as provided for in David Sassoon's indent. E. D. Sassoon's and Volkart's indents provide for interest at 9 per cent. after 7 days from steamer's arrival. Volkarts also can claim $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. re sale brokerage, whilst David Sassoon's indent provides for $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. There are thus minor points of difference and it is in evidence that the firms only insist on their strict rights as to re sale, brokerage, commission, etc, when a buyer has given them a lot of trouble (see evidence of defendants' witness Nusserwanji, line 360). There seems to have been a general idea in the bazar that the terms between the offices and their buyers should regulate the dealings between the local sellers and buyers, for we find the plaintiff Tekchand at line 313 of his evidence admitting that the former practice was that interest was charged according to the contract of the office when delivery order was given, but he continues to say that interest is now charged after 7 days according to the bazar agreement which was burnt. It is to be noted that 7 days is the period provided in some of the importing firms' indents. At lines 337—343 plaintiff admits if he buys on usual terms and delivery is offered from Ralli's or Volkart's, he is bound by the time for delivery laid down in Ralli's or Volkart's indent respectively. He then goes on to say "interest is still charged since the agreement after expiry of 7 or ten days according to the order of the office." See also, as to the local sellers' right to claim commission on resale, the evidence of Luxmandas at line 113. The evidence further suggests that the miti khari notice must be given within 3 days of the ship's arrival. Madhowdas, plaintiffs' witness No. 7, at line 19 onwards says the "miti khari" notice is issued within 3 days of ship's arrival and that the buyer must come within 7 days after the receipt of the notice. Then he goes on to say seller must wait 15 days for him according to the committee rules, meaning apparently the burnt agreement. The bazar seems, therefore, to have attempted to adopt the stipulation as to interest in the importing firms' indents. The evidence as to other clauses in the indents running in the bazar varies according to the particular clause. The 10 days' margin before and after the month of shipment allowed by the importing firms' indents is current in the bazar as describing a particular month's shipment (see e. g., evidence of plaintiffs' witness No. 2 Parasram line 171, plaintiffs' witness No. 5 Hemandas line 52, and plaintiffs' witness No. 6 Lakhamsi line 80). So also the clause exempting the importing firms from responsibility for bags damaged by sweat or rain (see evidence of Nusserwanji defendants' witness No. 4 lines 320-1, witness No. 1 Girdharilal line 209, plaintiff Teokchand line 225). On the other hand the evidence relating to clauses in the indents referring to arbitration and insolvency being current in the bazar is meagre. In Lenz v. Lalchand (3) Crouch, A. J. C., held that the arbitration clause would not be incorporated by the use of the words "office Dhara." As to the war insurance rate charged by the importing firms, the bazar sellers seem also to have charged for war risks but not at quite the same rate (see evidence of plaintiff Teokchand line 26, and defendants' witnesses Nusserwanji line 348, and Laxmandas witness No. 3 line 102), but it seems to me that all this and other oral evidence to prove the terms of indent were incorporated by the use of the expression "usual terms" travels beyond what the defendants have to show in this case. I have already pointed out that they are out to prove that the goods under David Sassoon's or Gobindram Murlidhar's contracts with those firms' buyers were tenderable as July shipment goods under the indent of those firms and were, therefore, to be recognised as such by the plaintiff. It will be enough if the defendants show that the 'Force Majeure' clause in the indents was recognised in the contracts with plaintiffs as stamping the goods ex S. S. "Kanjean" with the description of July shipment goods.

The oral evidence on the point may now be considered. A large number of witnesses have been called on both sides. As I have considered the onus of proving what the terms included in "usual terms" were lay on the defendants, I compelled them to call their evidence first. I will, therefore, now deal with their oral evidence. Defendants' first witness was Gidumal Lekhraj. He is president of the Indian Merchant Association and one of the public men of the city. His firm is Tahilram Wadhumal and he says they have done business in sugar for fifty years. They are guarantee brokers to Messrs. Ewart Ryrie and Co. After describing the origin of acceptance memos. he says (line 32) "they are on 'usual terms' i.e., same as 'office Dhara' before. The terms are as contained in the European offices' printed contracts, so far as they can be applied. In office contracts there are terms regarding late shipment for war, etc. They would apply to the bazar contracts. Indian merchants cannot do any business on any other terms because we buy from the offices and sell on the same terms." This is significant corroboration of the natural inference that local sellers would not undertake the risks which the offices guard against by the printed clauses in the indents. Later on at line 82 he says: "If a delivery order of a particular office be given, the buyer is bound by the particular terms of that office." Later on at line 232 he says in cross-examination "all contracts in bazar are on office Dhara terms," and then at line 250 he points out that a contract for a Chiti on a particular office would not be followed by the words 'office Dhara,' because of course the terms incorporated would be the terms of the particular office. I summarize this evidence to be that all contracts in the bazar on "usual terms" are made on "office Dhara" terms, i. e., the general terms, of the offices so far as they are applicable, and that of a delivery order of a particular office. If the delivery order of any office is given, the buyer is bound by the terms of that office, i. e., if the delivery order be a good tender by the terms of that office he must accept it. The purport of this evidence shows that plaintiffs have, by contracting on usual terms, agreed that shipments impressed with the description of July shipment under the terms of the office contracts shall be so accepted by them and when the delivery order of any one firm is tendered, the question as to whether that delivery order is July shipment goods will depend on the terms of that office's indent. On that will depend the question whether defendants have committed breach or not. If no such goods could arrive after plaintiffs filed their suit, then plaintiffs have a good cause of action; but if there were such goods which could arrive, defendants might still perform and plaintiffs must wait till the arrival of such goods to see whether defendants would perform. It is objected by plaintiffs that this witness is defendants' partner, but the evidence shows (line 90 onwards) that it is only in certain cases they have entered into transactions in partnership. On the other hand, they are partners with defendants in the guarantee brokerage business to Ewart Ryrie and Co., who are concerned in similar disputes. Moreover this witness has sold more July shipments than he has bought. I have regard to all this in estimating the value of his evidence.

(3) 19 Ind. Cas. 925; 6 S. L. R. 278 at p. 283.

Defendants' next witness is Oodharam Tarachand, who is the broker to David Sassoon's, Ralli's and E. D. Sassoon's and claims to be one of the largest buyers in Karachi. He says, line 10, that before acceptance memos. the broker used to note the contracts as being on office Dhara terms, i. e., the terms of the importing firm's written agreement. He says that the acceptance memos. are made on the same terms and produces entries of contracts in which the words are 'Bunder delivery, office Dhara' (Exhibits 63-4), plaintiffs being one of the parties to Exhibit 64. At line 51 he says "if the contract is made according to the office Dhara, the buyer is bound by the terms of the delivery orders of the office tendered. Sellers can give delivery orders of any office, that is to say, the parties agree that they will be bound by the terms of the offices and it is left to the local seller to select a particular office later on." It is clear when he says the buyer is bound by the terms of the delivery orders of the office, he means the terms of the office whose delivery order is tendered. Later on, line 200, he says "office Dhara" means that seller can bind his buyer by the terms of any particular office. He can exercise this option up to any time the steamer arrives. If he does not exercise this option, he must pay damages according to the market. The plaintiffs contend that this is a case not set up in the delivery order and as I have pointed out it is; because when the contract is made, the seller cannot say, unless he has already bought the goods, which firm's delivery orders he will tender and the agreement, therefore, is that the terms of the importing firm's indents shall apply and it is left to the seller to select the particular indent when he tenders performance. This case also has throughout been put forward in the evidence and the plaintiffs are not taken by surprise. The sincerity of this witness's view as to the meaning of 'office Dhara' in the trade is corroborated by the fact that he produces entries of forward contracts for July shipment, effected by him on 23rd August 1917 after the S.S. "Dogra's" arrival, which he was not likely to have done if no July shipment could be tendered after that steamer's arrival (Exhibits 65-6).

Defendants' 3rd witness is Luxmandas, who is Vice President of the Sugar Society and has done business in Karachi for the last 20 years. He says at line 13 "office Dhara" means to take delivery at Bunder on payment at office, not to accept goods damaged by sweat or sea-water, and the other terms of the agreement of the importing firms. At line 30 he says the seller can give delivery order of any office. Certain objections have been urged against this witness's evidence by the plaintiffs. They say he has sold more than he has bought both for July and for August-September shipments and, therefore, it is to his interest to support defendants' contention and secondly he says (line 24) that contracts go off if the last steamer be sunk. As regards the first objection I find that nearly all the witnesses on both sides are interested one way or the other, but the point I have to decide is whether this interest is sufficient to justify me in discarding their evidence. How far has their evidence been corroborated by their conduct? It appears this witness was present at the meeting on 22nd August 1917 of the Sugar Association at which certain persons were selected to find out from David Sassoon's whether they had still goods to arrive. The plaintiff Teckchand was at that meeting. It is unlikely Luxmandas could have attended a meeting for that purpose if he had believed that the S. S. "Dogra" had brought the last lot of July shipment sugar. I think this corroborates his evidence. I am aware plaintiffs contend the meeting was only to see whether the contracts of those who had bought from David Sassoon should remain open and that the contracts of the others should be settled or closed, but I cannot see any object in the meeting unless there had been a dispute as to whether the last July shipment had arrived and as Luxmandas had not bought from Sassoon, I cannot see why he should go to the meeting unless he considers July shipment might still arrive. The objection to this witness's evidence refers to his answer to hypothetical questions as to what would be the result if the last steamer carrying July shipment goods was sunk and questions of a similar nature. I do not value his replies to those questions very highly, because they are really questions which it would be for a lawyer to answer and to which, unless there were an actual proved instance, a merchant could only give his opinion. These observations apply equally to similar questions asked of other witnesses.

Defendants' next witness is Ralli's salesman, Nusserwanji. He says that Ralli did not import any July shipment goods but sold locally. He says (line 7) "usual terms" are same as office terms and that a contract in 'office Dhara' means the buyer and seller are bound by the terms of the indent under which the seller has bought or may buy from an importing firm. The seller decides what importing firm's goods he will tender. Ralli's themselves paid differences on the S. S. "Dogra's" arrival expecting her to be the last steamer. They had paid up on all their cross-contracts by 28th August 1917, but they settled some half dozen contracts after the arrival of S. S. "Kanjean". In this instance they were intermediaries (line 122 and line 243—60). Some suits were filed against Ralli for August September shipments but all except two of those have been withdrawn, as the market went high and the plaintiffs took delivery (line 417). It is, therefore, suggested there salesman's evidence is prejudiced. Ralli's local purchase form (Exhibit 75) is the same as their indent form, except that the names of the sellers and buyers are transferred. That at any rate shows that Rallis incorporate their indent terms when purchasing locally, and to hold that other local sellers and buyers do not intend to incorporate the terms of the 'Force Majeure' clause in the indents in their contracts could mean that Rallis adopt a form which is inconsistent with the general practice in the bazar. I think this corroborates the witnesse's view of what the meaning of usual terms is. Plaintiffs have cross-examined this witness regarding an arbitration in 1915. Exhibit 68 is the award under which Rallis had to pay a claim for goods short delivered, although David Sassoon whose delivery order was tendered to them tendered short delivery. It appears, however, that Rallis had given notice of arrival of the whole quantity and Nusserwanji says that was why the award went against Rallis. Nusserwanji also says (line 156) that an award passed between the importing firm and its buyer holds good between subsequent sellers and buyers. If such an award determines the shipment and, therefore, the description of the goods, it may be binding on later buyers as constituting the goods of that particular shipment. It may be, however, that if the local seller and buyer are not bound by the arbitration clause in the offices' indents, the Court would have to say whether as between such local seller and his buyer the goods were tenderable under the terms of indent as contract goods. That is not a point which I have to decide in the present case, and I therefore, refrain from discussing it. Some confusion has, however, been introduced. Plaintiffs seem to think that the defendants' case is that the arbitration clause in the indent means that the local seller and buyer must go to arbitration. That is not so and has been held out to be so in Lenz v. Lalchand (3). Defendents' case is that the award between the importing firm and its buyer determining the character of the goods determines it likewise between the local seller who tenders a delivery order of that firm and his buyer.

The defendents' next witness on this point is Mohamedali Hussainbhai (Crimji) whose firm has done sugar business for the last 30 years. At line 9 he says "acceptance memos." are exchanged. They contain words "usual terms". That means 'office Dhara'. At line 35 he says "office Dhara" is the term of the office whose delivery order seller gives him. Now what does this mean? It is stated, no doubt, generally, but there is the same idea running through all the answers and that is that if the goods are a proper shipment by the terms of the office, the local buyer must accept them from his local seller. This witness has some suits pending regarding July shipments for large amounts and no doubt it is to his interest to support defendants contention. Unfortunately, nearly every witness in the case is mixed up in the decision of the question in this suit and this objection can consequently be hurled at the witnesses indiscriminately by both parties. Moreover like most of the witnesses on both sides, when he received notices from his buyers claiming damages he adopted their contentions against his sellers not because he believed they were substantial objections but in order to safeguard himself, if the Court should hold they were. Thus he says he bought from Forbes, Forbes, Campbell and Co. July shipment and they tendered 50 tons S. S. "Kanjean" but he declined to accept, as the plaintiffs who were the last holders of the D/O. refused to take delivery. This witness, besides entering into cross contracts on 20th August 1917, 8th September 1917, 30th August 1917, 17th September 1917 and 21st September 1917 with various merchants, all except the first being dates subsequent to the arrival of the S. S. "Dogra", made forward contracts on 17th September 1917, 22nd August 1917, and 8th September 1917 with various other merchants for July or July-September shipments (see his evidence, lines 44—66 and line 122—43). This constitutes his evidence as showing that he did not regard the date of the arrival of the S. S. "Dogra" as the last date when July shipment goods could be tendered. The D./Os. in respect of the forward contracts made after that date were subsequently tendered to plaintiffs who refused to accept them (Mohomedalli, line 148). On 10th September 1917 the witness appears to have sold to his relation Yusufalli who is plaintiffs' witness 725 tons August-September shipment. Defendants rely on this, saying that as August shipment had to be shipped by 10th September, it is unlikely witness would have made this contrrot unless he and Yusufalli knew that August shipment goods could still be tendered under the indents, although shipped late, by virtue of the Force Majeure clause.

Defendants' next witness is the defendant Changomal Khushaldas himself. It seems to me he should have been called earlier and his evidence must be taken subject to the objection that he had the opportunity of knowing what his witnesses had to say before he gave evidence himself. He says at line 11 of his evidence "usual terms" in the acceptance memos. mean "office Dhara." "Office Dhara" means the terms in the contracts of the European offices. There is a slight difference in the contracts of the European offices. Delivery is to be taken of late shipments if due to reasons beyond man's power. This term is common to all European offices. Later at line 310 the witness says "shipment is what the offices declare to be a shipment of those goods." He, therefore, clearly states his case, viz., that the fact that the offices' contracts make the shipments though late on account of "Force Majeure" a good tender makes the tender also a good tender between local sellers and buyers contracting on "office Dhara" or "usual terms." It appears that his firm made two forward contracts for July shipment after the S. S. "Dogra's" arrival viz, 10 tons sold to Oshiram Chethandas on 15th September 1917 and 5 tons sold to Aratmal Satramdas on the same date. He says (line 43) they were not cross contracts; so his evidence is corroborated by his conduct for, of course, he would not make forward contracts for July shipment if he believed that the last July shipment that could be tendered had arrived.

Moreover defendants gave delivery of 100 tons from the S. S. "Kanjean" under a forward contract with David Sassoon. The D./Os. for these 100 tons travelled from David Sassoon and Gobindram Murlidnar through the hands of local buyers to defendants who handed them to David Sassoon. (See line 57 onwards) Similarly, defendants had a forward contract with Forbes, Forbes for 100 tons but as to 75 tons that firm would not accept the D./Os. Ex "Kanjean" as their buyers would not accept. So also as to the contracts in this suit defendants made miti khari on plaintiffs after "Kanjean's" arrival but plaintiffs would not accept the notices. So far as any firm accepted these D./Os. Ex S. S. "Kanjean", that of course goes to show that the buyers regarded the goods Ex "Kanjean" as July shipment goods. Of course defendants had sold much more than they had purchased—2,170 tons more—so this suit means a great deal to them, but, as I have said, there is a fact in support of these contentions that they entered into 9 forward contracts for July shipment after the S. S. "Dogra's arrival." Still it might be contended that as these two contracts were made after the plaintiffs' letter Exhibit 5, the defendants made these contracts to create evidence. I note this possibility in estimating the value of Changomal's testimony. The defendants will also be losers on their August-September shipments if their contention in this suit be decided against them.

Plaintiffs have put in certain correspondence between defendants and Forbes, Forbes and Co., to show the position taken up by both of them, (Exhibit 93 and letters Exhibit 94, Exhibits 95-96) but a perusal of that correspondence shows that Forbes, Forbes and Co, were merely protecting themselves against the claims made by their buyers on them, and indeed in their letter Exhibit 97D, dated 2nd April 1918. Forbes, Forbes and Co., practically admit the defendants' contention and only asked to be satisfied that the goods (though arriving so late as February 1918) were of July shipment. This witness has also been asked several hypothetical questions as to what would be the result in the bazar contracts if the last shipment carrying the shipment was sunk and whether the arbitration clause in the indents applies to the contracts between local sellers and buyers. I have already pointed out that these are really questions of law, and as to the arbitration clause the question probably is not whether local sellers and buyers must go to arbitration but whether the result of arbitration between the office and its buyer decides the goods are of proper shipment or not.

The next witness called for defendants is Hormusji, salesman of David Sassoon (W. No. 9). It is urged by plaintiffs against his evidence that as David Sassoon's 300 tons Ex S. S. "Kanjean" are in dispute, his evidence will naturally favour defendants. The same objection is taken to Mr. Sawyer's evidence. Hormusji produces David Sassoon's local contract forms (Exhibits 89-90). Exhibit 89 is their local purchase form. "Ex Bunder Karachi, including duty" usually suggests that "usual terms" are, as plaintiffs say, confined to delivery. Moreover Hormusji swears that the expression means "usual office Dhara". He says (line 7). under this term we are bound to accept sugar of any importing firm. Office Dhara means the term of the European offices' contracts. If goods are shipped late and that is provided for in the office's contract, it applies to the contracts on 'usual terms'." For cross-contracts David Sassoons use the form Exhibit 90 in which the words used are "the same that you had purchased from us on.....at Rs.....per cwt. against contract No....".

Hormusji's oral evidence, therefore, corroborates that of the other witnesses for the defendants on this point. Hormusji also corroborates defendants' evidence about the purchase of 100 tons for which defendants tendered them after the arrival of S. S. "Kanjean" their (defendants') D/O. for 75 tons and one from Govindram Murlidhar for 25 tons (line 41). He also says David Sassoons were receiving quotations for July shipment up to 27th December 1917 and that inquiries were made at their office after S. S. "Dogra's" arrival as to whether they still had any goods to arrive. This refers to the irquiry made by the Sugar Association on 22nd August 1917. Lines 110—128 of his evidence give a very clear exposition of the terms of these contracts on "usual terms." So also at lines 138-141 David Sassoons had still 400 tons outstanding to deliver after S. S. "Dogra's" arrival. They effected delivery by accepting two delivery orders from defendants for 75 tons and 25 tons respectively Ex-S.S. "Kanjean" and D/Os. for the balance of 300 tons, which their buyers accepted under protest. (Exhibit 92.) This shows that David Sassoon acted up to the construction of the expression "usual terms" given by their salesman Hormusji in his evidence.

The next witness on this point is Oodharam Tarachand for defendants, the manager of Manubhai and Co., sugar merchants. At line 10 he says "office Dhara" means the terms of the contracts of sugar importing firms. 'Usual terms' and 'office Dhara' mean the same thing.

Abdul Hussain Tayabbhai (W. No. 13) has done business in sugar for the last 20 years. At line 27 he says "seller may give delivery from any steamer he wishes. He can deliver from any office he chooses." At line 94 he says 'office Dhara' means the terms of the agreements of European offices, i. e. those that are common in every office agreement. Terms of the office whose delivery order is given apply. If, therefore, the shipment is a good shipment according to the terms of the offices whose D/O. is tendered, that is a good shipment between the local seller who tenders the firm's D/O. and his buyer. This witness appears to have made miti khari when the S. S. "Kanjean" arrived on his buyers, but as the plaintiffs were the alternative buyers the witness's buyers refused to take delivery. The witness, therefore, adopted the same attitude towards the sellers.

He appears to have claimed damages from his seller in September and November 1917 (see Exhibits 197 8) and at the same time told his buyer he was bound to wait. This witness is a "bear."

The next witness Khubchand Uttamchand (W. No. 14) is a broker who has carried on that business for the last 20 or 22 years and has during that time acted as broker for Forbes, Forbes and Co., Volkarts, David Sassoons and Chotirmal Hiranand. He says (line 6) "'office Dhara" means terms of the agreements of the European offices." Again at line 11 "Bazar merchants are bound to take delivery of late shipment on account of war or circumstances beyond one's control." At line 19 "when 3 or 4 steamers bring the same shipment seller has option to say from which steamer he will give delivery." This witness is attacked as being broker to Chotirmal Hiranand, a "bear." The witness himself has invested to a small extent for July and August September shipments.

Mr. Swayer, manager of David Sassoon who is defendants' 15th witness, says (line 15) that "usual terms" means the application of the terms of the various import houses whose goods sellers may ultimately tender to us either by buying directly or indirectly themselves at any time until the arrival of last steamer carrying the shipment of the goods in question. It is same as 'office Dhara.'" At line 48 he says "parties must wait oven though only 50 tons were shut out." He explains that in Exhibit 90 "usual terms' means the same terms on which they had sold under contract of sale, and this would be so because Exhibit 90 is a repurchase form. At line 91 he says "usual terms" is not confined to delivery. I think it is pretty clear that Mr. Sawyer has the same idea in his head that the other witnesses for the defendants have. It is in effect that if the shipment is a good shipment according to the terms of the office whose D./O. is tendered, that is a good shipment between the local seller who tenders that delivery order and his buyer.

Similarly, the witness Mulchand Chellaram (W. No. 16) says at line 16 "Seller can give delivery order of any importing firm. Terms of that firm then apply. D/Os. are sold after the steamer arrives." At line 13 he says: "Buyer must wait till last steamer. Damages are paid and received after arrival of last steamer." This witness sent notices to both his sellers and his buyers. Like most of the offices he was "hedging." He further explains the position of seller and buyer at line 75 onwards. Plaintiffs' contention is that this witness assists defendants in this case.

Mr. Lenz, manager of Volkarts, who is witness No. 17 for the defendants, says he has no personal knowledge about the bazar terms. He had not bought any July shipment locally. He says line 136: "If we buy locally independently we alter our own form by a transferring buyer and seller. If we buy back our own sugar we attach a slip to say the goods have been bought back on original contract terms." It is clear from this that when Volkarts repurchase their own sugar, they do not do so on terms which would only govern the method of delivery but by incorporating their indent terms in their repurchase contract.

Bhojraj (W. No. 21) for the defence has been a sugar merchant for last 10 or 12 years and a guarantee broker for 5 years. He says (line 2) that sugar contracts in the bazar are made on "office Dhara," i. e. the terms in the contracts of the different European firms; at line 12 he says "seller can give delivery from whatever steamer bringing the shipment of whatever importing firm he wishes. If sugar arrive late owing to some unavoidable cause the buyer must accept delivery."

I must say that after the defendants had called all their evidence, I intimated that in my opinion it was no use multiplying witnesses and that if the defendants had not convinced me by the evidence of the witnesses they had already called, it was for defendants' Counsel to consider whether he would be likely to convince me by calling further witnesses, and Mr, Elphinston accordingly decided to rest his case on this point on the witnesses he had called.

I think I am not summing up the evidence of defendants' witnesses on this point incorrectly when I say that on the whole they all estify to one fact, viz, that if the goods are a good July shipment under the terms of the indent of the office whose D./O the local seller tenders, his buyer must accept them as such goods and consequently if any goods are still to arrive which by the indent of the office importing them will pass as July shipment goods, the local buyer must wait till the arrival of such goods before he can contend his local seller has comitted a breach of the contract. The quantity of goods late shipped does not affect the question in the present case, because it is in evidence that there were 300 tons of David Sassoon's goods late shipped and as defendants had to tender only 200 tons and the evidence shows, and indeed it is a matter of common knowledge, that D /Os. go round and round in a circle with great rapidity and can wipe off contracts for many times the quantity stated in them there is no doubt that if defendants' contention be correct, they had a reasonable probability of performing their contract when the S. S. "Kanjean" arrived. Moreover defendants allege there were in addition goods of Govindram Murlidhar of July shipment aboard the 'Kanjean," although it is true plaintiffs say there is no satisfactory proof of this in the evidence.

Let us now see how the plaintiffs say they understand the contracts between the parties. Plaintiffs' contention is that "office Dhara," whether with or without the addition of the words "Bunder delivery," refers only to the method of delivery which is borrowed from the contracts of the importing firm. "Usual terms" they also say refers to the method of delivery. Mr. Rupchand in his summing up amplified what his witnesses had said. He says that the terms borrowed from the offices are 'if a delivery order be given, the buyer must pay and go to the Bunder and take delivery by weight and if he goes late he gets out and torn bags. He is not bound to take goods damaged by sea water, and whoever is responsible for delay must pay the interest and demurrage to the extent of the delay due to him." He says these are the practices of the offices though not necessarily in their indents.

Plaintiff. Teckchand Chellaram says at line 153: "I do not understand the meaning of the words 'office Dhara.' I don't use the words. I have heard the words mean delivery is to be given in the same manner as the office gives it." At line 300 he says more positively: 'In these contracts 'office Dhara' means delivery is to be given in the same manner as delivery is given by the European firms." At line 197 he says "Buyers from the European offices sell the sugar on 'usual terms.' Their buyers do not send acceptances on 'office Dhara.'" Now this is not correct, for it appears from Exhibits 11 and 12 that plaintiffs themselves have issued an acceptance memo. in respect of a 'kutcha' chit mentioning "office dhara." Moreover, it can scarcely be believed that when plaintiffs received that kutcha chit Exhibit 11 from their branch firm at Shikarpur, they did not know what the words in it "office Dhara" meant. There is nothing to suggest in that contract that 'office Dhara' was restricted to the method of giving delivery. Again Exhibit 27 is an acceptance memo. dated 18th July 1917 passed by Chandumal Chellaram to plaintiffs on "usual office agreement terms". Plaintiff Teckchand's only explanation of this is that he did not understand what Chandumal was writing in English. Exhibit 28 is another acceptance memo. by one Gangaram Chaturbhuj to Chotirmal Hiranand subject to "usual office agreement terms." It is dated 31st March 1917. Both these acceptance memos. as well as Exhibits 11 and 12 show that Teckchand's evidence on this point cannot be believed. Let us see what his witnesses say.

His witness No. 5 Hemandas, after saying at line 10: "People in bazar make contracts on a Bunder delivery office Dhara. That means the delivery is in terms of the office contracts i.e, the goods should be taken delivery of and removed within 7 days. Otherwise demurage, etc., in terms of office contracts will ensure," goes on at line 69 to say: "I know the expression 'usual terms.' It is the same as 'office Dhara.'" The plaintiffs have suggested at line 197 that there is a difference in saying that acceptance memos. are not sent on 'office Dhara' terms. The conflict of opinion is hightened by plaintiffs' witness No. 3 Premchand, who at line 113 says "'words' usual terms' are different from 'office Dhara' Bunder delivery.' There are more terms in the latter." This is in direct conflict with Hemendas's evidence, at line 69. Plaintiffs' witness No. 6 Lakhamsi says at line 57 "'usual terms' is not the same as 'offise Dhara.' Usual terms means merchants' Dhara. I can't say what the difference between the merchants' and offise Dhara is. Premchand, plaintiff's witness No. 3, also had written a letter dated 7th November 19.7 (Exhibit 50) to one of his buyers saying July shipment is still to come. He says he did this as his buyers sent similar notices. Like some of the defendants' witnesses he appears to have been safeguarding himself also. But his evidence that 'usual terms' refer only to delivery is contradicted by the fact that he has entered into contracts for July-September shipments from 23rd August 1917 to 4th October 1917 (see Exhibit 154), which he would not have done if the period for performing July shipment were not extended under the offise indents.

I have pointed out how the evidence of plaintiffs' witness Hemandas as to the meaning of the 'usual terms' varies from that of the plaintiffs and Premchand. At line 52 Hemandas says that the term of 10 days of grace before and after the month of shipment is a term in contracts made on 'offise Dhara' terms. Yet this term does not relate to delivery. He goes on to say at line 58 "all the shipments terms except the 'Force Majeure' clause are incorporated in a bazar contract. 'Offise Dhara' or 'offise Dhara Bunder delivery' refers only to delivery.

Lakhamsi (plaintiffs' witness No. 6) stands to win a large sum if plaintiffs' contention in this suit be upheld. He says at line 7 "contracts are made on 'offise Dhara Bunder delivery' terms. By that I understand after the goods are landed payment of demurrage and other port trust charges are to be made according to 'offise Dhara.' It means nothing else." Presumably, therefore, as he says at line 57 that usual terms are not the same as offise Dhara, he means that usual terms is the same as 'offise Dhara, Bunder delivery' and, therefore, 'offise Dhara' and 'offise Dhara Bunder delivery' are different which is plaintiffs' case. Plaintiffs' witness No. 2 Parasram says at the beginning of his evidence "I know of the acceptance memos Before they were introduced the brokers used to note the contracts in the Sonda Noondh as 'Ex Bunder delivery, offise Dhara,' that meant if the goods of the proper shipment arrive at the proper time and miti khari is made, then payment must be made and delivery taken. In case of delay in taking delivery demurrage and interest will be paid by the man responsible for delay. 'Offise Dhara' did not include any terms beyond those." Then at line 19: "By usual terms I understand ordinary terms." But in cross-examination at line 80 he says: "If shipment is delayed by 'Force Majeure' clause in the acceptance memo." It is noticeable that he is not prepared to say the 'Force Majeure' clause does not apply. Perhaps he was thinking of his letter Exhibit 140, dated 15th September 1917 in which he intimates to his buyer that owing to Government requisitioning the steamers, sugar shipments will be late and that delayed shipments will be treated under 'Force Majeure.' He says he issued the notice as he received similar notices from his buyers. It appears that this witness's firm has entered into contracts after the arrival of S. S. "Dogra" for July and September shipments (see correspondence Exhibit 148 dated 10th September 1917 also his evidence at line 340), which does not look as if he believed that 'offise Dhara' referred to the method of or terms relating to delivery in the offises' contracts.

Plaintiffs' witness No. 7 Madhavdas of the firm of Tejbhandas Jethanand says at line 15 "by 'usual terms' I understand if delivery is taken late demurrage and interest is paid. The man responsible for the delay pays them." This witness has bought about 935 tons more than he sold for July-December 17 shipments.

Plaintiffs' witness No. 8 Sobhraj, who has dealt in sugar for the last 15 or 16 years, at line 4 says: "Dealings are on 'usual terms' in the town, i. e., after European firms, make miti khari on arrival of steamer the bazar makes it within 3 days. If the European firm makes it on third day the local merchant issues it same day. Goods come to the Bunder and some European firm requires payment to be made and delivery taken within 7 or 10 days. If it be not then the person who takes delivery late is responsible for demurrage. The man who pays money late is liable to pay interest." At line 25 he says: "Before the war sugar was sold on 'offise Dhara' terms. Since that it is on 'usual terms' which are different. Till arrival of the goods there is a difference between 'offise Dhara' and 'usual terms.' 'Offise Dhara' are the terms of the offise contracts. 'Usual terms' are the terms of the bazar. They are the usual terms in respect of giving and taking delivery." Here we have a new version altogether. Firstly, this witness contradicts the witnesses who say 'office Dhara' and 'usual terms' are the same and secondly, he says 'usual terms' are not the terms relating to delivery in the office contracts but the terms of the bazar. Moreover, it is suggested that since the war the terms of the contract have changed, but plaintiffs' case has been that office Dhara' or 'office Dhara Bunder delivery' before the war is the equivalent of 'usual terms' after the war and both relate only to the delivery terms in the office contracts or the practice as to delivery of the offices. At line 61 the witness practically admits the defendants' case, although he is made to qualify this in his re examination at line 78.

Plaintiffs' witness No. 9, Tharomal, the sugar broker, says at line 2: "Bazar contracts are made on 'bazar Dhara' terms i. e, after goods arrive at Bunder. Miti khari notices issue from seller and payment is made by buyer and delivery taken if it be a proper shipment. If buyer goes late to take delivery at Bunder he is liable to pay demurrage and interest." In his cross-examination this witness says there has been no change in the bazar, which state ment contradicts Sobhraj who says there has been a change since the war. Plaintiff was this witness's commission agent. He also says in his examination in chief there is no period fixed for taking delivery from the Bunder in 'bazar Dhara' and the person taking delivery late pays demurrage and interest. As to this it is only necessary to remark that it is ridiculous to say that the last buyer can take delivery at his convenience.

Plaintiffs' 10th witness, Hassanald Jangaldas, at line 7 says: "Brokers wrote before the acceptance memos 'Bunder delivery office Dhara.' 'Usual terms' means miti khari is made in 3 days and thereafter delivery is taken from the Bunder. Demurrage and interest is also paid if delivery taken late." In his cross examination at line 73 he says: "Terms 'office Dhara' apply only to Bunder delivery. The terms of the firm which issued the delivery order will apply as to delivery". It is difficult to see whether from these statements the witness intends to say there is a difference between 'usual terms' and 'office Dhara'. Apparently he lies, because he suggests that office Dhara is the Dhara of the particular office whose delivery order is tendered. At line 191 he says "godown delivery contracts are mostly made on 'usual terms' in the acceptance memos.....If the contract is made on the terms of a European firm's contract it is also made on 'usual terms.'" This is a hopeless jumble because, firstly if 'usual terms' refers to taking delivery, then one of those terms is taking delivery at the Bunder, which godown delivery is not; and secondly, the witness is confusing a contract on 'Sidhi Chiti' or European office terms with a contract on usual terms. The witness appears to have brought about two or three contracts for July and July-September shipments after arrival of the S S. 'Dogra' (see his evidence, lines 118 and 123).

Plaintiffs' 12th witness Dharamdas Sobhraj, a partner in the firm of Topandas Hurbhagwandas, has written letters to his buyers saying he is not responsible for late shipment or any other case of 'Force Majeure' (see letter Exhibit 172). He also allowed Rallis to extend the time for shipment to October (Exhibit 173).

We now come to a very important witness. This is the witness Tayebally Allibhai who has traded in Java sugar for a long time and whose firm's name is Currimji & Co. He says at line 2: "By 'usual terms' I understand 'Bunder delivery,' delivery within three days, otherwise demurrage to be paid by buyer. If he takes delivery later on he takes the chance of getting torn bags. If he delays to pay money he has to pay interest also." At line 23 he goes on: "Before acceptance memos. brokers made entries in books. They wrote 'office Dhara Bunder delivery'. I understand by that the same thing as 'usual terms'." He, therefore, says 'usual terms' and 'office Dhara Bunder delivery' are the same." At line 121 he says, there is no such thing as 'bazar Dhara'. In this respect he contradicts the plaintiffs' witness who says that "usual terms" means the terms of the bazar (see Sobhraj's evidence, lines 25 onward). Unfortunately for Yusufalli's evidence a list of contracts made by him after the arrival of S. S. 'Dogra" for July and July September shipments has been put in (Exhibit 168), which shows he expected July shipment still to arrive and he could only entertain such expectation on the assumption of the application of the 'Force Majeure' clause in the offices' indents. It will be noted that the words "usual terms" are to be found in the contract. However, the most important piece of evidence to discredit and show he is not saying what he believes to be the real terms of these bazar contracts is his letter Exhibit 178, dated 19th October 1917, written to the solicitors of one of his constituents. The contents of that letter show that it was not written because buyers were putting forward the same contention to him but it expresses in clear and unequivocal terms what the terms of the contracts of the bazar are It is exactly the case set forward by the defendants and whether the defendants can rely on it or not in support of their case, it at any rate entirely repudiates the oral testimony of Yusufalli. After this letter was produced the plaintiffs declined to recall Yusufalli to explain it.

There is only one other witness whose evidence needs consideration on this point and he was called by the Court, both sides showing a reluctance to call him. The Court thought he should be called. He is the Secretary of the Sugar Association, Hassanand Jethanand At the end of his cross-examination he says "the terms with offices are practically the same as the terms between the local sellers and buyers."

To sum up this oral evidence on the meaning of the expression "usual terms" or "office Dhara", I have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that not only is there no ground for saying that the expression "office Dhara" implied anything different to the expression "usual terms," but also that the various versions given by plaintiffs' witnesses of both expressions have failed to establish that either of those expressions was restricted only to terms for taking delivery according to the office contracts or according to the practice of the offices.

Let us now see how the bazar construed those terms in practice. I think it furnishes an argument to the defendants if they can show that after the arrival of the S. S. "Dogra" Indian merchants still entered into forward contracts for July shipment. They could have only done so on the assumption that the terms of the offices' indents excusing delay in shipment governed their contracts. The plaintiff himself on 4th September 1917 bought 150 tons July September shipment from Nevandaram Toleram (plaintiff's evidence line 370). His explanation is that this contract was for goods Ex S. S. "Dogra", but this is not stated in the contract and I do not believe it. The S. S. "Dogra" completed discharging on 25th August 1917. On 30th August 1917 there were about 43 tons only lying in the Import Yard. On 5th September 1917, one day after plaintiff's contract with Nevandram, only about 15 tons were in the yard. It is, therefore, impossible that plaintiff would have contracted on 4th September 1917 for 150 tons from the yard. Thus plaintiff's conduct certainly does not suggest he believed the goods Ex S. S. "Dogra" to be the last July shipment to arrive. Again I find it proved from the evidence that plaintiff was present at the meeting of the Association on 22nd August 1917 and 24th August 1917 where the question of July shipment was considered. He knew that David Sassoon's 300 tons had been shut out and that no further tonnage was available at Java and yet on 4th September 1917 he made a further contract of sale of 500 tons of August-September shipment with Bhojraj Jethanand (plaintiff's evidence, lines 469). The latest date for August shipment would be 10th September; so with the knowledge he possessed it would be unlike he would contract for August shipment unless he believed that such shipment would be made later under the indents of the importing firms.

Plaintiffs' witness Purasram (line 339) admits on 4th September 1917 he sold 50 tons shipment July-September 3 equal lots to Haji Mohomed Haji Abdulla. Of this he says 30 tons was a cross-contract and that he intended to make 'pich pichao' for the remaining 40 tons July shipment. He does not appear to have done so and says that was because suits were filed. There is no entry to show 'pich pichao' was to be effected. The fact, however, remains that one does not make a forward contract for July shipment after July shipment has arrived in order to fulfil it by a subsequent pich pichao arrangement. Moreover, this witness was present at the meeting of 24th August 1917 (line 30:) and knew that August shipment, at any rate, would on account of the inability of Java shippers to secure tonnage be delayed. Again at line 426 onwards he says his last sale for August-September shipment was on 25th September 1917, which would be more than a fortnight after August shipment could be shipped unless excused by a Force Majeure clause. On 7th or 8th September he sold 150 tons July September shipment to Yusufalli and witness says Yusufalli said he could effect "pich pichao" for the 50 tons of July shipment in that contract. There is nothing in the entry relating to this contract to corroborate this; it was admittedly not a cross-contract and Yusufalli in Exhibit 168 has entered this contract as on 'usual terms.' This witness's transactions, therefore, do not lead one to believe the oral evidence he has given on the meaning of the words 'usual terms'.

Plaintiffs' witness Premchand has made a series of contracts for July and July-September shipments after the arrival of the S. S. "Dogra" (in Exhibit 154). He says they were cross-contracts (line 233), but as to two of them, viz., one on 24th August 1917 with Mithamal Dowlatram for 30 tons July-September shipment and another with Rupchand Rughnath for 10 tons, he says as to the former, there was a previous contract for August-September shipment for 20 tons and the broker said he would make "pich pichao" as to the remaining 10 tons and as to the latter 5 out of 10 tons was "pich pichao". There is nothing beyond his statement that "pich pichao" was to be made of the balance of ten tons out of the former contract, and admittedly, 5 tons out of the latter are uncovered (see his evidence, lines 235 and 293). I would say on this evidence that this witness had not also much belief in the account he gives of transactions in 'usual terms' in the bazar, P. 41. Evidence has also been given as to the date when cross-contracts were made. Plaintiffs' witness No. 7 says at line 40 that cross contracts are made so long as goods of proper shipment are still to arrive, otherwise they are only made whilst goods are lying on Bunder (see also evidence of plaintiffs' witness No. 9 Narumal, line 19). We know from the note of Rambhai (defendants' witness No. 6), the Port Trust clerk, that on 15th September 1917 only 2 bags of July shipment were remaining in the Import Yard. So if we find cross contracts are effected after that date, they can only have been effected in anticipation of further goods to arrive. Those cross contracts in Exhibit 154 after that date would on plaintiffs' own case, therefore, only have been made in anticipation of further July shipment to arrive. This remark applies generally to all cross-contracts made by the witnesses in the case. Another thing is to be observed, and that is that cross-contracts would ordinarily be made at the rate when goods in the Import Yard of July shipment would still be deliverable ex-Bunder and if we find cross contracts made at the rate of a subsequent date, that suggests that the parties until that subsequent date, at any rate believed July shipment goods were still to arrive.

The list of his contracts (Exhibit 168) put in by plaintiffs' witness Yusufalli speaks for itself. It shows he has made forward and cross-contracts up to 7th Septmber 1917 for July-September shipments. The last two with Kodumal Kallumal and Raghnath Kallianji were admittedly not cross contracts (see Yusufalli's evidence, line 78) and they were on "usual terms". Yusufalli says he thought there was still time for July shipment to come and he heard a steamer with proper shipment was coming. This I do not believe, because the last date for July shipment from Java would be 10th August 1917 which would bring the steamer here on or about 30th August 1 17, and his contracts are dated 7th September 19.7. Besides he and everybody else in the bazar knew from the meetings of the Association held in August that with the exception of certain goods which were late shipped no other July shipment goods shipped from 20th June to 10th August were due to arrive. Moreover, Pursram of Kodumal Kallumal, the seller, admits that the European offices issued notices in August and the beginning of September saying that owing to the requisitioning by Government of steamers shipment would be delayed. Yusufalli must have known this. The salesman of Rallis, Nusserwanji, says that upto the beginning of September, it was thought that S. S. "Ranee" was loading at Java but she could only have loaded July shipment goods which were shut out (see his evidence, line 110 onwards). Moreover, Purseram says that as to the 50 tons of July shipment Yusufalli said he would effect "pich pichao" which is not the version Yusufalli puts forward. Last Yusufalli's letter Exhibit 17*c*, dated 18th October 1917, shows that the story he puts forward in his evidence is false.

There is also evidence of deliveries actually taken from the S. S. "Kanjean." Rallis took delivery and transferred the delivery orders to their buyers (evidence of Odhavdas line 108). Rallis appear to have settled some half dozen of their contracts after the arrival of S.S. "Kanjean" (evidence of Nusserwanji, line 260).

Defendants' witness Mohamedalli made both cross-contracts and forward contracts after the arrival of S. S. "Dogra". Thus on 17th September 1917 he bought 300 tons from Sobhraj Dulamull to whom he had sold, on 22nd August 1917 and 23rd August 1917, 25 and 125 tons respectively. This left a balance of 150 tons. On 8th September 1917 he sold 75 tons July-September to Nevendram Tolaram. The cross contracts were on 20th August 1917, 8th September 1917, 23rd August 1917 (100 tons to Nebhandass Jethanand), 30th August 917, 7th September 1917 and 21st September 1917 (see Mahomedalli's evidence, line 44 onwards).

Defendants' witness Changomal made two forward contracts on 15th September 1917 of 10 tons and 5 tons (line 44 of his evidence,)

David Sassoon's salesman Hormusji says (line 65) that his firm was receiving quotations for July shipment up to 27th December 1917.

Defendants' witness Dhanji brought about several contracts from 24th August 1917 to 13th October 1917. Of these only one was a cross contract, one was on 13th October 1917 of sale of 50 tons July September shipment by Nurbhai Jafferbhai to Assumal Rajaharam (see Dhanji's evidence, line 60).

Similerly defendants' witness the broker Khatan says he brought about some 8 to 12 forward contracts after the S. S. "Dogra's" arrival (see Exhibit 105), but he cannot say if ary of them were cross contracts.

It is, therefore, clear from all this evidence that most of the witnesses on both sides expected further July shipment goods to arrive after the arrival of the S.S. "Dogra" on 20th August 1917. The dates of the contracts made by them after that date show these contracts would not have been made in the expectation that any steamer could still arrive which had left Java by the 10th August 1917, the latest date for July shipment. The "Ranee" was expected in the beginning of September 1917, but a great many of these contracts are made after that date when it must have been known the "Ranee" was requisitioned. On what assumption could such contracts be entered into in the bazar save that goods shipped late on account of 'Force Majeure' would still under the offices' contracts be tenderable as July shipment goods? The plaintiffs' witnesses have by their actions belied the evidence they have given as to the terms of these local contracts. In my opinion their acts support the defendants' case.

Is it conceivable in the face of all these transactions for July shipment entered into after the S. S. "Dogra's" arrival—some of them effected by the plaintiff himself—that he did not know that the time for performance of his contracts with the defendants still remained open? The European offices began issuing notices in August and the beginning of September 1917 that owing to Government requisitioning steamers shipment would be late. Is it likely plaintiff would be ignorant of this fact in the bazar? If he knew the time of performance was still oper, his suit launched on 1st October 1917 is premature. That the time for performance was extended to the arrival of the S. S. "Kanjean" is, I think, clear. It is proved that "office Dhara" does not refer only to delivery as plaintiff contends. I have shown how his witnesses have broken down on this point and how the defendant's witnesses have given a consistent version of those words. It is also shown that in the documents used by some offices in their local purchase forms there is an unrestricted reference to the terms of the agreements of the offices. It is finally shown that nearly all the witnesses have by entering into contracts after the S. S. "Dogra's" arrival shown the words 'office Dhara' or 'usual terms' could not refer only to delivery. If the words 'office Dhara' were used before the war and the words 'usual terms' were introduced since the acceptance memos. came into force, what reason can the plaintiffs assign that the substitution should involve a change of meaning? The acceptance memos. were only introduced because the merchants repudiated the authority of the brokers to make the contracts and as a precaution to prevent any merchant denying the contract. No reason for restricting 'usual terms' to delivery only, when the words formerly used, 'office Dhara,' were not so restricted, can be found and indeed plaintiff's case is that 'office Dhara' also is restricted to the delivery. I have no hesitation in holding that there is no ground for restricting the expressions 'office Dhara' or 'usual terms' to delivery. If, therefore, 'office Dhara' means what it literally would when translated viz., the practice of the offices, then the practice is shown from the offices' indent forms. 'Usual terms,' therefore, implies the same thing.

Now let us turn to the meetings of the Sugar Association and see from the records of them how far they still further show plaintiff understood July shipment was still to arrive after the S. S. "Dogra's arrival and also what the Association themselves thought about the matter. The defendants did not attend those meetings, so the plea of estoppel raised has very properly been abandoned. I mean that the plaintiff by attending the meetings at which defendants were not present did nothing to induce defendants to adopt a course of action they would not otherwise have adopted. Nor was there any agreement between plaintiffs and defendants arrived at those meetings.

The Association seems to be the only body which calls the indian sugar merchants together to discuss matters. It has no printed rules and contracts are not made subject to any such recorded rules. Its Secretary is Mr. Hassanand Jethanand, who was called by the Court to throw some light on these contracts and also on the proceedings of the Association. Both sides were apparently shy of calling him. He was a good deal harassed by being called twice and kept dancing attendance on the Court. As soon as I discovered this latter fact, I did my best to have his evidence taken at once—I think he gave his evidence satisfactorily. From the records of the Association which he produces it appears that on the 21st August 1917, a day after the arrival of the S. S. "Dogra," the Association issued notices (Exhibit 130) for a meeting on 22nd August 1917 to decide the question of July shipment. On 22nd August 1917 the meeting appointed a committee to settle the question of July shipment. Plaintiff was present and was appointed on the committee. At the same time five persons were detailed to go to David Sassoons to enquire if any July shipment goods were still to arrive and were told that 300 tons had been shut out. I hold this proved on the evidence which I really do not think it necessary to set out. I refer to the evidence of David Sassoon's salesman Hormusji on this point. See also the evidence of Hassanand, lines 77—83 and Laxmandas, line 66 On 24th August 1917 the committee met and Exhibit 126 was arrived at. That decision cancelled all notices that had passed between the merchants relating to the July shipment and provided that delivery orders of any office proving a shipment to arrive to be July shipment should be utilized for July 'Bhugtan', i. e., for performance. Exhibit 26 also appointed a date for effecting 'pich pichao' and "Bhugtan" for wiping off as much of the July shipment as possible. It then went on to state "whatever notices with regard to the July shipment have been issued by the merchants have been cancelled." This resolution is signed by plaintiff, so presumably he agreed to it. Now the plaintiffs say that this resolution intended only that contracts in which sellers had bought from David Sassoon to remain outstanding and closed all other contracts. Paragraph 1 of the resolution leaves this in some doubt, but I think paragraph 3 clears the point up. If it were intended to cause all other contracts to be closed, then the resolution would not say in paragraph 3 that the notices given by merchants should be considered as cancelled. They would be valid notices.

Plaintiff says no "pich pichao" was effected in consequence of this resolution (see line 129), but his witness Purseram at line 78 says the merchants who had not attended did not make 'pich pichao' saying July goods were still to arrive. The truth of the matter is that the merchants were still disputing the matter and it does not appear that they all accepted the decision of the 24th August 1917.

The next meeting was on 14th September 1917. It was a meeting of the special committee and reported to confirm the resolution of 24th August 1917 and to cancel the fresh notices issued (see Exhibit 137). Plaintiffs say they were not present and that they said they would not be present. Defendants have suggested plaintiff was present, but this appears to be doubtful. I cannot say on the evidence he was. It seems to me this meeting does not carry the case much further, as probably there were some merchants who like plaintiffs were insisting the date for preformance had passed and others who like defendants were attempting to create a decision that the time for performance should remain open. At this time it all depended on whether a merchant had oversold or overbought which view he took. Whatever he really thought was the meaning of 'usual terms' or 'office Dhara' he subordinated his view to his own int rests.

The same state of affairs was in existence when the next meeting of 20th September 1917 (Exhibit 28) took place. It was a general meeting and purported to cancel notices given. At the next meeting on 23rd September 1917 Hassanand says certain Tejiwalas were present but they wrote letters cancelling their signatures. Plaintiff was not present and until I am satisfied the whole bazar agreed to abide by these two resolutions, I cannot say they are of much service in support of defendants' case.

The deduction which I draw, therefore, from the evidence of these meetings is that only the meeting of 24th August 1917 can furnish evidence against plaintiff's case, because he was present at it and that meeting purported to cancel the notices already given. It appears plaintiffs did not abide by the resolution passed at that meeting because they subsequently issued fresh notices demanding frieght and damages. An important point, however, is that by attending that meeting plaintiffs knew further July shipment was due. They knew that David Sassoon had 300 tons shut out and they also knew that S. S. "Ranee" was expected to load at Java and as that vessel could not possibly bring July goods shipped before 10th August, they knew, if defendants' contention as to the terms of the contract is correct, that the time of performance was still open until July goods late shipped arrived. This is material on the question how long plaintiffs would in law be expected to wait for performance, assuming defendants' contention to be correct. The plaintiffs cannot ask whether they were to wait indefinitely in case July shipment goods were shut out and were still to arrive. They would, therefore, have to wait till such goods arrived or until it was shown they could not come before they could say defendants must be taken to have committed breach of the contracts.

I have already said the attitude of many merchants towards these bazar contracts was influenced by the question whether they had oversold or not. The defendants have, however, referred to one instance which, I think, calls for special attention. Rallis on 23rd August 1917 sent a circular letter (Exhibit 174) to some of their buyers for signature and by the terms of it they extended the time of July shipment. These signatories had sold to Yusufalli, plaintiffs' witness, and they would scarcely have extended the period of Yusufalli if Yusufalli in his turn had not agreed to accept. This shows that Yusufalli's conduct was scarcely consistent with the view he gives in his evidence of the meaning of "usual terms".

It appears that this question of late shipment had been raised under the terms of a contract on 'office Dhara' terms and was litigated between 3rd parties in the Small Cause Court in 1913, and the contention the defendants now put forward was upheld (see Exhibit 147). It must, however, be noted that in this case the goods were a proper May shipment, the Bill of Lading being dated 6th June 1913. The Small Cause Court Judge decreeing the claim allowed the item of interest, demurrage, insurance and commission as provided for in the importing firms' contract. This shows at any rate how the Small Cause Court construed the words "office Dhara' in 1913.

Evidence of a few other instances in which it is said the construction put upon the words by the defendants has been followed have been given.

The first of these instances occurred "many years ago" according to Nusserwanji Meherji, Ralli Brothers' salesman who gives evidence about it. He says his firm had forward goods coming from a particular factory in Austria C. C.or C. C E. The factory was burnt down and Rallis cancelled under the 'Force Majeure' clause. This instance is not in point, because we do not know whether Ralli's goods were sold specifically between the sub-vendors and purchasers and if that were so, the cancellation would come under the principle of law of the distinctive of the subject matter of the Court (sic). Moreover, there was not the speculation then that is now and bona fide contracts for the goods were made then.

Nusserwanji also speaks to the next instance, lines 140—165 of his evidence. In October 1914 Rallis had bought from David Sassoons and sold to Shumshudin Imamdin. David Sassoon's lighter sank and they delivered some bags short to Shamshudin. Rallis went to arbitration with Shamshudin and lost, but it appears they lost because they had sent a notice of arrival of the full quantity and had not given their buyer notice of short shipment. This instance does not help either side much. The award (Exhibit 68) says nothing about the reason why it was in favour of Shamshudin. This instance gave rise to a series of questions in the evidence as to whatever an arbitration or award binds sub vendors and sub-purchasers. So far as an agreement to go to arbitration is concerned, it has already been held in Lenz v. Lalchand (3) that it is not incorporated in the local contracts by the words 'office Dhara'. Whether an award between an importing office and its buyer declaring the goods of a particular shipment would not stamp the goods as of that shipment between sub vendors and sub purchasers, is another question altogether and not to my mind material for the decision of this case. The resolution of the committee (Exhibit 169) on this incident said the purchaser was to bear the loss. It may be noted that this was a case of short delivery and not one of the extension of the time for performance. It may be contended that if A, a local seller, sells to B, a local buyer, without having bought goods and A expects to perform when, say, Ralli's goods are latest due to arrive and delays performance till then and Ralli's goods are destroyed A has taken the risk of performing late and is liable for breach if he finds he cannot deliver goods. When Ralli's goods are destroyed no buyer can perform. I do not enter into a consideration of that question.

A 3rd instance is cited by Nusserwanji at line 283 of his evidence. Certain goods of February-March 1915 shipment reached Karachi between 12th and 16th June 1915 by three different steamers. The sub-purchasers took delivery. But it appears that these goods were shipped on 25th March 1915 and were therefore, a good March shipment at any rate. This is, therefore, merely a case of delay on the voyage.

I think I have now dealt with all the material evidence on this point and I have no hesitation in holding on it, for the reasons I have given, that the contracts between the parties were on the terms of the office agreements, meaning by that, so far as this case is concerned, that the defendants were at liberty to deliver sugar of any office if deliverable under a contract for July 1917 shipment according to the terms of that firm's indent. I hold the words 'usual terms' in the contracts have the same effect as the words 'office Dhara' and that means the agreements of the importing offices. See also Ruxchand Ramchand v. Hukumatrai (2). That is what the words 'usual terms' or 'office Dhara' mean and what they would ordinarily mean. The plaintiffs have contended that defendants are trying to introduce a custom of the trade into the contracts and have cited a great many authorities to show what are the attributes of a valid mercantile custom, that it must be shown to be reasonable, certain, not illegal, uniform, universally adopted, etc, etc.

Now it seems to me this is hardly a case of custom at all. Where a trade usage is sought to be incorporated in a commercial contract, the contract as a rule contains only certain stipulations but the parties to it or one of them seek to add some incident to it as being a provision which was not mentioned because all the parties understood or sought to have understood that it was, according to the custom of the trade, a part and parcel of the contract. "Merchants and traders with a multiplicity of transactions pressing upon them and moving in a narrow circle and meeting each other daily desire to write little and leave unwritten what they take for granted in every contract. In spite of the lamentations of Judges, they still continue to do so" [per Campbell, C J., in Humfrey v. Dale (4)]. Here, however, what I am faced with is the mercantile meaning of certain words in the contract, viz. "usual terms". Now in a mercantile contract, subject to the rule that the whole document should be looked at, it has been laid down that the Court should regard the subject-matter with which the parties are dealing and take the words in their natural and ordinary meaning and then construe the contract [Tatham Bromage & Co. v. Eurr (5)]. Here the parties were contracting as to goods to be imported by others and, therefore, the seller would be likely to protect himself against contingencies preventing the arrival of the goods just as the importing office does and this is in favour of defendant's contention. It has been proved that 'usual terms' and 'office Dhara' mean the same thing. "Office Dhara" means "what the offices do". What the offices do is seen from their printed forms of contract. The "Force Majeure' clause in the offices' indents is to be found, in one form or another, in every single office's indent and the fact that it is so makes it clearly one of the terms of "office Dhara". But even if the contract be regarded as one to which it is sought to attach a particular custom, I am of opinion that the "Force Majeure" clause, being common to all office contracts, is a custom of the offices and, therefore, incorporated by the words 'office Dhara', or 'usual terms' in the contracts between the plaintiffs and defendants. It fulfils all the requisites of a valid mercantile custom. It is certain, for it means influences over which the party has no control. It is uniform, because it is found in every office indent. It is reasonable beyond doubt, not illegal and in general use by offices (see Exhibit 30, clause 31; Exhibit 31, clause 51; Exhibit 32, clause 8; Exhibit 33, clause 10; Exhibit 34, clause 12; Exhibit 35, clause 14; Exhibit 36, clause 6; Exhibit 37, clause 12; Exhibit 38, clause 14; Exhibit 39, clause 14 and Exhibit 6 , clause 1).

If, therefore, by virtue of the "Force Majeure" clause in the indents the shipment of a particular office is tenderable as July shipment the sub-purchaser must regard it as such.

Now these 300 tons Ex-S. S. "Kanjean" were David Sassoon's goods. By clause 13 of David Sassoon's indents they are not responsible for delay in shipment beyond the stipulated time through war or any other cause over which they have no control, nor can their contract be cancelled for any delay arising from any such cause. It has not been urged that the words in clause 13 "or any other cause over which David Sassoon, Limited, have no control" mean any other cause "ejusdem generis" with the preceding words. If this had been contended, the answer to the argument would be that not only is there no common "genus" in the preceding words and subsequent words are, therefore, general, but also that if there be a common "genus" it is very doubtful whether the cause beyond David Sassoon's control viz., Government requisitioning all steamers due to the war, would not be considered as "ejusdem generis" with the preceding words. I am also by no means certain that this particular cause was not one due to war [See Tillmanns & Co. v. Knutsford Limited (6), Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Co, Limited v. Hamilton Fraser & Co. (7)]. David Sassoon's buyer, therefore, cannot cance the contract for any such cause. He must accept the goods Nor is this a State prevention of shipment as provided for in the last sentence of clause 13. By State prevention of shipment is meant, e. g., an embargo, prohibition of export or other cause. According to the defendants the cause here beyond David Sassoon's control was the fact that owing to Government requisitioning steamers no tonnage was available. They say David Sassoon had done everything they could and their Java shippers had got the space for the consignment but the S. S. Company shut the goods out and no other ships were available. I shall consider that presently.

The answer to the first issue is, therefore, that the contract between the parties was

(4) (1857) 26 L. J. Q. B. 137; 7 El. & Bl. 266; 3 Jur. (N. S.) 213; 110 R. R. 587; 119 E. R. 1246.

(5) (1898) A. C. 382 at p. 386; 67 L. J. P. 61; 78 L. T. 473; 46 W. R. 520; 8 Asp. M. C. 401; 14 T. L. R. 269.

(6) (1908) 2 K. B. 385 at pp. 402, 403; affirmed in (1908) A. C. 406; 77 L. J. K. B. 977; 99 L. T. 399; 13 Com. Cas. 334; 11 Asp. M. C. 105; 24 T. L. R. 786.

(7) (1887) 12 A. C. 484 at p. 493; 56 L. J. Q. B. 626; 57 L. T. 695; 36 W. R. 337; 6 Asp. M. C. [illegible].

on the terms of the office contracts with their buyers, meaning by that that the parties were bound by the terms of those contracts as to whether the goods tendered were such as could be tendered as July shipment goods. Under David Sassoon's indent the 300 tons were tenderable as July shipment goods and were, therefore, so tenderable between plaintiffs and defendants. Each particular office's indent was left to decide whether the goods were tenderable as July shipment.

The 2nd issue is "When did the last steamer of July shipment arrive ?" Now we know that David Sassoon's 300 tons arrived Ex S. S. "Kanjean". Were these July shipment goods tenderable under the contracts between plaintiffs and defendants? That depends on whether David Sassoon could tender them as such to their buyer. This depends on the terms of David Sassoon's indent. I have already pointed out how by entering into forward contracts for July shipment after the arrival of S. S. "Dogra" the bazar showed its opinion that there were still July shipment goods to come and that these transactions in the bazar were entered into on the information that David Sassoon's and Govindram Murlidhar's goods were still to arrive first by S. S. "Ranee" and later by S. S. "Kanjean". Sawyer, manager of David Sassoon, has produced the correspondence and cables relating to this consignment (Exhibits 110—113).

The sugar was purchased from Messrs. Hundal Mij Kian Gwan of Samarang on 15th June 1917, 900 tons superior white July-September equal monthly shipments at Rs 20 per cwt. C. I. F. Karachi war risk included. On 14th August 1917 David Sassoon's London office communicated to the firm out here in the following terms: "White your purchase 20th June 900 tons July-September Kian Gwan wire July portion waiting steamer," a cable received by the London office from the Java sellers. On 16th August 1917 David Sassoons here wrote to the sellers asking them to have the parcel shipped by the first available opportunity "duly sending us along with S. documents an authenticated certificate showing that the sugar in question was ready for shipment within the contract time but the shipment delayed owing to shortage of frieght occasioned by war or Force Majeure". On 23rd August 1917 David Sassoons wrote again, saying they were having considerable trouble with their buyers on account of the Java people's failure to ship the July portion and asking them to lose no time in posting an authenticated certificate, showing that the sugar was deliverable for shipment within contract time and the shipment was delayed through the Government requisitioning tonnage owing to there being no other frieght available.

On 25th September 1917 Hundal Mij Kian Gwan replied saying they would send the "Force Majeure" certificate as soon as possible. On 23rd January 1918 Kian Gawn cabled to David Sassoon here "Kanjean contract on July 300 tons." David Sassoon cabled back "Steamer carrying 300 tons July Have you despatched certificate? If not, post immediately". The reply cable ran: "July. portion steamer Kanjean, certificates attached documents." The certificates are Exhibits 111-113. Exhibit 111 is a declaration by the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company dated 18th December 1917, to the effect that shipment for the 300 tons was duly booked for July 1917 shipment but owing to the refusal of the Indian Government to allow sufficient of the company's tonnage shipment to proceed to Java shipment was impracticable. Exhibit 112 is a declaration by shipping agents before the British Vice Consul at Samarang (Java), dated 6th February 1918, to the effect that no tonnage was available from 31st July 1917 to the time the 'Kanjean' was loaded. Exhibit 113 is another declaration dated 19th January 1918 before the British Vice Consul that no steamers either of the company's line or owned by outside companies were available to load sugar from Java to Karachi till January 1918, when the Dutch S.S. companies offered tonnage. The declarant also declares that from September 1917 he has used all his endeavours in Java and in Holland to induce the Dutch S.S. companies to carry sugar to Karachi and says that the reason efforts have not proved successful sooner is due to the fact that telegraphic communication with Holland was impossible since the beginning of October last.

Now these and similar documents are all documents which by the practice of merchants are accepted as evidence very much on the same principle on which account sales of a foreign agent are accepted as prima facie correct. I cannot do better than refer to the remarks of Macleod, J., In Nissim Isaac Behhor v. Haji Sultanalli Shustary (8) on the futility of issuing commissions to prove facts which are proveable amongst merchants by the production of well-recognised publications, and which remarks aptly apply to a case like the present. The absurdity in a commercial cause of issuing a commission to Java, which would possibly have to be transmitted through Government here to the Dutch Government with a translation of all material documents into Dutch, to say nothing of the delay, is manifest to every one. Wisely the parties came to an arrangement by which this kind of evidence might be admitted.

The Secretary to the Karachi Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Rogers, has produced two cables, copies of which have been put in as Exhibit 76, addressed to the Controller of Shipping and the Batavia Chamber of Commerce, dated 5th Feburary 1918 and 2nd Feburary 1918 respectively, and their replies. That from the Controller shows that all British India and Asiatic Steam Navigation Companies' steamers engaged in India, Australia and Indian coastal trade were requisitioned by the Controller's letter dated 5th May 1917 and that the requisition operated from first completion of discharge after receipt of the letter. The Batavian Chamber of Commerce sent a declaration dated 7th Feburary 1918 by its president and secretary before the British Vice Consul that no tonnage from Java ports to Karachi has been available since the S. S. "Rajah" in July 1917 till the S. S. 'Kanjean".

Further the witness Nusserwanji says that Rallis received two orders dated 25th June 1917 and 3rd July 1917 for July shipment but their London office could not place them. That it was impossible to get tonnage is also clear from correspondence and cables produced between Rallis and their Java sellers Butterworth and Co. This correspondence and these cables are dated July-December 1917 (Exhibit 70). The difficulty of despatching sugar via Calcutta is also shown by Exhibit 69, dated 24th November 1917, even if transhipment were permissible by David Sassoon's indent, which it is not. It was only on 10th January 1918 Rallis were informed by their Java sellers that they expected to obtain the necessary tonnage (see Exhibit 73). There is a mass of other correspondence of a similar character, which Mr. Elphinston has referred to in his summing up but which I do not really propose to set out in detail. Both Mr. Lenz and Nusserwanji say sugar always comes here on a through bill of lading. Mr. Lenz has also produced a large number of documents showing the S. S. "Pundit" and S. S. "Risaldar" which were fixed to load for Karachi in August were requisitioned in July 1917 and the S. S "Ranee" and "Rajah" fixed to load in September were also requisitioned, Exhibits 116 and 117. Volkart Bros. are the agents of the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company; so Mr. Lenz is in a position to say if any of that S. S. Company's ships were available. The first intimation Messrs. Volkart Bros. had that no more July-September freight was available was by wire of their Java sellers on 3rd July 1917 (Exhibit 118). Then there are a number of certificates, sworn to before the British Vice-Consul, of shipping agents and Volkart's suppliers to the effect that no steamers have been available since the S. S. "Rajah" and "Dogra" left Java (Exhibit 119). Volkarts were also the agents for the Dutch companies whose shipping agents have subscribed to those certificates. It was only in January 1918 that the Dutch S. S. companies were able to offer tonnage and the S. S. "Kanjean" which first was to call at Colombo to repair her boilers was available.

Plaintiffs suggest that sugar could have been sent to Calcutta and transhipped there for Karachi. But David Sassoon's indent does not provide for transhipment, and it further provides for delivery at the Bunder. Moreover sugar transhipped at Calcutta is likely to be damaged and we have Mr. Lenz's evidence that sugar from Java has to be sent here on a through bill of lading. (Lenz's evidence, line 36).

Continuing with the question of impossibility of obtaining tonnage, correspondence between Messrs. Volkart and Messrs. Butterworth and Co., their Java, suppliers shows that up to October 1917 no space was available (see Exhibits 143—5). Further correspondence between the importing firms and the dealers here shows that the former intimated the lack of tonnage through Government requisitioning steamers. (Exhibit 141).

(8) 28 Ind. Cas. 433; 17 Bom. L. R. 249 at p. 257; 40 B. 11.

Plaintiffs say that the Java shippers could have shipped by "outside" steamers, i.e, steamers belonging to other S. S. companies than the British India and Asiatic Steam Navigation Companies and that they did not do so because there was a combine by which the Java people agreed to ship only by those two S. S. Companies in consideration of a rebate.

The evidence, however, shows that the Java suppliers were trying to secure steamers from any company including the Dutch lines and were unable to do so. I think the documentary evidence, I have already referred to, clearly shows this.

I wish to add that this documentary evidence has all gone in without objection, it being recognized that it would be absurd to issue commission to various places to secure the evidence on oath of the agents of the different S. S. companies and of the Java suppliers.

I have no hesitation in holding that it was a physical impossibility to secure steamers for Karachi at Java after the departure of the S. S. "Dogra" and "Raja" until the S. S. "Kanjean" began to load.

Another argument advanced for the plaintiffs requires to be dealt with. Plaintiffs say that there was space on the S. S. "Dogra" and "Rajah" for those 300 tons of David Sassoon's and that they should not have been shut out. The point is, was it beyond David Sassoon's control that these goods were not shipped on board those two steamers? I cannot see how David Sassoon could have done more than they did. Ordinarily, 2 to 3 steamers left every month from Java for Karachi. David Sassoon had ordered these goods on 15th June 1917 and the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company's certificate (Exhibit 111) shows that the Java suppliers had booked ship room for the consignment for July shipment. If the shipping company shut out these goods how could David Sassoon in Karachi stop them? To begin with, David Sassoon would not know when the ships would begin to load and in the next place they could not tell till the steamers had sailed that the goods were shut out. They had done everything they could by ordering July shipment goods and obtained space for it. The rest remained with the S. S. Co. Even if they could have known the consignement was going to be shut out, how could they have forced the S. S. Co. to take the goods on board those steamers? The contention that cargo for Bombay should have been shut out in favour of cargo for Karachi scarcely needs an answer. It was not David Sassoon who could direct the disposal of the cargo on board the steamers. Nor could they direct their suppliers to transfer some of their Bombay cargo to Karachi. Moreover, David Sassoons were not the agents of the buyers here to ship the cargo but principals selling to principals (see their indent form Exhibit 30 and clause 18 of that indent). It seems to me futile for the plaintiffs to raise contentions of this kind and ask the Court to pass its time in deciding them.

I, therefore, answer Issue No. 2 by saying that the last steamer of July shipment was the S.S. "Kanjean" and the date of her arrival at Karachi was the date of the arrival of the last steamer of July shipment. That was the 25th February 1918.

Issue No. 3. On the foregoing facts it is clear that at the date of the suit, 1st October 1918 there had been no breach by the defendants of the contract in suit. I go further and hold that as defendants sent plaintiffs a miti khari notice on the arrival of the S. S. "Kanjean" which plaintiffs refused to recognize, the defendants have at no time been guilty of breach.

Issue No. 4 was very properly abandoned by the defendants.

Issue No. 5. I have held that the contracts were possible of performance when the S. S. "Kanjean" arrived. It cannot be said the contracts were void for impossibility of performance because July shipment goods arrived not only by the S S "Bahadur", 'Rajab' and 'Dogra' but also by the S. S. "Kanjean." The fact that it was impossible to obtain steamers after the "Rajah" left Java till the S. S. "Kanjean" arrived would not relieve the defendants of their obligation to deliver July shipment goods merely because David Sassoon's 300 tons and Govindram Murlidhar's goods had been shut out or late shipped. In consequence it is useless to discuss all the authorities that have been cited on the question of what is such impossibility as makes a contract void. If no July shipment goods at all could have been shipped, it would have been a different matter. Nor did the parties contract for any particular July shipment goods, nor were the contracts on 'Sidhi Chiti' a particular European office or a particular indent form.

The defendants could not, as plaintiffs suggest, perform by buying July shipment goods locally ex-godown, because the contracts were for delivery of imported goods at Bunder. Nor were the defendants bound to buy locally or to tender before the S S. "Kanjean" arrived.

Issue No. 6. Defendants were entitled to wait till the arrival of the S. S. "Kanjean," because there was a "Force Majeure" clause in David Sassoon's indent of which they could take advantage and which had the effect of making the 300 tons tenderable as July shipment goods under the indent.

Issue No. 7. The plaintiffs' suit was premature and must be dismissed with costs.

Suit dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2472 OF 1916.

May 20, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis and Mr. Justice Dundas.

SHAH MUHAMMAD AND ANOTHER —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

FAZL ILAHI AND OTHERS— PLAINTIFFS, UMAR AND OTHERS— DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom, proof of—Burden of proof—Gift to khanadamad*—Reversion of gifted property, when takes place—Succession—Daughter entitled to succeed, whether can pass succession to sons.*

Any person, who relies on an alleged custom, has to prove that the custom exists and applies to the circumstances of the case. [p. 914, col. 1.]

Gifted land reverts to the donor or his collaterals only when the line of descendants of the donee, both male and female, has entirely died out. [p. 914, cols. 1 & 2.]

Shahanchi Khan v. Begam Jan, 20 Ind. Cas. 451; 13 P. R. 1914; 236 P. L. R. 1913; 191 P. W. R. 1913, followed.

The same rule applies where property is gifted to a khanadamad [p 914, col 2.]

Fateh Ali v Muhammad Hayat, 18 Ind. Cas. 818; 197 P. L. R. 1913; 63 P. W. R. 1913, overruled.

Except in the case of a daughter who succeeds to her father's property only as an unmarried daughter, entitled to hold it until her marriage, there is no custom whereby a daughter who is entitled to succeed is not also entitled to pass succession on to her sons. [p. 914, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jhelum, dated the 8th June 1916, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd class, Gujrat, dated the 27th April 1916.

Lala Bishen Nath, for the Appellants.

Mr. Zafrulla Khan, for the Plaintiffs-Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This suit relates to land which belonged to Abdullah who gifted it to his khanadamad Sharf Din, son of Qutb Din. As will be seen from the genealogical tree on page 7 of the paper book, Sharf Din was also his brother's son, Abdullah. Qutb Din and Nur Din being brothers, Sharf Din died and the property was mutated in the name of his widow Musammat Karam Bhari. Later on she died leaving two daughters, Musammat Zainab Bibi and Musamma Begam Bibi, who like their mother married first cousins. On the death of Musammat Karam Bhari the property was mutated not in the names of her daughters but in the names of Sharf Din's brothers including the husbands of the daughters. Two of the grandsons of Nur Din then sued the descendants of Qutb Din for one fourth share of the property on the ground that Sharf Din had got the land not from his father Qutb Din but from his uncle Abdullah. One of the pleas of the defendants in that suit was that the descendants of Nur Din could not succeed until the line of Sharf Din, male and female, was extinct. This plea was unsuccessful, though the case was fought up to the Chief Court, see Fateh Ali v. Muhammad Hyat (1). The present suit is brought by Musammat Begam Bibi, one of Sharf Din's daughters, and the three sons of Musammat Zainab Bibi, the other daughter of Sharf Din, for possession of the land. The lower Courts have decreed the claim. Armed with a certificate from the learned District Judge, the defendants Hyat Muhammad and Shah Muhammad, who were plaintiffs in the former suit, appeal to this Court.

The only question, which has been argued before us, is whether the daughter or the daughters' sons of Sharf Din can succeed to the property which was gifted to their father as khanadamad. The other points raised in the grounds of appeal have not been argued. The learned District Judge was himself doubtful as to the correct answer to the question of custom involved in this case, and in his judgment he points out that in an ordinary case of inheritance married daughters as a rule do not succeed to ancestral property and so, if Sharf Din's daughters are allowed to succeed in this case, they are placed on a better footing than if their father had been the son of Abdullah instead of being only his son-in-law. Thus the daughter's daughter is placed in a better position than a son's daughter would be in. This is true, but it must be remembered that this is not a case of Sharf Din having succeeded by ordinary succession. He succeeded by gift, and usually a man to whom property is gifted becomes the absolute owner thereof, though no doubt in the case of persons governed by the Customary Law of the Punjab there is a custom by which the donee cannot dispose of the property at his own sweet will and in certain events the land reverts to the donor or his collaterals. If the donee's line of descendants dies out entirely, then undoubtedly the land reverts to the collaterals of the donor and does not go to the collaterals of the donee. On the other hand, the custom is clearly established that there is no such reversion to the collaterals of the donor so long as any male descendants of the donee are still alive. The question in the present case is whether the land reverts in the presence of daughters of the donee who has died sonless. Any person, who relies on an alleged custom, has to prove that the custom exists and applies to the circumstances of the case. Here the collaterals allege that the custom of gifted land reverting to the donor's family applies to the present case in which the donee has left daughters but no sons. It is for the collaterals to prove their assertion. The learned Vakil for the appellants is unable to point out to us any case in which the collaterals have successfully asserted their right to oust the daughters of the donee. Shahanchi Khan v. Begam Jan (2) is a clear authority for holding that gifted land only reverts when the line of descendants of the donee, both male and female, has entirely died out, and we have no hesitation in following that ruling. The ruling already referred to, viz., Fateh Ali v. Muhammad Hayat (1) is to the contrary, but it is a ruling of a single Judge and is based on a remark in Rattigan's Digest which is to the effect that the Full Bench ruling, Sita Ram v. Raja Ram (3), has laid down the general principle that the property gifted to a khanadamad reverts to the original owner's family in all cases where donor's daughter's male descendants have died out. This remark has, however, been corrected in the latest edition of the Digest and now stands to the effect that the property reverts only where the daughter's direct descendants, both male and female, have died out.

(1) 18 Ind Cas. 813; 197 P. L. R. 1913; 63 P. W. R. 1913.

KALADAN SURATEE BAZAAR CO. LTD., In re.

Then it is urged that even if the daughters of a khanadamad can succeed, still they cannot pass succession on to their sons. But except in the case of a daughter, who succeeds to her father's property only as an unmarried daughter entitled to hold it until her marriage, we are unaware of any custom whereby a daughter, who is entitled to succeed, is not also entitled to pass succession on to her sons.

We uphold the decree of the lower Courts and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 20 Ind. Cas 451; 13 P. R. 1914; 286 P. L. R. 1913; 191 P. W. R. 1913.

(3) 12 P. R. 1892.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCES NOS. 3 AND 4 OF 1920.

May 26, 1920.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Robinson.

In re KALADAN SURATEE BAZAAR CO, LTD., AND SURATEE BURRA BAZAAR CO., LTD.—APPLICANTS,

Excess Profits Duty Act (X of 1919), s. 2—'Business', meaning of—Company owning house property and carrying on business of letting tenements and stalls—Company, whether liable to taxation.

The term 'business' in section 2 of the Excess Profits Duty Act has the same meaning which is assigned to it in the Income Tax Act, and the former Act does not contemplate an extension of that meaning or justify the introduction of anything which, according to the scheme of the Income Tax Act, is wholly dissimilar. [p. 915, col. 2; p. 916, col. 1; p. 917, col. 1.]

A person who has invested his capital in house property and who keeps a rent office, and a staff of rent collectors, clerks, etc., for the purpose of letting out his houses and collecting the rents, is not carrying on a 'business' within the meaning of the Excess Profits Duty Act. Similarly, a Company which holds house property, and distributes the rents therefrom in the form of dividends to share-holders, is not carrying on a 'business' within the meaning of that Act, as, although it is an association for acquiring gain, yet the method of acquiring gain is passive by owning property and not by the active carrying on of business. [p. 918, cols. 1 & 2.]

Mr. Giles (with him Mr. Das), for the Appellants

Mr. Rutledge, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The Financial Commissioner under section 51 of the Incom Tax Act, read with section 15 of the Excess Profits Duty Act, refers for our decision the question whether the Kaladan Soorate Bazar Co, Ltd., at Moulmein is liable to assessment to excess profits duty, and the same question is raised with regard to the Sooratee Bazar Co., Ltd., at Rangoon. The Companies contended that they were not liable as their income was derived solely from rents of houses and Bazar stalls belonging to them, but the Financial Commissioner held that as these Companies exist for the purpose of owning houses and buildings to be divided into tenements and stalls and to be let out, they "carry on business" for the purpose of letting tenements and stalls. In his order the Financial Commissioner pointed out that the definition of business in section 2 of the Act is not exhaustive. It merely says that business includes any trade, commerce or manufacture or any adventure or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture. Section 3 goes on to say that the Act applies to every business carried on in British India not specified in the schedule of "excepted businesses," and the schedule excepts inter alia 'offices and employments' and any profession not being the profession of a commission broker. It seems, therefore, prima facie to imply that an office of employment could be treated as a business under the Act if it were not excepted by the schedule. The Financial Commissioner then argues that if a person practising a profession requires specific exemption in order to escape the excess profits duty as a business, much more would companies like these Bazar Companies require such exemption. It was argued on behalf of the Companies that income derived from house property is clearly distinguished in the Income Tax Act from income derived from business, but the Financial Commissioner pointed out that income derived from professions is also distinguished in the Income Tax Act from income derived from business. Nevertheless he would apparently hold that professions come under the head of businesses in the Excess Profits Duty Act and would be assessable to excess profits duty but for the exemption in the schedule. These Bazar Companies are admittedly not businesses for the purposes of the Income Tax Act any more than professions are businesses for the purposes of that Act. They are assessed to income tax as house property and not as businesses. Nevertheless according to the Financial Commissioner's view they are businesses for the purposes of the Excess Profits Duty Act because they are not exempted in the schedule of that Act, as professions are.

Mr. Giles on behalf of the Companies concerned urges strongly that the contents of the term "business" are the same in the Income Tax Act and the Excess Profits Duty Act, that a person or a company drawing its income from house property is clearly not contemplated in the Income Tax Act as carrying on a business and that, therefore, these Companies do not "carry on a business" for the purposes of the Excess Profits Duty Act either and that the Financial Commissioner has given undue weight to the fact that offices, employments and professions are specifically excepted in the schedule of the latter Act. There seem to be serious difficulties in giving the term "business" a wider meaning under the Excess Profits Duty Act than under the Income Tax Act. The Income Tax Act was passed in 1918 and it was clearly the basis on which the Legislature worked in framing the Excess Profits Duty Act, 1919. Many of the sections of the former are incorporated in the latter with only slight modifications and the definition of business in the Income Tax Act is produced verbatim in the Excess Profits Duty Act. Accordingly, in spite of the wide language used in section 3, it is difficult to hold that the Act contemplates any extension of the word 'business' beyond the meaning assigned to it in the Income Tax Act. In framing the Excess Profits Duty Act the Legislature had before them the Incom Tax Act with its clear distinction between income derived from house property and income derived from business, and yet we find that they impose the excess profits duty only on "excess profits arising out of certain businesses" (vide the preamble of the Act), not on "certain sources of income" as we might, I think, expect if it was really intended to throw the net wider and bring under assessment to excess profits duty sources of income other than those lassed as businesses in the Income Tax Act.

It is instructive to compare the English legislation on the subject with the Indian enactments. In the Income Tax Act of 1842 (5 & 6 Vic., Ch. 35) income is classified according as it is derived from property in land (Schedule A), occupation of land (Schedule B), dividends (Schedule C), professional and trade profits (Schedule D). The "first case" in Schedule D deals with duties on trade profits. It is headed "Duties to be charged in respect of any trade, manufacture, adventure or concern in the nature of trade not contained in any other schedule of this Act." The first case in Schedule D is evidently the source from which the definition of business in the two Indian enactments comes. Turning now to the English provisions for excess profits duty which are contained in Part III of the Finance Act (No. 2) of 1915, section 39, we find that "excess profits duty" applies to all trades and businesses of any description excepting—

(a) husbandry in the United Kingdom ; and

(b) offices or employments ; and

(c) any profession the profits of which are dependent mainly on the personal qualifications of the person by whom the profession is carried on and in which no capital expenditure is required, or only capital expenditure of a comparatively small amount; but including the business of any person taking commissions in respect of any transactions or services rendered, and of any description (not being a commercial traveller, or any agent whose remuneration consists wholly of a fixed and definite sum not depending on the amount of business done or any other contingency).

This is clearly the foundation of the excepted businesses schedule (Schedule I) of our Indian Excess Profits Duty Act, X of 1919. In a very recent case, Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Sangster (1), Mr. Justice Rowlatt ramarked: "It looks as if in the use of the vague word 'business' the Legislature was not glancing at anything more than what is taxable under case 1 of Schedule D of the Income Tax Act, 1842. However, I do not decide that." The same remark may be applied to 'business' in the Indian Act. We may conjecture that when they were imposing this duty the Indian Legislature was not was merely glancing at what was taxable under the head of business in the Income Tax Act of the previous year but had their eyes firmly fixed on it. Otherwise it is hard to conceive why they should have repeated the same definition of business as in the Income Tax Act. We should not, in my opinion, attach any great weight to the schedule of "excepted businesses" as throwing any light on this point. That schedule simply reproduces the corresponding provisions in the English Finance Act of 1915, section 39 (see above). Mr. Giles suggests that 'offices or employments' and 'professions' generally are expressly excepted in Schedule I of the Indian Act merely ex majore cautela. The true explanation, I think, is that the exceptions were taken bodily from the English Enactment of 1915 and incorporated in our Excess Profits Duty Act schedule without a clear apprehension of the reason why these exceptions were made in the English enactment. Offices, employments and professions appear to have been expressly excepted in section 39 of the English Act, because there was some risk of these sources of income being confused with income derived from businesses, seeing that business income and income from offices, employments and professions are all assessed under the same schedule (Schedule D) in the English Act, 1842. There was no such risk in the case of the Indian calssification, for income from business is clearly distinguished in the Income Tax Act from "professional earnings," and moreover the term "business" itself is separately defined in the Income Tax Act, the definition corresponding to the first case, 'trading profits', in Schadule D of the English Act. Although the definition of 'business' in the two Indian Acts is not exhaustive, its looseness will not justify the introduction of things which according to the scheme of the Income Tax Act are wholly dissimilar. An examination of the two Indian Acts does not in my opinion support the Financial Commissioner's order in these cases.

(1) (1920) 1 K. B.587.

Moreover on general considerations also I think it would be difficult to hold that these Bazaar Companies are "carrying on a business."

We must not be misled by the undoubted fact that a very large amount of business of various kinds is carried on in the Companies' Bazaars by their tenants. What we have to decide is whether the Company itself is 'carrying on a business.' The business which these Companies carry on, according to the Financial Commissioner, is the business of letting tenements and stalls, but if that is carrying on a business within the meaning of the Act, then every person who has invested his capital in house property is liable to excess profits duty when his income rises above the minimum limit. It is not contended, however, that any individual owner of house property has been actually assessed as such to excess profits duty, and we can take it that they are not in practice assessed, it being recognised no doubt that they are not liable to assessment as carrying on businesses but are only liable to assessment to ordinary income tax as owners of house property. Does it make any difference then that the assessees here are Companies and not individuals? Such a contention was put forward in another recent case under the English Excess Profits Duty Law Finance (No. 2) Act, 1915, in Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Korean Syndicate Ltd. (2).

The Korean Syndicate merely received interest on money which they had in deposit at a Bank and received royalties from another company to whom the Korean Company had leased a certain concession in Korea. Mr. Justice Rowlatt said: "In my opinion the contention of the Crown, that the Company in this case was carrying on a business, fails. If what the Company is doing, namely, receiving interest and royalties, was done by an individual, no one would say that that individual was carrying on a business, and it does not become a business merely because it is done by an artificial body like a company and not by an individual." A similar contention was raised in the earlier case of Smith v. Anderson (3). That was a case tried by the Master of the Rolls, Sir George Jessel. It was under the English Companies Act, 1862. The case was one in which it was sought to have a certain trust, called the Submarine Cables' Trust, wound up as an illegal association as it was not registered under the Companies Act. The chief question under consideration in the case was whether the trustees concerned or the share-holders carried on a business, and the Master of the Rolls held that there was an association of more than 20 persons formed for the purpose of carrying on a business having for its object the acquisition of gain and that as the association was not registered as a Company, it was illegal. The Appeal Court did not accept this view. They held that the deed of settlement did not authorise the carrying on of a business but merely provided for the management of a trust fund. In the course of his judgment the Master of the Rolls said: "There are many things which in common colloquial English would not be called a business, even when carried on by a single person, which would be so called when carried on by a number of persons. That is a distinction not to be forgotten, even if we were trying the question by the ordinary use of the English language. For instance, a man who is the owner of offices, that is, of a house divided into several floors and used for commercial purposes, would not be said to carry on a business because he let the offices as such; but suppose a Company was formed for the purpose of buying a building, or leasing a house, to be divided into offices, and to be let out, should not we say, if that was the object of the Company, that the Company was carrying on business for the purpose of letting offices, or was an office-letting company, trying it by the use of ordinary colloquial language?" It is evident from the report of the case that the Lords of Appeal did not accept the view that what would not be a business if carried on by one person may be a business if carried on by a large number of persons (vide page 271 of the report). The Master of the Rolls gave a very wide meaning to the term "business." He said: "You cannot acquire gain by means of a company except by carrying on some business or other, and I have no doubt if any one formed a company or association for the purpose of acquiring gain, he must form it for the purpose of carrying on a business by which gain is to be obtained." These views were not accepted by the Court of Appeal. They pointed out that to come within the Companies Act it would be necessary that the association should be formed not merely for the purpose of acquiring gain but for the purpose of carrying on a business by which gain is to be acquired. They held that the Submarine Cables' Trust did not carry on a business, though they were associated for the purpose of acquiring gain by investing certain money once for all and receiving the proceeds thereof. The fact that they were authorised in certain circumstances to sell out securities and buy others instead, would not bring them within the Companies Act for that was merely a subsidiary matter subordinate to the main purpose of the association.

(2) (1920) 1 K. B. 598.

(3) (1880) 15 Ch. D. 247; 50 L. J. Ch. 39; 43 L. T. 329; 29 W. R. 21.

MUHAMMAD SHAH v. ABDULLAH SHAH.

We are now dealing with an entirely different enactment, but the decision of the Court of Appeal in Smith v. Anderson (3) is a useful guide in considering whether these Bazaar Companies are carrying on a business. The mere fact that they have each a place of business and that they have registered under the Companies Act is not material. A man who has invested his capital in house property and who keeps a rent office and a staff of rent collectors, clerks, etc., for the purpose of setting out his houses and collecting the rents is not carrying on a business. He is merely taking the ordinary steps necessary for enjoying the income from his property. If he bought and sold house property continually he would then no doubt be carrying on a business, he would be trading in house property, but not if he only bought a house or sold one from time to time as incidental to his position as owner of house property. And this is apparently the position of the companies now under consideration. They may add to their property by purchase or by sale of a particular part of their property from time to time, but this is only incidental to their main purpose which is to hold property and distribute the rents in the form of dividends to the shareholders. They are no doubt an association for acquiring gain, but the method of acquiring gain is passive by owning property and not by the active carrying on of a business. I would, therefore, decide that these two Companies are not liable to excess profits duty.

The assessees in both cases are allowed their costs of the reference in this Court, Advocate's fee being fixed at five gold mohurs.

References accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 670 OF 1920.

June 1, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott Smith.

MUHAMMAD SHAH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ABDULLAH SHAH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 11, applicability of—Undervaluation of relief as to injunction—Value fixed by rules—Jurisdiction.

Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act applies only where the valuation of the suit depends on the discretion of the parties or the Court and is not applicable when the valuation is fixed by rules having the force of law. [p 9 9, col. 2]

Gunga Sahai v Sheo Lal, 132 P R. 1894, Khuda Yar v. Wahab Din, 35 P. R 1901; 47 P.L R. 1901, Sanga v. Mali, 8 Ind. Cas 1043; 2 4 P. L. R. 1910, followed.

Plaintiff sued for possession of a vacant site and for perpetual injunction, to the effect that the defendants should not prevent him from building a house thereon. He valued his relief for possession at Rs. 50 and that for injunction at Rs. 10. The Munsif, 2nd Class, having decreed the claim in part, both parties appealed to the Senior Subordinate Judge, who modified the decree without any objection being raised as to jurisdiction. Defendants filed a second appeal to the High Court on the ground of undervaluation of the relief as to injunction and of the want of jurisdiction of the Senior Subordinate Judge:

Held, (1) that section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act did not cure the defect, as the valuation of the suit did not depend entirely on the discretion of the defendants but was fixed by the rules of the Court;

(2) that the order of the lower Appellate Court was defective, having been passed without jurisdiction.

Second appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 25th November 1919, modifying that of the Munsif, 2nd Class, Hoshiarpur, dated the 2nd July 1919.

Sheikh Niaz Muhammad, for the Appellants.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In the suit out of which the present second appeal arises the plaintiff-respondent sued for possession of a vacant site and for perpetual injunction to the effect that the defendants-appellants should not prevent him from building a house thereon. Those reliefs he valued as follows:—

(1) That for possession of site at Rs. 50, and

(2) that for injunction at ... Rs. 10.

Total ... Rs. 60.

The first Court having decreed the claim, both the parties appealed to the Senior Subordinate Judge who decided the appeals without any objection being raised as to jurisdiction.

Defendants have filed a second appeal in this Court, and it is urged that the plaintiff undervalued the relief for injunction. It is urged that under the rules framed by this Court a suit in which a right to build, with or without an injunction, is claimed must be valued at such a sum exceeding Rs. 100 and not exceeding Rs. 500 as the plaintiff may state in the plaint. Had the second relief claimed been properly valued, the total value of the reliefs claimed would have exceeded Rs. 100 and as the suit was an unclassed one the appeal would have lain to the District Judge and not to the Senior Subordinate Judge. It is clear that the relief was undervalued in the plaint, but Lala Fakir Chand on behalf of the respondent says that the defect is cured by section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act and that no objection having been taken in the Court of first instance or in the lower Appellate Court, this Court should not interfere unless it considers that the undervaluation has prejudicially affected the disposal of the appeal on its merits.

In Gunga Sahai v. Sheo Lal (1) it was held that inasmuch as the valuation of a suit for perpetual injunction has, for the purposes of jurisdiction, been fixed by the rules of the Chief Court, sanctioned by Government, at a sum between Rs. 100 and Rs. 500. the 3rd Class Munsif, who tried the suit, had no jurisdiction to try it and that the defect of jurisdiction was not cured by section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, which is limited to cases of "over-valuation or undervaluation," in which the valuation depends on the discretion of the parties or the Court.

In the present case the valuation of the second relief did not depend entirely on the discretion of the defendants at all, but was fixed by the rules at a sum exceeding Rs. 100 and not exceeding Rs. 500. The above ruling was followed in a Division Bench case reported as Khuda Yar v. Wahab Din (2) and in the case reported in 8 Ind. Cas. 1043 [Sanga v. Mali (3)] corresponding to 214 P. L. R. 1910.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court, direct that the record be returned to that Court, which will return the memoranda of appeal to the respective parties and they, if so advised, will re file their appeals in the Court of the District Judge. The latter officer will take the necessary steps for having valuation for the purposes of jurisdiction corrected and the Court-fee made up to the correct sum. The stamp in this Court will be refunded and other costs will be costs in the case.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 132 P. R. 1894.
(2) 35 P. R. 1901; 47 P. L. R. 1901.
(3) 8 Ind. Cas 1043; 214 P. L. R. 1910.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS JUDICIAL CASE No. 79 OF 1919.

April 30, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

FIRM RAM KUMAR SHEO CHAND RAI—DEFENDANTS—APPLICANTS

versus

FIRM TULA RAM NATHU RAM—PLAINTIFF - OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 22—Transfer of case, application for—Jurisdiction of Court, whether can be questioned - High Court, power of, to determine whether suit shall be tried by Court subordinate to another High Court—Order, whether final.

A defendant cannot raise an issue as to the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is pending and at the same time apply for transfer of the case under section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code, which contemplates that the suit may be properly instituted in the Court in which it is pending as well as in some other Court. [p. 921, col. 2.]

Under section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code a High Court has power to determine whether a suit shall proceed in a Court subordinate to itself or in some Court subordinate to another High Court, and an order by a High Court that a suit shall proceed in a Court subordinate to another High Court will be final and it will not be open to the latter Court to refuse the suit being tried in the Court subordinate to it having jurisdiction to try it. [p. 922, col. 2.]

Application for transfer from the Court of the 1st Sub-Judge, Purulia, to the Bombay High Court.

Messrs. P. C. Manuk, P. K. Sen and G. C. Pal, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. S. A. Ashgar and A. N. Das, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application by the defendants for transfer of Suit No. 1 of 1919 pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Purulia. The circumstances under which this application has been made are as follows :—

The plaintiffs are a firm carrying on business at Calcutta and Purulia. The defendants are also a firm carrying on business as merchants and commission agents at Bombay. The plaintiffs employed the defendants as their agents for the purchase and sale of piecegoods and cotton in the Bombay market.

The plaintiffs have brought the present suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Purulia against the defendants for rendition of accounts, for returning the papers belonging to them and for recovery of Rs. 1,100 or such further amount as may be found due to them on account being taken and on payment of additional Court-fee.

The reason for bringing the suit in Purulia is stated in paragraph 5 of the plaint, to be that the defendants agreed to state and settle their accounts and submit all papers to the plaintiffs' firm at Purulia and that the cause of action arose at Purulia. The plaint in the present suit at Purulia was filed on the 3rd of January 1919.

On the 4th of May 1919 the defendants in the present case likewise brought a suit in the Bombay High Court on its original side against the plaintiffs for account and for recovery of Rs. 26,736 odd as the amount due to them from the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs, who are defendants in the suit at Bombay applied to the Bombay High Court for stay of that suit until the present suit at Purulia was decided. That application was opposed by the defendants in the present case, and the High Court of Bombay on the 12th July 1919 made an order that the suit and all proceedings in the Bombay Court be stayed until the disposal of the present suit at Purulia.

In the meantime on the 11th July 1919 the defendants in the Purulia case made an application to this Court, alleging that they were not aware of the suit at Purulia and came to know of it during the pendency of the motion at Bombay.

In support of this application two grounds have been urged in paragraphs 6 to 8:—

(1) That all the witnesses of the petitioners, about 30 in number, are traders and brokers of Bombay. They reside and carry on their business at Bombay beyond the jurisdiction of the Purulia Court and will not be available for examination at Purulia and will have to be necessarily examined by commission. The defendants, who are residents of Bombay, will be put to great inconvenience and expense and will be seriously prejudiced in their defence in the event of the case being tried at Purulia.

(2) Both the suits at Bombay and at Purulia arise out of the same transaction and relate to accounts between the parties, the former covering all the issues that will arise in the Purulia suit which has been instituted with the mala fide intention of delaying the disposal of the case at Bombay.

The petitioners also challenge in paragraph 5 of their petition the competency of the Purulia Court to entertain the present suit, on the ground that the contract between the parties was entered into and the moneys due thereunder were payable at Bombay, where they were employed as agents by the plaintiffs. In other words, it is stated that the cause of action did not arise at Purulia and the suit could not be instituted there.

The petitioners repeated the aforesaid grounds in their sworn affidavit of the 11th March, disclosing the names of some of their witnesses at Bombay and stating more definitely and clearly their objection as to the jurisdiction of the Purulia Court to try the suit.

On the other hand, the plaintiffs opposite party have filed counter-affidavits, dated the 10th March and the 9th April 1920. In the latter it is stated that it will be necessary for them (the plaintiffs) to adduce, besides documentary evidence, oral evidence of witnesses from Purulia and Calcutta; that the proprietors of the defendants' firm live in Calcutta and have their office in Calcutta, as is shown by the correspondence between the Attorneys of the defendants' firm, Messrs. Marwangi Kola and Company, Bombay, and the plaintiffs' Attorneys, Messrs. Pugh and Co., Calcutta, dated the 10th December 1918 and 13th June 1919. The allegation as to the cause of action having arisen in Bombay is also refuted.

Both the suits relate to accounts between the parties who are at variance with regard to the two important points which arise for consideration in connection with this application:

(1) Whether the cause of action for the suit arose at Purulia within the jurisdiction of this Court, or at Bombay, and

(2) Whether the balance of convenience lies in trying the suit at Purulia or at Bombay.

If the first question is decided in favour of the defendants, then the application for transfer would become unnecessary, and unless that question is decided against the plaintiffs and it is held that the case has been properly instituted in the Purulia Court, the application for transfer is incompetent, inasmuch as under section 22 of the Code of Civil Procedure such an application can only lie "Where a suit may be instituted in any one of two or more Courts and is instituted in one of such Courts." If the cause of action did not arise at Purulia, the suit could not be instituted in that Court and any application under sections 23 and 24 would be incompetent. This is an issue in bar and has to be determined by the Purulia Court where the suit has been filed. This issue has not yet been tried and in fact the defendants have not filed their written statement even. Mr. Manuk says that his clients could not delay the filing of this application and await the decision of that issue, inasmuch as an application under section 22 has to be made "at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement." But in a case of this kind where the defendants contemplated an application for transfer and also thought that the Purulia Court had no jurisdiction to try the case, the proper course to my mind was to file a written statement and to apply to the Purulia Court to try in the first instance the question as to the jurisdiction of that Court to entertain the suit and at the same time intimating that, if the decision was against them, they intended to apply for the transfer of the case to the Bombay High Court. It was, to my mind, also open to them to ask this Court to have the issue as to jurisdiction tried by the Purulia Court in the first instance and then to take up this application for transfer in case that issue was decided against them. In any case the petitioners cannot raise an issue as to jurisdiction of the Purulia Court and at the same time apply for transfer of the case under section 22 of the Code, which contemplates that the suit may be properly instituted in the Purulia Court as well as in some other Court. In this view the present application for transfer is incompetent as was held in cases similar to the present one, Sachendra Nath Mitra v.

Muhammad Habibullah (1) and Askaran Baid v. Bhola Nath (2).

In order to decide the second question, I shall assume that the case has been properly instituted in the Purulia Court and that the present application for transfer is competent.

The prayer in the application is that the suit in question be transferred to Bombay. I understand from Mr. Manuk that the application is under sections 22 and 23 of the Code, although, probably by inadvertence, section 24 has been mentioned in place of section 23 in the petition to this Court. Section 22 provides for an application for transfer and empowers the Court, to which such application is made, after considering the objections of the other parties to the suit, to "determine in which of the several Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed." Section 23 indicates the Court to which an application under section 22 should be made. Clauses (1) and (2) do not apply to this case, as they relate to cases where the several Courts having jurisdiction to try the suit are subordinate to the same Appellate Court or to the same High Court. The application of the defendants, therefore, comes under clause (3) of section 23, which provides that where the several Courts are subordinate to different High Courts, the application under section 22 shall be made to the High Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the Court in which the suit is brought is situate.

The question is whether this Court can transfer the suit from the Purulia Court to any Court subordinate to the High Court at Bombay. Section 24 of the Code deals with transfer and withdrawal of suits on application having been made under clauses (1) and (2) of section 23, and does not, therefore, apply to the present application. By that section express power of transfer has been given to the High Court or the District Court, as the case may be, but for cases which may be instituted in Courts subordinate to different High Courts, no such special provision has been made, so that this Court has no power by any express provision of the Court to transfer a case from the Court subordinate to it to any other Court subordinate to the Bombay High Court, or to the Bombay High Court itself. The Court can only dispose of the present application for transfer in the manner prescribed by section 22, under which it can only "determine in which of the several Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed." The power of the Court is, therefore, limited to the determination as to where the suit shall proceed, at Bombay or at Purulia, assuming that the Courts at both the places have jurisdiction to try it. I do not agree with the view taken by Mr. Stanyon in Abu Bakar Abdul Rahiman & Co. v. Rambux (3) that a High Court has no such power of determination and that such a determination will in any way create anomaly or difficulty. An order of a High Court under section 22, that a suit shall proceed in a Court subordinate to another High Court, will be final and it will not be open to another High Court to refuse the suit being tried in the Court subordinate to it having jurisdiction to try it.

The petitioners urge that the suit at Purulia should not proceed inasmuch as the suit in the Bombay High Court is more comprehensive and covers the issues involved in the Purulia Court (vide paragraph 12 of the petition). But the suit in Bombay has already been stayed, by an order of the Bombay High Court, until the disposal of the suit at Purulia. The order of the Bombay High Court is final and the Bombay suit, therefore, cannot proceed. The present suit at Purulia must, therefore, proceed.

Mr. Manuk, however, contends that although the suit at Bombay has been stayed and the order cannot be re-opened in this Court, he is still entitled to a determination that the present suit should be tried at Bombay. This he will be entitled to, only upon showing either that he will not have an impartial trial at Purulia, or that the manifest preponderance of convenience in the present case is in favour of the present suit being tried at Bombay. There is no suggestion as to the existence of the former ground in the present case, namely, that there will not be an impartial trial of the suit at Purulia.

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 707.
(2) 48 Ind. Cas. 105; 21 O. C. 217.
(3) 46 Ind. Cas. 393; 13 N. L. R. 81.

Now as to whether there is manifest preponderance of convenience in the present suit being tried at Bombay rather than at Purulia, Mr. Manuk says that on behalf of the petitioners 30 witnesses will have to be examined in the case, all of Bombay and men of great wealth and position, and that it would not be possible to bring them to Purulia and in fact under the law they cannot be compelled to come to Purulia, inasmuch as the place of their residence is beyond the jurisdiction of the Purulia Court. Further it is said that it will cause great inconvenience to bring on record huge account books from Bombay either in the applicants' own possession or in the possession of their witnesses.

Mr. Asbgar, on the other hand, asserts that his witnesses live in Calcutta and Purulia, and contends that no such voluminous documents, as has been stated on behalf of the petitioners, will be required in the case. Upon the affidavit in this case filed on behalf of the clients of Mr. Asbgar it appears that the defendants' firm have also some office in Calcutta and that they were willing to show their account books to the plaintiffs in the present case in Calcutta. Whereas the witnesses on behalf of the defendants are said to reside in Bombay, the plaintiffs themselves reside within the jurisdiction of the Purulia Court; and whereas the evidence of the witnesses can be had by commission, the evidence of the plaintiffs themselves, if they want to examine themselves in the case, must necessarily be taken in Court, for parties can seldom examine themselves by commission. While looking to the convenience of the defendants, one cannot overlook the inconvenience of the witnesses on behalf of the plaintiffs or the plaintiffs themselves, particularly when they have in the first instance the right to choose the venue in which they would prosecute their suit.

I am not satisfied upon the affidavit in this case that the balance of convenience preponderates in favour of the defendants. Much stronger grounds, than in the present case, were alleged in the case of Helliwell v. Hobson (4) and still the Court did not allow the change of venue. No doubt in the case of Harendra Lall Roy v. Sarvamangala Dabee (5) the balance of convenience was held to lie in the Court other than the Court in which the suit was instituted; but the defendant in that case was a lady whose evidence was essential in the case and who, the Court held, could not go to Dinagepur without much inconvenience and expense which she was not able to afford. The circumstances of that case might have been sufficient to entitle the defendant to have his case transferred to Calcutta. But the circumstances of each case differ. The majority of the Judges have in the circumstances more or less similar to those in the present case, or even under stronger circumstances, declined to change the venue and to deprive the plaintiff of the right to choose his own venue. The facts of this case are similar to those of Askaran Baid v. Bhola Nath (2), Abu Bakar Abdul Rahiman & Co. v. Rambux (3), Sachendra Nath Mitra v. Muhammad Habibullah (1), where applications for transfer, similar to the present one, were refused, vide also Muthia Chetty v. Arunachallam Chetty (6).

The fact that the Bombay High Court has already stayed the suit pending there, strengthens the position of the plaintiffs in the present case.

Considering all the circumstances I do not see my way to accede to the request of the defendants-petitioners and dismiss the application and direct that the case at Purulia do proceed.

The application is rejected with costs. Hearing fee five gold mohurs.

Application rejected.

(4) (1858) 3 C. B. (N. S.) 761; 140 E. R. 942; 111 R. R. 829.

(5) 24 C. 183; 12 Ind Dec. (N. S) 788.

(6) 23 Ind. Cas 345; 7 Bur. L. T. 1; 7 L. B. R. 129

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 3070 OF 1915.

November 19, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

IBRAHIM ALI KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat MUBARAK BEGAM AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Succession—Marriage—Slave

IBRAHIM ALI KHAN v. MUBARAK BEGAM.

girl—Acknowledgment that issue of slave girl entitled to succeed, effect of—Illegitimacy—Burden of proof.

Although according to strict Muhammadan Law, no marriage is necessary between a slave girl and her master, yet an acknowledgment by the master that he has a son born by the slave girl, with whom he has gone through a ceremony of marriage, coupled with the assertion that on the failure of issue from his real wife the issue of the slave girl would be entitled to his succession, would invest the son with a legitimate status with all the consequences which that imports. In the absence of positive evidence that the marriage did not take place, the law will refuse to declare the son a bastard and so disentitled to inherit [p. 925, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Karnal, dated the 4th June 1915.

The Hon'ble Mian Fazil-i-Husain and Dr. Shuja ul Din, for the Appellant.

Lala Hargopal for Sheikh Niaz Ali, for the Respondents.

NAWAB NAJABAT ALI KHAN
|
Nawab Daler Khan
|
Nawab Muhammad Gulsher Khan
|
Nawab Rahmat Khan — Nawab Muhi-ud-Din
Nawab Bahadur Jang Khan (childless) — Nawab Ghulam Ali Khan — Muhamad Yar Khan
Nawab Muhammad Ali Khan
Hon'ble Nawab Muhammad Ibrahim Ali Khan.
Ahmad Hassan Khan =Musammat Muhammadi Begam. — Mubarak Begum = Muhamad Hasan Khan = Nau Bahar Shadi Khan.

JUDGMENT.—The foregoing pedigree table displays the relationship existing between the parties to this case. The appellant-plaintiff came into Court, alleging that Ahmad Hassan Khan and Muhammad Hassan Khan had held the property in dispute as mere guzara khwars or tenants for life and that the real proprietary right was vested in the plaintiff. Ahmad Hassan Khan died in 1886 and Muhammad Hassan Khan in September, 1907. Ahmad Hassan Khan left a widow, Musammat Muhammadi Begum, and Muhammad Hassan Khan a widow, Musammat Mubarak Begum, both of whom were alive at the time of the institution of the suit. The plaintiff's suit was for possession of the property of Muhammad Hassan Khan on the ground that widows had no right to succeed and were entitled merely to maintenance, that Musammat Muhammadi Begum had surrendered her husband's estate and had accepted an annuity of Rs. 300 as maintenance whilst the second defendant Shadi Khan, who set up a claim to be the son of Muhammad Hassan Khan, is not his son and is entitled neither to succession nor to maintenance. On the death of Muhammad Hassan Khan in 1907 mutation of his estate was effected in favour of his widow, Musammat Mubarak Begum, and Shadi Khan, defendant No. 2, in equal shares.

The trial Court gave the plaintiff a decree in respect of Musammat Muhammadi Begum's share in the property in suit, but dismissed his claim in respect of Muhammad Hassan Khan's share on the ground that Shadi Khan's mother was married to Muhammad Hassan Khan and that Shadi Khan as the legitimate son of Muhammad Hassan Khan was entitled to succession.

The plaintiff has appealed to this Court in respect of that portion of his claim which was dismissed, and before us the only point which has been contested is whether Shadi Khan is the legitimate son of Muhammad Hassan Khan. It is no longer contended that Muhammad Hassan Khan in respect of the arrears now in dispute was entitled merely to a life-interest by way of maintenance. It is quite clear from the evidence on both sides that Musammat Nau Bahar Begum, the mother of Shadi Khan, was a kanizak or female slave purchased by Muhammad Yar Khan and that she gave birth to defendant No. 2. We have carefully considered the evidence of the alleged marriage ceremony between Musammat Nau Bahar Begum and Muhammad Hassan Khan and are unable to avoid the conclusion that it is highly unsatisfactory and unconvincing and would be quite insufficient to justify a positive finding that the marriage did in fact take place.

Shadi Khan deposes that the marriage between Musammat Nau Bahar Begum and Muhammad Hassan Khan took place some few years before Muhammed Hassan Khan's marriage with Musammat Mubarak Begum; but some of his witnesses allege that the marriage with Musammat Mubarak Begum took place before the marriage with Musammat Nau Bahar Begum. The Nikah Khwan who performed the marriage is indeed mentioned by name, but he is said to be dead and he does not appear to have been the ordinary Nikah Khwan of the family, if indeed a Nikah Khwan of that name existed at all. Moreover having regard to the fact that Musammat Nau Bahar Begum was a purchased slave and that at the time of the alleged marriage Muhammad Hassan Khan must have been a mere boy, we hold it extremely improbable that his father would have sanctioned a regular marriage between his son and a mere slave girl, especially when we know that according to the strict Muhammedan Law no marriage is necessary between a slave girl and her master. Our conclusion then is that the marriage between Muhammad Hassan Khan and Musammat Nau Bahar Begum is not proved by the specific evidence on that issue. But as against this there is an acknowledgment made on the 14th March 1907 by Muhammad Hassan Khan before the District Judge of Karnal that he had a son born not of his real wife but of a female slave with whom Muhammad Hassan Khan had gone through a ceremony of marriage, and he proceeded to assert that on the failure of issue from his real wife the issue of the aforesaid female slave would be entitled to his succession. Now, it is admitted before us on behalf of the plaintiff that Shadi Khan is the son of Muhammad Hassan Khan by Musammat Nau Bahar Begum and at page 170 of Wilson's Digest of Anglo-Muhammadan Law we find that if a man has acknowledged another as his legitimate child, the presumption of paternity arising therefrom can be rebutted only by the establishment of certain conditions which the learned commentator sets forth. None of these conditions are satisfied in this case. It has, however, been argued before us that such an acknowledgment is merely an estoppel and does not prejudice the right of third persons, and we have been referred to Muhammad Allahdad Khan v. Muhammad Ismail Khan (1). We are unable to accept this contention, for it seems to us clear that the result of such an acknowledgment is to invest the son with a legitimate status with all the consequences which that imports, and this view was taken by the Privy Council in Sadik Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan (2). We have already said that Muhammad Hassan Khan's marriage with Musammat Nau Bahar Begum has not been proved, and we even go so far as to say that the fact of that marriage is extremely improbable; at the same time the question for us to decide is whether the marriage has been disproved and we must answer this question in the negative. The law refuses to declare a man a bastard except on the clearest and most positive proof of his illegitimacy, and before we can find that the marriage between Muhammad Hassan Khan and Musammat Nau Bahar Begum is disproved, we must be in possession of positive evidence that the marriage did not take place. Such evidence in this case is lacking, and in the absence of such disproof we must attach to the acknowledgment made by Muhammad Hassan Khan its full value and hold that Shadi Khan is not a bastard. Consequently Shadi Khan is entitled to Muhammad Hassan Khan's succession and the plaintiff's suit against him must fail.

We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 10 A. 289; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 193.

(2) 36 Ind. Cas. 104; 38 A. 627 at p 651; 31 M. L. J. 607; 14 A. L. J. 1248; 19 O C. 192; 18 Bom. L. R. 1037; 21 C. W. N. 130; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 577; 21 M. L. T. 40; 1 P. L. W. 157; 4 O. L. J. 22; 25 C. L. J. 363; 6 L. W. 378; 10 Bur. L. T. 140; 43 I A. 212 (P. C.).

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 286 OF 1919.

April 30, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Batten, Offg. J. C.

TEKCHAND—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

Musammat PATTO AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—NON-APPLICANTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 4—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 6—Plaint filed on day Court re-opened after vacation—Limitation, expiry of, during vacation—Plaint omitting to state cause of delay—Plaint, whether liable to be rejected—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 57 (9)—Judicial notice—Holidays notified—Duty of Court.

Although under rule 6, Order VII, of the Civil Procedure Code the plaint in a suit filed after expiry of the period of limitation should show on what ground exemption is claimed, yet an omission to do so in respect of a suit filed on the day the Court re-opened after its summer vacation, the period of limitation for bringing which had expired during the vacation, would not entail dismissal of the suit, because under section 57 (9) of the Evidence Act the Court is bound to take judicial notice of any public holidays notified in the Official Gazette, and the plaintiff is entitled to presume that the Court would take such judicial notice. The proper course for the Court in such a case is not to dismiss the suit but to require the plaint to be amended [p. 927, col. 1.]

Revision of the order of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Hoshangabad, in Civil Suit No. 581 of 1919, decided on 30th August 1919.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Applicant.

Mr. B. R. Pendharkar, for the Non-Applicants.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the suit is admittedly one governed by Article 66 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act. In the ordinary course the plaint would have to be presented within three years from the date of the cause of action. In paragraph 5 of the plaint it is stated that the cause of action accrued on the 17th May 1916. In the last paragraph of the plaint it is stated that the plaint was presented on the 16th June 1919, and it was presented. The 16th of June 1919 was the first day after the annual Court vacation. The fact that the Civil Courts would be closed had been notified in the Gazette under the signature of the Registrar of the Judicial Commissioner's Court with the previous sanction of the Chief Commissioner. The plaint was presented to the Clerk of Court who, under the Judicial Commissioner's Civil Circular No. I 1, paragraph 2, made an endorsement on the plaint that it had been presented on the 16th of June. The endorsement also recited that it had been presented within time. In due course the Small Cause Court Judge, under the Judicial Commissioner's Civil Circular No. III 4, paragraph 2, passed an order on the trial-sheet under date 21st June 1919 that the plaint is admitted and registered and ordered summonses to be issued to the defendants for final disposal. The Clerk of Court and the Small Cause Court Judge thus treated the plaint as prima facie being within time and it was not rejected under rule 11 (a), Order VII, Civil Procedure Code. Both the Clerk of Court and the Small Cause Court Judge himself, therefore, considered that if the statement in the plaint were correct, the suit was prima facie within time.

At the hearing the defendants' Pleader pleaded that the claim, as stated in the plaint, was time-barred and the plaintiff's Pleader replied that the claim was not time-barred "owing to vacation." The following preliminary issue was framed:—

"Can plaintiff now rely upon the exemption on the grounds alleged when the plaint is silent upon it?"

The exemption meant was that embodied in section 4 of the Indian Limitation Act, IX of 1908, which runs as follows:—

"Where the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, preferred or made on the day that the Court re-opens."

The Small Cause Court Judge delivered the following judgment:—

"Preliminary issue:—I find this issue in favour of defendant. Rule 6 of Order VII, Civil Procedure Code, is imperative. According to this rule plaintiff is bound to show on the face of the plaint that the cause of action accrued within the period of limitation and cannot take advantage of any ground of exemption from limitation which he has not pleaded in the plaint.

Jageshwar Roy v. Raj Narain Mitter (1),

(1) 31 C. 1951 8 C. W. N. 168.

Gulam Hussein v. Mahamadally Ibrahimji (2), Gobinda Mal v. Santa (3.)

I, therefore, find no alternative but to dismiss the suit. I order that the suit of plaintiff be dismissed. Plaintiff shall pay the costs of defendant."

Rule 6 of Order VII, First Schedule, Civil Procedure Code, runs as follows:—

"Where the suit is instituted after the expiration of the period prescribed by the law of limitation the plaint shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed."

In the three cases cited by the learned Small Cause Court Judge, the plaintiff wanted to have the limitation extended on account of an acknowledgment made by the defendant or on account of interest paid by him. These were grounds within the special knowledge of the plaintiff and could not possibly be within the acknowledge of the Court, as they had not been stated in the plaint as originally presented. Even in such circumstances as these it has been ruled in Gunnaji Bhaiaji v. Makanji Khushalchand (4) that where the plaint has not been rejected, the plaint may be amended at the hearing. Even on the view taken by the Small Cause Court Judge this might well have been done in the present case. Under section 57, subsection (9), of the Evidence Act the Court is bound to take judicial notice of any public holidays which have been notified in the Official Gazette and the plaintiff was entitled to presume that the Court would take such judicial notice. The wording of the plaint assumed that the Court would understand why the plaint had been presented on the 16th of June and not during the vacation. The Clerk of Court accepted the plaint as being within time as a matter of course and the Small Cause Court Judge tacitly adopted the same view. The plaint may not have in so many words shown the ground upon which exemption was claimed, but it was assumed that this would be understood and it was in fact understood. If the view of the learned Judge were to prevail, then in every case where limitation expires on a Sunday the plaint would have to be rejected if the plaint presented on the succeeding Monday did not expressly state that the previous day was a Sunday. For these reasons I think that the grounds given for dismissing the suit are wrong.

The order of the Small Cause Court Judge is set aside. He will restore the suit to file and dispose of it according to law. Costs will be costs in the suit. I fix Rs 15 as Pleader's fee in this Court.

Order set aside.

(2) 7 Ind. Cas. 455; 12 Bom. L. R. 531; 34 B. 540.
(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 441; 83 P. R. 1914; 232 P. L. R. 1915; 192 P. W. R. 1914.
(4) 3 Ind. Cas. 159; 34 B. 250; 11 Bom. L. R. 498; 6 M. L. T. 234.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 702 OF 1916.

May 26, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Leslie Jones.

FATTA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SIKANDAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), O. XXII, rr. 4, 9—Failure to bring legal representatives of deceased respondent on record within time prescribed by law—Ignorance of law, whether sufficient cause—Joint interests of several respondents—Abatement of appeal in toto.

Mere ignorance of law is not a sufficient cause for not applying within time to bring the legal representatives of a deceased respondent on the record. [p. 928, col. 1.]

Hadu v. Lala, 21 Ind. Cas. 951; 41 P. R. 1915; 15 P. L. R. 1914; 16 P. W. R. 1914, followed.

Where the interests of defendants-respondents are joint and a decree cannot be reversed without the representatives of a deceased respondent being brought on the record, the whole appeal must abate. [p. 928, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jhelum, dated the 30th November 1915, reversing that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Jhelum, dated the 30th November 1914.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mian Fazl-i Husain, for Respondents Nos. 1 to 10.

JUDGMENT.—Mr. Fazl-i-Husain, who represents the chief respondents-defendants Nos. 1 to 10, raises a preliminary objection that this appeal has abated, Sikandar, respondent No. 1, having died and no application to bring his legal representatives upon the record having been made within the period prescribed by law. The application for impleading his representatives was made in June 1919. It asked for the impleading of representatives of no less than six of the plaintiffs-appellants and of Sikandar and Bata respondents. In not a single case was an application made within six months of the death of any of the deceased parties, and the only excuse made was that the appellants were ignorant of the law and did not know that they had to make any application.

It was held in Hadu v. Lala (1) that mere ignorance of law was not sufficient cause for not applying within time to bring the legal representative of a deceased respondent on the record. It is clear, therefore, that the appeal has abated as regards Sikandar, and the only question which we have to decide is whether it has abated as a whole.

In 1858 the ancestors of the plaintiffs made over proprietary rights in certain land to the ancestors of defendants Nos. 1 to 10. The ancestors of defendants brought a suit for a declaration that they were owners of the said land and obtained a decree on the 18th June 1887. The plaintiffs assert in the present suit that these defendants have no right to a share in the shamilat appertaining to the proprietary land held by them as owners under the aforesiad agreement and decree. The first Court held that the defendants were not entitled to any share in the shamilat and give the plaintiffs a decree accordingly. The learned District Judge on appeal held that the defendants were entitled to a share in the shamilat, and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. The proprietary land which came to the defendants Nos. 1 to 10 from their ancestors, under the agreement aforesaid, appears to be still joint and any share in the shamilat to which they are entitled is a joint share. In support of his argument that the appeal has abated as a whole, Mr. Fazl-i-Husain has referred to Khuda Bakhsh v. Mathra Das (2), Hadu v. Lala (1), Inayat v. Ganga (3) and Fateh v. Bhanu Ram (4). These authorities support the proposition that where the interests of defendants-respondents are joint and a decree could not be reversed without the representative of a deceased respondent being brought on the record, the whole appeal must abate. The defendants respondents' right to the shamilat is a joint right. The decree in their favour amounts to a declaration that they are entitled to a share in the shamilat corresponding to a specified area of the proprietary land owned by them. This decree could not be set aside without the heirs of Sikandar being before the Court and, therefore, the abatement of appeal as against him involves the abatement of the appeal as a whole. Khuda Bakhsh v. Mathra Dass (2) is particularly in point. In that case the father of the plaintiff had sold the land in suit to one M. D. who re sold it to seven persons by one deed of sale, which specified the area each of the vendees was to take but not the proportion in which the sale money was to be paid by vendees. Plaintiff sued for possession after his father's death on the ground that the sale was not binding on him. The first Court decreed his claim, but the Divisional Judge reversed this decree on appeal. Plaintiff then appealed to the Chief Court. One of the vendees-respondents subsequently died and as no application was made to bring his representatives on the record, the appeal abated as far as he was concerned. It was held that as the land was still joint in the hands of the vendees the appeal, having abated against one of them, could not proceed against any of the respondents and must be dismissed. In Hadu v. Lala (1) it was stated that a useful test in such cases was, could the suit ab initio have been instituted and prosecuted with the deceased respondent left out? We are clear that the present suit could not have proceeded as laid with Sikandar left out. We are, therefore, of opinion that Mr. Fazl-i-Husain's preliminary objection must prevail and we hold that the appeal has abated and we direct the appellants to pay the respondents' costs in this Court.

Appeal rejected.

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 951; 41 P. R ; 15 P. L . R 1914; 16 P. W. R. 1914.

(2) 18 Ind. Cas. 182; 62 P. R. 1913; 85 P. L. R 1913; 89 P. W. R. 1913.

(3) 32 Ind. Cas. 829; 3 P. R. 1916; 200 P. W. R 1915.

(4) 41 Ind. Cas. 730; 96 P. R. 1917; 49 P. W R 1917.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 259 OF 1919.

March 2, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, Offg. J. C.

Musammat GAJIBAI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Babu NILKANTH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 140, 144 —Devised property, suit for possession of—Devisee in possession—Limitation applicable.

Where the purchaser of the rights of a devisee sues to obtain possession of the devised property, the period of limitation applicable, if the devisee or his transferee has once obtained possession, is prescribed by Article 144 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. If the devisee has not obtained possession, the suit must be brought within the period prescribed by Article 140 of that Schedule. [p. 929, col. 2; p. 930, col. 1.]

Mr. V. D. Sathaye, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. R. Dixit, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Ranu Jamadar made two Wills, the first dated the 12th February 1893 and the second dated the 12th December of the same year. Ranu died on the 30th October 1900 leaving a daughter Sakhia Bai and two grand daughters Tani and Tai. Tani's husband Harba is defendant No. 5 in the suit. Tani died on the 28th July 1902 leaving a minor son Krishna, who died shortly after her. Harba sold his rights which he claims to have inherited from his wife, who in her turn derived her title under the Will of Ranu. The present suit is by the purchaser for partition and possession of the houses bequeathed to Tani by the Will of Ranu. The lower Court has passed a decree for partition and possession. This appeal has been filed by the defendants.

There are three grounds taken. The third has been given up. The second ground is one which cannot be raised in view of the decision of this Court in Second Appeal No. 501 of 1916. The sole question left for decision is whether the suit is barred by limitation.

The suit was instituted in the year 1914. It is argued that the case is governed by Article 140 of the Limitation Schedule. In support of this reliance is placed upon the Privy Council decision in Mylapore Iyaswamy v. Yeo Kay (1). That case would have been applicable if at any time prior to the suit the plaintiff had not been in possession. It would appear that Sakhia Bai made a gift in 1901 to her elder daughter Tani of the property which she had inherited from her father. I should mention here that by the first Will certain houses were given to Sakhia Bai and Tani jointly. By the second Will, as it has been interpreted in the previous remand judgment certain chasmas were taken away from Tani and given to her younger sister Tai. Tani, after her marriage, lived with her husband Harba at Khandwa, but there is no reason to doubt that up to the year 1906 or thereabouts the mother and daughter were on good terms and if the management, as held by the lower Court, was in the hands of the husband of Sakhia Bai, that management was not adverse to Tani. There is reason to believe that Babu Nilkanth, the present plaintiff, had actually obtained possession of the whole of the houses after the deed of gift. Suit No. 880 of 1903 was filed by Sakhia Bai stating that she was a lunatic and claiming possession of the houses gifted by her from Harba and his transferee Nilkanth. That suit ultimately succeeded on the ground that Sakhia Bai was not mentally competent to make the gift, vide Exhibit D-3, though the decision of the Court of first instance (Exhibit D-1) is based upon wider grounds. What was decreed may fairly be taken to be possession of the houses gifted by Sakhia Bai, that is her undivided share in the two houses. The present plaintiff's title, so far as it is derived from Tani under the Will of Ranu, was not disputed, and could not be disputed in that suit.

I think there is a clear admission in the previous suit that the present plaintiff was in possession not only of Tani's undivided share, but also of the undivided share of Sakhia Bai gifted to her. If a devisee or his transferee once obtains possession within 12 years of the estate falling into possession, the limitation would be governed by Article 144. If no possession had ever been obtained by Tani, or Harba, or Babu

(1) 14 C. 801 (P. C.); 14 I. A. 163; 11 Ind. Jur. 397; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 50; 7 Ind. Doc. (N. s.) 531.

Nilkanth, the suit would have been barred by Article 140; but since there was possession within 12 years, the suit is not barred and as I have already said, to such a suit Article 144 would apply.

The decision of the lower Appellate Court appears to be correct and the appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 1 OF 1919.
July 29, 1919.
Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Robinson.
Shaik ISMAIL—APPELLANT
versus
S. EZEKIEL—RESPONDENT.

Paper Currency Act (II of 1910), s. 26—Promissory note—Endorsement in blank, effect of—Holder, right of, to recover.

The endorsement in blank of a promissory note has the effect of making the note payable to bearer on demand. Such endorsement does not contravene the provisions of section 26 of the Paper Currency Act, as that section only prohibits the original making or issuing of promissory notes payable to bearer on demand, and the holder of a note so endorsed is not prevented from recovering on it.

Mr. Barnabas, for the Appellant.

Mr. N. M. Cowasji, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The promissory notes in suit were, made by the defendant on 21st May 1915 and 5th August 1915 in favour of a Chetty who transferred them to plaintiff for valuable consideration by endorsing them in blank and banding them over to the plaintiff's agent on 17th October 1916. The plaintiff in this case sues the maker of the notes for the full amount, Rs. 5,120-4 0, principal and interest, due on them.

The defendant pleaded part-payment to the Chetty to the extent of Rs. 2,700 in various instalments from August 1915 to October 1916 inclusive. We are not much impressed by the evidence as to these payments, and there is nothing to show that if they were made they were made towards satisfaction of the promissory notes in suit and not to some other account.

No endorsements of payment were made on the notes, and there is nothing to show that, if these payments were made, the plaintiff had any knowledge of them. In these circumstances the plaintiff would be entitled to recover the full amount due on the notes. See Vithaldas Khandas v. Indravellu (1).

The principal defence, however, is that the promissory notes having been endorsed in blank have thereby become notes payable to bearer, and that, therefore, they contravene the provisions of section 26 of the Paper Currency Act of 1910. It is true that by endorsement in blank the notes do become payable to bearer on demand. But it appears to us that the mischief which the section was intended to stop was the original making or issuing of promissory notes payable to bearer on demand, and if the Legislature had intended to prevent the endorsement of promissory notes so as to have this legal effect, they surely would have said so expressly. This question has already been dealt with in Sana Eman Saib v. Mooma Ena Mahomed Meera Saib (2) in our opinion the decision in that case is correct. Various sections of the Negotiable Instruments Act clearly contemplate the endorsement of negotiable instruments in blank, and the effect of such endorsements is to render them payable to bearer on demand. There is nothing to prevent the holder of a note endorsed in this manner from recovering on it. For these reasons we are of opinion that the learned Judge on the Original Side has decided the case correctly, and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 29 Ind. Cas. 936; 8 Bur. L. T. 161; 8 L. B. R. 202.
(2) 22 Ind. Cas. 77; 7 Bur. L. T. 96; 7 L. B. R. 70.

KHUSHAL SINGH v. KANDA.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 797 OF 1916.

May 8, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Leslie Jones and Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

KHUSHAL SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

KANDA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation—Adoption, right to challenge, barred by limitation—Gift to adopted son, whether can be impeached by reversioners.

Where an adoption remains unchallenged, and the right to impeach it is barred by limitation, a gift made subsequently in favour of the adopted son does not give the reversioners a fresh cause of action, in that it does not involve any further denial of their rights than was involved in the adoption. [p. 932, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 11th January 1916, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Jullundur, dated the 4th June 1915.

Mr. Des Raj Sawhney for Mr. Abdul Rashid, Lala Mehr Chand Mahajan and Lala Jaggan Nath for Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellants.

Lala Fakir Chand, for Labh Singh and Amar Singh, Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit by the nephew and grand-nephew of Kanda Singh, a Hindu Jat of Liddar in the Jullundur Tahsil, for a declaration to set aside an oral gift made by him in 1913 of 177 kanals 5 marlas of land in favour of Labh Singh and Amar Singh, his daughter's sons.

The Senior Sub-Judge found that a small portion of the area was the self-acquired property of Kanda Singh, and as regards that area the suit must necessarily fail. The bulk of the property, however, was ancestral and it was on a finding that the defendants had established a custom under which Kanda Singh was empowered to make a gift to the sons of his daughter that the Senior Sub Judge dismissed the suit. The District Judge took the same view and dismissed the appeal but granted a certificate on which second appeal has been filed in this Court.

The onus of proof lay upon the defendants, vide Ralla v. Budha (1), and in his discussion of the case the District Judge admitted that the judicial decisions, at all events those later than 1893, were against the custom which the defendants set up. He thought, however, that the trend of public opinion had set in favour of the custom of gift and that this was evidenced by a number of undisputed mutations which had occurred in villages in the neighbourhood of Liddar where the parties reside.

There were in all nine comparatively recent mutations on which reliance was placed. Of these Exhibit D-1 was a gift in 1903 in favour of a daughter. The character of the land is unknown and the consent of the nearest reversioner was obtained. Exhibit D 2 relates to a case afterwards decided in Rulia v. Wariam Singh (2). Exhibits D 3 and D-4 are mutations of 1898, but the relationship of the donee, the character of the land and the existence of collaterals are unknown factors. Exhibit D-5 is a mutation of 1892 in favour of a daughter's son, but here again we know nothing about the collaterals or the character of the land and the gift was, of course, prior to the Full Bench ruling. Exhibit D 6 is a mutation in 1890 of ancestral land in favour of a daughter which was disputed by the collaterals whose suit was ultimately dismissed by the Chief Court, no doubt following the view then taken as regards the power of gift. Exhibit D-7 is a mutation in 1888 of a gift in favour of daughters. It is not known whether the land was ancestral. Exhibit D 8 is a mutation in 1888 of a gift by a widow of one half of her property in favour of her daughter's son, but the consent of the collaterals was obtained and they at the same time obtained a gift of one-third of her property with reversion to the remaining one-sixth when the widow died. Exhibit D-9 is a mutation of 1886 in favour of a daughter. This is one of the cases from Pindori Nijran referred to in Jamiat Singh v. Ujagar Singh (3). The only other instance taken from the record of the second settlement relating to Marza Liddar in the Phillour Tahsil appears to have been really a case of a gift to a khanadamad.

Of the judicial decisions, that on which

(1) 50 P. R. 1893.

(2) 20 Ind. Cas. 454; 94 P. R. 1913; 287 P. L. R. 1913; 177 P. W. R. 1913.

(3) 55 Ind. Cas. 838; 1 L. 15.

the District Judge mainly relied was his own judgment, which was reversed in Jamiat Singh v. Udgar Singh (3).

It may be true that there is a movement of public opinion in favour of such gifts, but their validity has certainly not been established by the evidence produced in this case, and Counsel for the respondents, who has not discussed his own instances, has hardly attempted to argue this point.

In their written statements the defendants alleged that Kanda Singh had brought up both the donees as his sons from their infancy. They afterwards amplified this by saying that Kanda Singh had adopted Labh Singh when the latter was a baby, and in support of this contention they asked to be allowed to produce a registered Will of 1892 and for the framing of a further issue regarding limitation, their contention being that as Labh Singh was adopted, and the suit was for a declaration, it was barred by time under Article 118. The Senior Sub-Judge, though he framed the desired issue, appears to have considered that the plea of adoption was an afterthought, and he refused to allow to admit the Will in evidence. He then disposed of the plea of adoption by saying that if Kanda Singh had adopted Labh Singh, he would not afterwards have made a joint gift to both of his daughter's sons. On the question of adoption the District Judge did not go further than quoting arguments of Counsel on either side.

It appears to us that in the circumstances of the case the Will of 1892, which goes to the root of the case, should have been admitted in evidence, and as it is a registered document and the execution of it is admitted by Counsel for the appellants, we have admitted it now. We note that before it was produced in Court, numerous witnesses for the defendants had stated that Labh Singh was adopted by Kanda Singh in about 1885 and that it is quite impossible that the story of the adoption was a mere afterthought prepared for the purposes of this case during its pendency. There is ample evidence of long continued treatment, and it further appears that in 1905 Kanda Singh had purchased land in the name of Labh Singh, who was even then described as his adopted son. In his evidence in the present case Kanda Singh has again sworn to his adoption of Labh Singh.

There appears to us to be no doubt that this adoption is a well established fact. According to custom it would be no more valid than a gift, but there was obviously no effort at concealment and the fact of it was clearly well known to the plaintiffs.

Having once allowed their suit for a declaration against the adoption of Labh Singh to become barred by time under Article 118, the plaintiffs are not entitled to sue for a declaration that the subsequent gift by Kanda Singh is not binding on them because that gift does not give them a fresh cause of action, in that it does not involve any further denial of the rights of reversioners than was involved in setting up the adoption in the first place. The gift of 1913 to both the daughter's sons is tantamount to a gift with the consent of the adopted son.

On these grounds we hold that the present suit is barred by time and we, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2683 OF 1916.

February 6, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir N. R. Chatterjea, Kt., and Mr. Justice Panton.

Raja PROMOTHA BHUSAN DEB ROY BAHADUR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NARENDRA BHUSAN ROY, AND ON HIS DEATH HIS HEIRS AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES, KHAGENDRA BHUSAN ROY AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), s. 11, O. IX, r. 9—Landlord and tenant—Suit for possession by tenant, dismissal of, for default—Abatement of rent on ground of dispossession, claim for, whether barred in subsequent suit for rent—Res judicata—Munsif's decision, whether operates as res judicata in subsequent suit brought in Subordinate Judge's Court.

The dismissal for default of a suit against his landlord for recovery of possession of certain property comprised in the plaintiff's dar-mourashi tenure does not preclude him, in a subsequent suit for rent brought by the landlord, from claiming abatement of rent owing to dispossession by the landlord. [p. 934, col. 2.]

PROMOTHA BHUSAN DEB ROY v. NARENDRA BHUSAN ROY.

The decision on a question in the Court of a Munsif does not operate as res judicata on the same question in a subsequent suit between the same parties brought in the Court of a Subordinate Judge. [p. 935, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Jessore, dated the 19th of August 1916, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Court of that district, dated the 31st of July 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Roy (with him Babu Satis Chandra Ghatak), for the Appellant.—I am the patnidar of Lot Harishpur within which Hat Salika is included. A dar-patni lease in respect of Harishpur was granted to the father of defendant No. 1. The dar patni, however, was re-conveyed to the patnidar. Hat Salika was covered by the dar-patni lease and, therefore, after the re-conveyance of the dar-patni to the patnidar, the defendant cannot claim Hat Salika. My next contention is that the suit of defendant No. 1 for possession of Hat Salika having been dismissed for default on the 25th of November 1908, he is precluded by the provisions of Order IX, rule 9, of the Code of Civil Procedure from bringing another suit for possession of Hat Salika and that, therefore, his right to claim abatement of rent is also barred. The defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are only claiming through defendant No. 1. The cause of action in the previous suit of defendant No. 1 was not merely dispossession but the right claimed by defendant No. 1 and infraction of that right. Again in 1909 there was a rent suit against defendant No. 1 for the years 1313 to 1315. The District Judge gave a decree for the full rent claimed by the plaintiff and the objection of the defendant regarding abatement of rent on account of Hat Salika was overruled. This judgment, therefore, operates as res judicata and the claim for abatement of rent cannot be again raised in the present suit.

Babu Pravash Chandra Mitter (with him Babu Manmohan Bose and Babu Biraj Mohan Mojumdar, for the Deputy Registrar), for the Respondents.—The dar-mourashi lease executed by the plaintiff's father comprises six properties, one of them being the jama of Rs. 16 and described as Hat Salika and appertaining to Gourmani's jama. The dar-patni of Lot Harishpur could not, therefore, include Hat Salika. In reply to the second contention of my learned friend, I submit that my previous suit for possession having been dismissed for default I may not be able to sue again for Hat Salika. But it does not follow that because we cannot maintain a suit for possession of Hat Salika, we are not entitled to claim abatement of rent—a claim which is based upon the result of the dispossession by the plaintiff. See Chand Kour v. Partab Singh (1). As regards the third argument advanced by my learned friend, I submit that the suit for rent in the year 1909 was brought in the Munsif's Court while the present suit is brought in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The decision of the Munsif, therefore, cannot operate as res judicata in the present suit.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Roy, in reply.—The plaintiff in the present suit could have brought a separate suit for rent for each of the four years claimed and then the suit would have been cognizable by the Munsif and, therefore, there is no bar to the decision of the Munsif in the rent suit of 1909 from operating as res judicata. Finally I submit that the Courts below ought to have come to a definite finding as to whether the land on which Hat Salika now stands and of which the plaintiff is in possession did form part of Gourmani's jama. Hat Salika might have been formerly held in Gourmanis's jama and since then the site might have been abandoned.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for rent of a dar mourashi tenure, the rent being claimed at Rs. 238 annas 12 a year.

The main defence was that there was dispossession of a portion of the tenancy and that, therefore, there should be a suspension of the rent.

It appears that a dar mourashi lease was executed by the plaintiff's father in favour of the father of the defendant No. 1 on the 15th June 1865. The lease comprised six properties, one of them being a jama of Rs. 16 and described as Hat Salika appertaining to Gourmani's jama. The plaintiff's father was the putnidar of Lot Harishpur within which Hat Salika was included. On the same day, 15th June 1865, the plaintiff's father gave a dar-patni lease in respect of Harishpur to the father of the defendant No. 1. This dar-patni right, however, was re-conveyed to the plaintiff on the 9th August 1905. On the 7th April 1909, the dar-maurashi interest was conveyed by the defendant No. 1 to the defendants Nos. 2 and 3.

(1) 16 C. 98: 15 I. A. 156; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 243; 12 Ind. Jur 331; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 65.

It appears that on the 3rd June 1908, that is, after the re-transfer of the dar-patni right to the plaintiff's father, the defendant No. 1 instituted a suit (No 846 of 1908) against the plaintiff for recovery of Hat Salika. It was dismissed for default on the 25th November 1908. The matter came up to the High Court and ultimately the Rule was discharged on the 27th July 1909. Then it appears that on the 31st March 1909 a rent suit was instituted in the Munsif's Court for rent of the dar-maurashi against the defendant No. 1 for the years 1313 to 1315. It is unnecessary to refer to the proceedings in that suit at its various stages. Ultimately the District Judge gave a decree for the full rent claimed by the plaintiff, overruling the objection of the defendant with respect to the jama of Rs. 16 on account of Hat Salika.

It appears that the plaint in the rent suit instituted on the 31st March 1909 was returned for presentation to another Munsif and was re-filed on the 14th April 1909. The defendants Nos. 2 and 3 purchased the dar-maurashi in the interval, namely, on the 7th April 1909. They were no parties to that rent suit.

In the present suit the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 set up the plea that the plaintiff was not entitled to get rent in respect of Hat Salika and that there should be a suspension of the entire rent. The Courts below have given a decree for rent at the rate claimed after deducting Rs. 16, the jama of Hat Salika.

The plaintiff has appealed to this Court.

The first contention raised on behalf of the appellant is that the defendants had, after the conveyance dated the 9th August 1905, no right to Hat Salika.

Now, as stated above, Hat Salika is situated within Lot Harishpur, and was dealt with separately along with some other Hats in the dar-maurashi settlement. It was treated as a properly separate from the dar patni and we agree with the Court below in holding that although the usual words "Hat", etc., appear both in the dar patni lease and in the deed of conveyance of the dar-patni, they did not include Hat Salika, and that by the conveyance of 9th August 1905 the plaintiff did not acquire any right which had not been granted to the defendants' father by the dar-patni lease. We think that the Courts below have properly construed the document.

The next contention is that the suit of defendant No. 1 for possession of Hat Salika having been dismissed for default on the 25th November 1908, he was precluded by the provision of Order IX, rule 9, from bringing another suit for possession of Hat Salika and that, therefore, his right to claim abatement of rent is also barred.

There is no doubt that the defendant No. 1 or defendants Nos. 2 and 3 claiming under him are not entitled to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action, in other words, they cannot sue for possession of Hat Salika. But it does not follow that because they cannot maintain a suit for possession of Hat Salika, therefore, they are not entitled to claim abatement of rent, a claim which is based upon the result of the dispossession by the plaintiff.

As pointed out by the Judicial Committee in Chand Kour v. Partab Singh (1), "the dismissal of a suit in terms of section 102, Civil Procedure Code, is not intended to operate in favour of the defendant as res judicata. When read with section 103, it precludes a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action, referring, irrespectively of the defence or the relief prayed, entirely to the grounds, or alleged media, on which the plaintiff asks the Court to decide in his favour."

It has been contended that the cause of action in that case was not merely dispossession but the right claimed by the defendant No. 1 and infraction of that right.

But the present defence really arises upon the result of the previous suit and the mere fact that the defendant is precluded from bringing a suit for possession does not prevent him from setting up the claim for abatement of rent. For instance if the defendant had been out of possession or 12 years and his right to get a decree for possession had been barred, he would still have been entitled to claim abatement of rent.

Then it is contended that the judgment in the rent suit operates as res judicata. But the decree upon which reliance is placed was passed in a suit decided by the Munsif's Court and the present suit had been instituted in the Subordinate Judge's Court. The decision in the Munsif's Court, therefore, does not operate as res judicata.

It is next contended that the plaintiff could have brought a separate suit for rent for each of the 4 years claimed; the suit would have been cognizable by the Munsif. That may be so, but it was the plaintiff who brought one suit for rent for the 4 years and other amounts which exceeded the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsif.

The last contention is that the Courts below ought to have come to a definite finding whether the land on which Hat Salika now stands and of which the plaintiff is in possession did form part of Gourmani's jama. It is said that Hat Salika might have been formerly held on Gourmani's jama and that site might have been abandoned.

But in the first place there was no suggestion of it in the Court of first instance and apart from that, it was admitted that Hat Salika was in the jama in suit. The learned Subordinate Judge says: 'The plaintiffs admitted that they remained in possession of Hat Salika within the present jama but they contended that the defendant No. 1 sold Hat Salika to the plaintiff together with Lot Harishpur." The case of the plaintiff, therefore, was not that there was any dispute as to the identity of Hat Salika but that Hat Salika had passed to the plaintiff under the conveyance of 1905.

We think, therefore, that the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 266 OF 1918.

May 27, 1918.

Present:—Mr. Justice Maung Kin.

TUN AUNG—APPELLANT

versus

MA HTEE—RESPONDENT.

Trespassers, rival, on Government land—Revenue, payment of, effect of—Title, superiority of.

As between two trespassers upon land which is the property of Government, the one who pays the Government revenue and is allowed to stay on the land has a title superior to the one who has made no such payment.

Mr. Hay, for the Appellant.

Mr. Doctor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The suit out of which this appeal arises relates to a piece of land which is described by the parties as "Myanukyun baw" land. It is now described in the revenue maps as holding No. 87 of 1910-11. This land came into existence some seven years ago. It either adjoins the plaintiff's holding No. 77 or is some distance away from it. It is common ground that the land belongs to Govenment. It appears the plaintiff went into occupation of the land in dispute and for three years planted Dhani trees on it. It appears her efforts did not meet with success, for every year the young plants were washed away when the land became submerged during the rains. The defendant entered upon the land in 1914 and planted Dhani plants while it appears the plaintiff was doing the same, and this led to a dispute between the parties. The plantiff applied to the Revenue uthorities to have the defendant evicted from the land. The Revenue Authorities, however, referred the parties to a civil suit. Hence this suit by the plaintiff for the recovery of possession of the land from the defendant who is alleged to have trespassed upon her land. It is admitted that the plaintiff was never assessed to revenue in respect of her occupation of the land at any time. The defendant, however, entered upon occupation of the land either with the permission of the revenue surveyor in whose jurisdiction the land is or he paid revenue on the land shortly after he went on it. For the subsequent years also he has paid revenue in respect of the land. In my judgment the defendant has a better right to the land. The real owner of the land is the Government and the Government had by accepting revenue from the defendant allowed him to take possession of it. Thus so far as the Government were concerned, the defendant was not a trespasser at the time he entered upon the land in 1914 but the plaintiff, though she was the first comer, had been a trespasser all along. That being the case, the defendant's possession was derived from the real owner and the law justifies him to hold the land as against anybody who comes upon the land without the owner's permission. The lower Courts held both the parties to be trespassers. If that view were correct, their decision should be upheld. But the point that really matters in this case does not seem to have occurred to them, namely, the fact that the defendant had been allowed by the Government to stay on the land by paying revenue to it. The appeal is allowed with costs.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3012 OF 1915.

July 21, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Dundas.

THE FIRM KATASI SINGH-KAHAN SINGH THROUGH KAHAN SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

THE FIRM DAULAT RAM-KIRPA RAM, THROUGH KIRPA RAM—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 105—Presentation, time for—Reasonableness of time, whether question of law—Appeal, second.

The question of the reasonableness of the time for presenting a bill of exchange for payment is a mixed question of law and fact. [p. 936, col. 2.]

East Indian and Anglo-Indian Deposit and Loan Society Limited v. Dr. T. M. Nair, 31 M. 364; 4 M. L. T. 89, dissented from.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Rawalpindi, dated the 10th July 1915, affirming that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Rawalpindi, dated the 9th November 1914.

The Hon'ble Pandit Sheo Narain and Mr. Sewa Ram Singh, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are briefly as follows. The defendant firm wanted to remit money to Bombay, and they accordingly purchased a draft on the 10th September 1913 from the plaintiffs for a sum of Rs. 1,100 which was debited by the plaintiffs to the defendants in the accounts. The draft consisted of a bill of exchange drawn by the Rawalpindi branch of the People's Bank on the Bombay branch of the People's Bank in favour of the plaintiffs, who endorsed it on the 10th of September 1913 in favour of the defendants. The present suit is for the recovery of the money on account of the price of the draft.

The Courts below have concurred in holding that the defendants or their endorsees did not present the instrument for payment to the drawees up to the 19th September 1913 when the latter suspended payment, and that the period from the 10th of September to the 19th of September was a reasonable time for presentation. Mr. Nand Lal for the respondents raises a preliminary objection that the question of reasonable time is one of fact and not of law and that the finding of the learned District Judge cannot, therefore, be assailed. There is no doubt that this is the view taken by the Madras High Court in a judgment, East Indian and Anglo Indian Deposit and Loan Society Limited v. Dr. T. M. Nair (1). This view, however, is not quite in accordance with the decided cases in England, where the rule as stated by Chitty is to the following effect:—

"The Jury ought to find the facts such as the distance at which the persons live from each other, the course of post, and all other circumstances applicable to the case. But when these facts have been ascertained, the reasonableness of the time becomes a question of law which is to be determined by the Court and not by the Jury."

The better view, therefore, seems to be that the question is not purely one of fact but is a mixed question of law and fact. The learned District Judge has not considered all the circumstances laid down in section 105 of the Negotiable Instruments Act for the determination of the question of reasonable time, e. g., the nature of the instrument and the usual course of dealing with respect to similar instruments. We have, however, given our due consideration to such evidence as exists with respect to these matters and are not prepared to dissent from the view that the delay was in the circumstances of this case not a reasonable one. It is to be observed that the defendants put forward the plea that their endorsees, Messrs. Jokh Ram of Bombay, had presented the bill on the 15th September and again on the 16th September; but the Courts below have rejected this defence and come to the conclusion that no presentation was ever made. It was probably due to this false defence that all the circumstances having a bearing on the question of reasonable time were not investigated by the lower Courts and the defendants have only themselves to thank if the lower Courts recorded their opinion against them.

(1) 31 M. 364; 4 M. L. T. 89.

For the aforesaid reasons we confirm the decree of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 184 OF 1919.

May 10, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

SASIBALA DASI AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

CHANDRA MOHAN DUTTA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Property given to two widows for maintenance—Tenancy-in-common—Property acquired under grant from Government, whether self-acquired.

Where property is given to two widows for their maintenance, they enjoy it as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants [p 938, col 1]

Property acquired under a grant from Government is self-acquired, unless it is merely restoration of a confiscated grant intended for the benefit of the family. [p 938, col 1]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Manbhum.

Mr. Susil Madhab Mullick, for the Appellants.

Mr. Abani Bhusan Mukherji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit instituted by the plaintiffs for recovery of khas possession of the entire share of the properties mentioned in Schedules ka and ga and of half share of the property mentioned in Schedule kha, by ejecting defendant No. 1 who is in wrongful possession of the same, and for mesne profits and costs. The plaintiffs say that in 1902 plaintiff No. 1 instituted a suit for recovery of possession by metes and bounds of two-annas share in Mouza Ranguni, alleging that the said two-annas share belonged to her husband Sristidhar and that she became entitled to it on the death of her husband. That suit was compromised and the property in suit was divided into three equal parts covered by Schedules ka, kha and ga and it was arranged that plaintiff No. 1 would get plot ka and that Sunaina and plaintiff No. 1 would get jointly the land of Schedule ga, and that Sunaina and Sumitra would get the kha lands for their maintenance. It was further agreed that on the death of Sunaina and Sumitra the plaintiff No. 1 would get the kha lands. Sunaina sometime after died. The plaintiff No. 1's case is that she had been in possession until 1914, when she was dispossessed by virtue of the order of the Court giving possession to defendant No. 1. The trial Court gave a decree to the plaintiff, but on appeal the learned Subordinate Judge gave a decree for possession of the lands described in Schedules ka and ga in the plaint but dismissed her claim with respect to the possession of half of kha. The Subordinate Judge also reduced the amount of mesne profits to Rs. 200. In my opinion it is impossible to support the decision of the lower Appellate Court. The relevant portion of the compromise decree runs as follows:—"Defendant No. 2 Srimaty Sunaina Dasi and the widow of late Prasanna Kumar Dutta will take into possession the lands of Schedule kha for maintenance for life. The defendants Nos. 1 and 3 will have no objection to this. After the death of both of them the plaintiff will take possession of the lands, to which defendants Nos. 1 and 3 will have no objection" Upon a proper construction of this compromise the plaintiff No. 1 was, in my opinion, entitled to a moiety of the land of Schedule kha after the death of Sunaina. It is to be borne in mind that Schedule kha lands were given to Sunaina and Sumitra as maintenance, and as such Schedule kha lands were enjoyed by them not as joint tenants but as tenants in-common. The cases reported as Jogeswar Narain Deo v. Ram Chandra Dutt (1), Hirabai v. Lakshmibai (2) and Bai Diwali v. Patel Bechardas (3) are ample authorities for the view that I have taken. The learned Vakil for the respondents, however, has drawn my attention to the decision of the Privy Council in Narpat Singh v. Mahomed Ali (4). Before I deal with that case, it must be pointed out that property acquired under a grant from Government is undoubtedly self-acquired, as was laid down in the Shivagunga's case [Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga (5)], unless it is merely restoration of a confiscated grant intended for the benefit of the family. See Kedar Nath v. Ratan Singh (6). It will be noticed that the grant in the case of Narpat Singh v. Mahomed Ali (4) was merely restoration of confiscated property by the Government and the grant which was for the benefit of the family created a joint tenancy. It has also to be borne in mind that the grantor, that is, the Government, did not claim to resume the land. In my opinion, therefore, that case is not very helpful in the determination of the present case. Apart from that, if it is true, as was pointed out in the case of Muthumeenakshi Ammal v. Chendra Sekhara Ayyar (7), that there is not much distinction in principle between the judgment of the Privy Council in Narpat Singh v. Mahomed Ali (4) from that in Jogeswar Narain Deo v. Ram Chandra Dutt (1), then, as was held in that case, we are bound by the later decision of the Privy Council.

There are two other points on which the plaintiff, in my opinion, must succeed. It was distinctly alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff actually came into possession of half the kha lands on the death of Sunaina and this fact has not been controverted in the written statement. The plaintiff had been recorded in the landlord's Sherista. so the landlord obtained a decree of rent against her and in execution of the decree the land was put up for sale, and defendant No. 1 paid the amount and as such became the statutory usufructuary mortgagee under section 6 of Regulation XX (1830) and actually got delivery of possession of the property on the 15th January 1914 by dispossessing the plaintiff. This right of the defendant to remain in possession exists only as long as Rs. 37 which he deposited in Court has not been paid off, and as it has been found by both Courts that more than Rs. 37 has been realised by him, he is not entitled to retain possession, vide Haradhan Mandal v. Iswar Das Marwari (8) and Sahodra Kuer v. Gobardhan Tiwari (9). There is absolutely no proof and no finding that the defendant No. 1 has better title than the plaintiff and, therefore, on the authorities quoted above the plaintiff is entitled to get back the possession of the property. From whatever view we look at the case of the plaintiff, in my opinion, she is entitled to recover khas possession of a moiety of the kha lands.

Whatever may be the position of Sumitra under the compromise, defendant No. 1 cannot succeed unless he shows a better title than that of the plaintiff. The contention that this being a suit in ejectment, the plaintiff must succeed on the strength of her own title, will be of no avail in a case like this, when the possession which the defendant has got is by virtue of an order of the Court and under which he is not entitled to retain possession after the Rs. 37 which he deposited had admittedly been paid off. This being my view of the case, I declare that the plaintiff is entitled to the possession of a moiety of the kha lands. As regards mesne profits this is a matter which will have to be enquired into afresh in the Court below, and I, therefore, allow this appeal with costs, leaving it to

(1) 23 C. 670 (P. C.); 23 I. A. 37; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 13; 6 M. L. J. 75; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 445.
(2) 11 B. 573; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 377.
(3) 26 B. 445; 4 Bom. L. R. 102.
(4) 11 C. 1; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 558; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 82; 5 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 757.
(5) 9 M. I. A. 539 at p. 610; 2 W. R. P. C. 31; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 520; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 25; 19 E. R. 843.
(6) 7 Ind. Cas. 648; 32 A. 415; 14 C. W. N. 985; (1910) M. W. N. 311; 8 M. L. T. 193; 12 C. L. J. 226; 12 Bom L. R. 656; 13 O. C. 332; 20 M. L. J. 900; 37 I. A. 161 (P. C.).
(7) 27 M. 498.
(8) 38 Ind. Cas. 797; 2 P. L. J. 61; 3 P L. W. 258.
(9) 39 Ind. Cas. 458; 2 P. L. J. 280; 1 P. L. W. 827; (1917) Pat. 164.

the lower Appellate Court to find out the amount of mesne profits.

Appeal allowed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 273 OF 1917.
June 24, 1919.
Present:—Mr. Justice Maung Kin.
U PYINNYA THIHA—APPELLANT
versus
PO THIN AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law—Ayanzoungs, who are —Ayanzoung, right of, to sue to recover property of kyaung.

"Ayanzoungs" are persons who are in charge of a Kyaung and its precincts, and are entitled to sue to recover possession of land alleged to form part of a Kyaung. [p. 939, cols. 1 & 2.]

Mr. Ba Thein, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. A. Maung Gyi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—(November 20, 1918).—The plaintiffs claim to be the "Ayanzoungs" of Hnet Kyaung built on a piece of land which they allege was granted to U Da Cho for the purpose of building a Kyaung thereon. "Ayanzoungs" are persons who are in charge of a Kyaung and its precincts. The Hnet Kyaung is about eight years old, and was built soon after the grant. The plaintiffs were appointed "Ayanzoungs" by the last presiding Pongyi of the Kyaung who went away. The defendant-appellant is the presiding Pongyi of the adjoining monastery known as Mingala Kyaung. The plaintiffs are followers of a sect of Pongyis known as Dwaya gaing or Sulagandhi gaing. The defendant-appellant is of the sect known as Kangaing or Mahagandhi gaing.

The plaintiffs as the Ayanzoungs of the Hnet Kyaung sue for possession of a piece of land which they say forms part of their Kyaung land. The defendant denies that it forms part of the plaintiffs' Kyaung land, and alleges that he has been in possession of the land in dispute for upwards of twenty years and has thus acquired the status of a landholder, and claims on that basis the right to the land adversely to the plaintiffs. He also denies the right of the plaintiffs as Ayanzoungs to bring the suit.

It is not denied that the defendant's Kyaung is about twenty years old, or that the plaintiffs' Kyaung is eight years old. It is common ground that the plaintiffs' Kyaung is a Sanghika Kyaung.

The lower Appellate Court has held that the plaintiffs have a right of suit as "Ayanzoungs." This finding is amply supported by the texts cited by the Judge from the Vinaya, and from Volume II, page 75 of a book of authority known as Vinaya Thamuha Vinicoya. The former text is as follows:—"Bikkhu va bikkuni va upasako va upasikappa va rakkhapetuni vattati." "It is proper for a monk to hand over the sanghika property either to another monk, or to a nun, or a layman, or laywoman for the purpose of looking after it." The other text is:—"Oetipassaya sanghasse ta santakena cetiya santakani raka petuni vattati." "It is proper for a layman to take over and look after the property belonging to pagodas or to monks."

I would, therefore, hold that the plaintiffs as "Ayanzoungs" are entitled to sue.

Both the lower Courts held that the land in dispute falls within the grant land, and if the encroachment was after the grant the defendant will have no right to keep it as against the plaintiffs. His Counsel, however, urges that the defendant being a Pongyi could occupy any portion of the Hnet Kyaung and its lands, inasmuch as the whole is sanghika property, and there is no Pongyi presiding over it. It is an interesting question for decision whether a Pongyi can occupy a sanghika Kyaung or its lands without the permission of the "Ayanzoungs", but it is not necessary to decide the point in this case. It is clear Vinaya Law, and no authority need be cited for it that a Pongyi is not entitled to treat sanghika property as his own, i. e., as poggalika property. That being the case, defendant's Counsel's contetion falls to the ground. However, one of the defences to the suit has not been enquired into by either of the lower Courts. The defendant alleges that he has been in possession of the land in question for upwards of twenty years and has acquired the status of a landholder, and that, therefore, the Government had no right to include it in the grant to U Da Cho. If at the time of the grant the defendant was in possession of the land in dispute, and had been so continuously for more than twelve years, then he would have acquired the status of a landholder, and the Government would not have the right to grant it to U Da Cho, and neither U Da Cho nor his transferees would have any title to it.

I would remand the case to the Township Court for trial of the following issues:—

(1) How long had the defendant been in possession of the law in dispute when the suit was instituted?

(2) How long had the defendant been in possession of the land in dispute when the grant of Hnet Kyaung land was made to U Da Cho?

(3) When was Hnet Kyaung and the grant land dedicated in the sanghika form?

The findings will be returned as soon as possible.

FINAL JUDGMENT.—The evidence and findings on the issues sent down for trial have been received.

The evidence tendered on behalf of the defendant is to the effect that the stone wall was built twenty-one or twenty-two years ago. Taking this to be absolutely true, it would appear that the wall had been in existence eighteen or nineteen years when the suit was filed in December 1915. The Dwaya Kyaung built after the grant to U Da Cho was eight years old. That being so, the defendant has not proved possession for twelve years when the Government made the grant. And he has not been in possession adversely to the Dwaya Kyaung for twelve years since the grant.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1571 OF 1916.

July 24, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shadi Lal and Mr. Justice Dundas.

THAKUR DAS AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

GOWARDHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Accounts, suit for—Books in possession of plaintiff—Failure to produce books, effect of—Presumption—Evidence, secondary, admissibility of.

In a suit for accounts every presumption should be made against a party who withholds the accounts. [p. 941, col. 1.]

A plaintiff who has the accounts with him cannot ask a Court to take accounts whilst he withholds the evidence in his power. [p. 941, col. 2.]

Plaintiffs sued defendants for an account and for Rs. 3,200 alleged to be due to them out of the partnership funds. It was proved that the books of account were in the plaintiffs' possession:

Held, (1) that the loss of the books not having been proved, secondary evidence of the accounts was not admissible; [p 941, col. 1.]

(2) that the books of account being in the plaintiffs' possession, the defendants could not be called upon to give any account. [p. 941, col. 1.]

Upendra Kishori Rai Chaudhury v. Ram Tara Debya Chaudhurani, 4 Ind. Cas. 642; 13 C. W. N. 696, followed.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Karnal at Hissar, dated the 6th March 1916, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Rohtak, dated the 8th December 1914.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., Lalas Rup Ram and Shamir Chand, for the Appellants.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs Thakur Das and Dal Chand, together with Gulab Singh and Dalip Singh, deceased, the fathers of the defendants, were partners in an iron merchant shop at Cawnpore. Gulab Singh died in August 1909 and Dalip Singh died on the 15th November 1909. At that time it would appear that nearly Rs. 5,500 was deposited in the People's Bank and goods worth about Rs. 9,000 were forthcoming in the shop. The plaintiffs now sue the minor sons of the deceased partners, Gulab Singh and Dalip Singh, for an account and for Rs. 3,200 alleged to be the balance due to them of the principal sum of Rs. 4,600 invested by them in the partnership business. The defendants denied all knowledge of the account and asserted that the plaintiffs themselves had managed the business after the death of Dalip Singh and Gulab Singh, that the plaintiffs were in possession of the accounts and had apparently misappropriated the proceeds of the business. The first Court came to the conclusion that the shares in the partnership were plaintiffs 1/3rd and defendants 2/3rds; that the partnership was dissolved on the 15th November 1909; that the business was carried on after that date by the plaintiffs themselves; that the plaintiffs, through their agents, Moti Ram and Nawal Kishore, kept the accounts, and that the accounts were in the plaintiffs' possession although they had refused to produce them. The Court held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to claim accounts from the defendants and had utterly failed to prove that the defendants received from the partnership business anything beyond the amount which they have themselves acknowledged.

The plaintiffs appealed to the lower Appellate Court, which concurred with the first Court in the findings of fact, especially in the finding that the plaintiffs had suppressed the accounts. An appeal has now been filed to this Court; and it has been urged that even if the account books are not forthcoming, secondary evidence could be produced and should have been admitted in the first Court. It has also been urged that the lower Appellate Court has come to no definite findings. There seem, however, to be three findings of fact against the appellants. First of all the books are proved to have been in the plaintiffs' possession up to 1911; and we cannot go behind this finding. The loss of the books has not been proved and secondary evidence of their contents is not admissible. Secondly, there is a definite finding that Moti Ram and Nawal Kishore were working for the plaintiffs as their agents, and thirdly, that the minors had nothing to do with the business after the death of Dalip Singh. As a matter of law it may be the case that the only penalty incurred by a partner who withholds the accounts is that every presumption is made against him; but there is an authority, Upendra Kishori Rai Chaudhury v. Ram Tara Debya Chaudhurani (1), that a plaintiff who has the account with him cannot ask a Court to take accounts whilst he withholds the evidence in his power. On the findings of fact that decision is directly in point. As a matter of fact the plaintiffs have no case from any point of view. It is admitted that they had their share of the cash. It has been found that the goods of the shop were in the possession of their agents. It has not been shown that the defendants have had more than their share, and no account books are in the possession of the defendants, nor is there any further account necessary.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 542; 13 C. W. N. 696.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 82 OF 1919.

February 6, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

JAHARMAL-DEBI DUTTA FIRM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BIRINCHI BHUSAN NANDI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch II, para. 12—Arbitration—Dissolution of partnership—Arbitrator, power of, to award interest on sums due.

Where in a suit for dissolution of partnership and for accounts, the plaintiff claims interest which the defendant says he is not liable to pay and the matter in dispute is referred to arbitration, one of the points referred being whether the defendant is liable for any money and, if so, the amount due, it is not an error on the part of the arbitrator to include in his award the sum payable by the defendant as interest both on sums advanced to the firm, and on those advanced to the defendant for his personal use, and also for the period before and after the suit and up to the date of the award. [p. 944, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Pabna, dated the 10th of December 1918.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Ram Chandra Majumdar (with him Babu Dinesh Chandra Roy), for the Appellant.—The plaintiff is the appellant. The appeal arises out of a suit for dissolution of partnership business and for accounts. The plaintiff's case is that he entered into an agreement of partnership business with the defendant, in which it was agreed that the plaintiff would advance money for the business and the defendant would supervise the contract works. The plaintiff not only advanced the money for the business of their partnership firm but also advanced money to the defendant for his own purpose. In the present suit plaintiff also prayed for the recovery of money advanced to the defendant on his personal account. After the filing of the written statement by the defendant the parties agreed to refer the matter to arbitration and five issues were framed for the decision of the arbitrator, one of which was "whether the defendant is liable to the plaintiff for any money and if so, what is its amount?" The arbitrator, after having examined all documents and other evidence produced before him, held that Rs. 5,000 and odd was due to plaintiff which the defendant was liable to pay. The defendant objected to the award on the ground of the arbitrator's dishonesty, and secondly, he contended that the award was wrong inasmuch as the arbitrator had allowed interest which was not within the scope of the reference to him. The arbitrator proceeded entirely on the accounts admitted by the parties.

My points are that the question of interest was included in the reference and even if the arbitrator exceeded the reference, the learned Subordinate Judge ought to have remitted the award to the arbitrator under Schedule II para. 14 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the award being in this matter inseparable from the other part of the award. The arbitrator in his award clearly stated that in working out the profits and losses of the firm he took into account the items as he found them in the account papers which were submitted to him. He did not award interest of his own discretion. The learned Subordinate Judge by his modification has practically made a new award and the difference is a good deal between the two awards. The arbitrator in his deposition says that all these items of interest were taken into account by him from the account books.

The question of interest is divisible into interest on the advances made and admittedly on the papers due and interest payable from the date of the institution of suit till realisation. The arbitrator merely dealt with the first part and did not at all go into the second part. The question that was referred to him was whether any amount was due from defendant. He only took the items to show what amount was due from defendant. He did not allow any interest. He did not, therefore, exceed his powers as given in the terms of reference.

My next point is that the question of interest being intermixed and inseparable, the learned Subordinate Judge ought to have remitted the award to the arbitrator under para. 14 of Schedule II of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter (with him Babus Girija Prasanna Sanyal and Satish Chandra Sinha), for the Respondent.—There was no reference on the question of interest. Even in the contract between the parties there was mention only of the capital and nothing about interest in addition to the profits. The written statement was not filed. We asked for discovery and inspection before filing written statement under Order XI, rule 14 of the Civil Procedure Code. The arbitrator in his award says that there were no regular accounts. The books do show that interest was due, but the plaintiff cannot claim it inasmuch as there was no contract for it between the parties. Then as regards the second point urged by the appellant, I submit the claim of interest is a separable claim for which there ought to have been a specific prayer. The arbitrator could be examined as to the matter referred to him for arbitration. Refers to Duke of Buccleuch v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1). The question was nowhere raised in the plaint. Partners cannot claim, in a suit for partnership accounts, interest on the capital advanced. The matter does come under Schdule II, rule 12, Civil Procedure Code. The utmost the other side can ask for is to remit the matter to the arbitrator again. The matter of interest was never considered by the arbitrator and it can under rule 14, Schedule II of the Code of Civil Procedure, be remitted to him for consideration.

Babu Ram Chandra Majumdar replied in brief.

(1) (1871) 5 H. L. 418; 41 L. J. Ex. 137; 27 L. T. 1;

JUDGMENT.

TEUKON, J.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Additional Subordinate Judge of Pabna, acting under the Second Schedule, rule 12, of the Code of Civil Procedure has modified an award made by an arbitrator.

The suit in which the award was made was one for dissolution of a partnership business and for accounts. It appears that the plaintiff's firm, who are primarily dealers in articles of various sorts, entered into an arrangement with the defendant for the purpose of carrying on building contracts. The firm was to supply the money and the defendant was to manage the business. The plaintiff's firm not only advanced the money for the business of their partnership contracts but also advanced money to the defendant for his own purposes. After the suit had proceeded for sometime the parties agreed to refer the matter in arbitration and five points were set out for the decision of the arbitrator selected. The 5th of those points is "whether the defendant is liable to the plaintiff for any money and if so, what is its amount?" Having examined the documents and taking the evidence produced before him, the arbitrator came to the conclusion that the sum of Rs. 5,105-12-12½ gds. was due from the defendant to the plaintiff's firm and made his award accordingly.

Against this award the defendant took a number of objections, alleging misconduct of various kinds against the arbitrator and also contending that in the sum awarded as due from the defendant to the plaintiff's firm the arbitrator had erroneously included a large sum as due by way of interest. All the allegations of misconduct were overruled by the Subordinate Judge and against his order, in so far as these charges were concerned, no appeal has been preferred by the defendant. The learned Subordinate Judge was, however, of opinion that in including in the sum awarded the sum shown in the books of the two firms as due by way of interest the arbitrator had fallen into error. On this account he has reduced the sum awarded by the arbitrator from Rs. 5,105 to Rs. 1,426 and odd. It is against this portion of his order that the plaintiff has appealed.

The Subordinate Judge's reasons for thinking that the arbitrator has erred in this matter of interest appear mainly to be that interest was not claimed in the plaint and that the arbitrator himself did not think it allowable to the plaintiff. Both those reasons appear to be erroneous. It is true that to the plaint the plaintiff did not append a detailed account showing how the sum claimed was arrived at, an account showing the principal and interest separately. But as a matter of fact in the plaint the sums he claimed are sums set out in the books upon which he based his claim, and those documents show that the total arrived at does include sums claimed by way of interest. That this was known to the defendant appears also from the 11th paragraph of his written statement, in which he says that "there was no agreement about paying interest for any money; the plaintiff cannot claim any interest; the debit entries appearing in the papers filed by the plaintiff of large sums of money as interest are wholly false and fraudulent." In his award the arbitrator has in reckoning the profits and losses of the partnership business included in his account, as he himself states, interests on the amount paid by the plaintiff firm to the contract firm as they are entered in the Bengali Jumma Kharaches and Khatians which have been proved to have been compiled by the parties concerned, that is to say, he reckoned the profits after allowing the interests claimed on advances made by the plaintiff's firm. Having done this he next took account of the money advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant himself for his own purposes, and here also, as is shown in the statement which he has marked III, he includes sums claimed by the plaintiff as interest on the sums advanced to the defendant personally. He further allows interest up to the date of suit and again interest from the time of the institution of the suit up to the date of his award. Though the defendant charged the arbitrator with serious misconduct, he yet examined him as his own witness and in the course of the examination elicited from the arbitrator that he had not himself calculated the amount due by way of interest, and he further elicited from him a statement to the effect that in the amount he awarded as due to the plaintiff's firm he had made the defendant liable for interest or had included interest, and at the same time he says, "I do not know whether or not the defendant is liable for the same." But in another part of his deposition he further says, "I allowed interest as I find in the Khatas." It would rather seem that under examination the arbitrator had become confused and possibly had forgotten what he had really done when coming to his award. The award, however, is quite clear on this as on other points. The books of the plaintiff's firm and the books of the contract firm were both produced before him. He found that the books were true and genuine, and he further found that the Bengali Jumma Kharach books of the years 1322 and 1323 of the contract firm were compiled mainly from the defendant's note books, that the defendant was present when they were so compiled and that, moreover, they are in fact partly in his, the defendant's, writing. In these books he finds these sums entered as due on account of interest and he, therefore, allows them to the plaintiff. If then on the strength of the books which he finds to be true and compiled by the parties themselves, he thinks it right to include in his award certain sums by way of interest, we think that he has not committed any error which should necessitate modification of his award, and that his answers given in examination on this point should be disregarded. It being the case that the plaintiff did in fact claim interest in his plaint and it being also the fact that the defendant was aware of this and made non-liability to payment of interest part of his defence, we cannot but think that on the 5th issue which was framed for the arbitration of the arbitrator, namely, is the defendant liable to pay any money to the plaintiffs and if so, what is its amount, the arbitrator was well within the scope of the reference in allowing interest both on the sums advanced by the plaintiff to the contract firm, also on the sums advanced to the defendant for his own purposes and also further interest before and after suit up to the date of his award.

We, therefore, set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge and direct him to pronounce judgment in accordance with the award and make a decree thereon.

The plaintiff will have his costs both in the first Court and in this Court. We assess the hearing fee at three gold mohurs.

BEACHCROFT, J.—I agree.

Order set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 721 OF 1916.

June 21, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Dundas.

Musammat ASO AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat HARNAMI AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS AND Musammat RAMI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 132—Mortgage—Charge, nature of—Suit to recover mortgage money wrongfully received by defendant—Limitation.

Plaintiffs, two out of the three daughters of one G., who died 11 years before suit, sued for possession of 2/3rds of certain immoveable property and mortgage money realised by the defendants after G.'s death:

Held, (1) that the money realised by the defendants represented the security which the plaintiffs had under the mortgage and did not cease to represent that security by reason of the defendants having wrongfully received payment thereof from the mortgagors; [p. 945, col. 2.]

(2) that the suit was governed by Article 132 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act and was within time. [p. 945, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 18th December 1915, reversing that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Amritsar, dated the 19th June 1915.

Mr. L. C. Mehra for Mr. Roshan Lal, for the Appellants.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Plaintiffs-Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In the suit out of which the present second appeal arises the plaintiffs, two out of the three daughters of Ganga Ram, who died 11 years before suit, sued for possession of 2/3rds of certain immoveable property and mortgage money realised by the defendants after Ganga Ram's death. The lower Appellate Court, reversing the decree of the first Court, has granted the plaintiffs the decree sought and the defendants have filed a second appeal in this Court. The parties are Kumhars, and it is found that they are governed by Hindu Law and not by custom. No certificate has been obtained and this decision cannot, therefore, be challenged in second appeal. It has also been found as a fact by the lower Appellate Court that Ganga Ram was separate from the rest of the descendants of Gulaba (see the pedigree table at page 7 of the paper book) and was not a member of a joint Hindu family. Oral evidence was produced by the defendants, and this was relied upon by the first Court which held that the defendants were joint with him. The lower Appellate Court, however, was of opinion that the documentary evidence showed that Ganga Ram was mortgagee of certain lands of which Sandhi and Nathu, his nephews, were the tenants, paying him cash rent and that this conclusively proved that he was not a member of a joint Hindu family. It is argued on behalf of the appellants that the lower Appellate Court has not considered the oral evidence; but the Court has referred to that evidence and we do not see any reason to suppose that it did not pay due attention thereto.

The main point which has been argued before us is whether the plaintiffs' claim to 2/3rds of the mortgage money realised by the defendants is barred by time or not. The lower Appellate Court holds that the claim is governed by Article 132 of the Limitation Act and that as the suit was brought within 12 years after the death of Ganga Ram, it was within time. Counsel for the appellants, however, argues that Article 62 of the Schedule applies, the suit being, according to him, one for money received by the defendants for the plaintiffs' use. The point does not seem to have been specifically taken in the trial Court and, therefore, it was not ascertained, though it could easily have been done, at what date the mortgage money was paid. We do not, however, find it necessary to remand the case for decision on this point, because we are clear that the suit is governed by Article 132 of the Schedule. The Article in question relates to suits to enforce payment of money charged on immoveable property, and the limitation is 12 years from the date when the money sued for becomes due. In Sham Lal v. Johri Mal (1) it was held that a person who takes a mortgage of immoveable property in the name of another, loses his lien on the security if a bona fide transferee acquires it for value from the benamidar but has a remedy against the latter for the money wrongfully received and retained by him and it being charged on immoveable property, the limitation for such a claim is that which is provided by Article 132 of the Second Schedule to the Limitation Act. The ratio decidendi in this and similar cases was that the lien which existed on the property as a charge was transferred under section 37 of the Transfer of Property Act to the purchase money and that there was nothing in the Limitation Act which would shorten the time within which the plaintiff could sue to recover the money, the suit being a suit not on the personal covenant but one to recover the money as charged on the mortgaged property. The same principle was followed in Berhamdeo Pershod v. Tara Chand (2) and Barhamdeo Prasad v. Tara Chand (3). Following the principle enunciated in the last named ruling, we hold that the money realised by the defendants represents the security which the respondents had under the mortgage and did not cease to represent that security by the fact of the appellants having wrongfully received payment thereof from the mortgagors.

We, therefore, hold that the present suit is within time and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 732; 37 P. R. 1909; 50 P. W. R. 1909; 38 P. L. R. 1909.

(2) 33 C. 92; 9 C. W. N. 989.

(3) 21 Ind Cas 961; 41 C. 654 at p. 655; 15 M. L. T. 62; (1919) M. W. N. 38; 12 A. L. J. 82; 18 C. W. N. 345; 19 C. L. J. 132; 16 Bom. L. R. 89; 26 M. L. J 243; 41 I. A. 45 (P. C.).

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 152 OF 1918.

July 23, 1919.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Robinson.

S. V. S. T. CHETTY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

PO MYA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 59 - Attesting witness—Writer of document signing as scribe, whether attesting witness.

The writer of a document who signs it as scribe is not an attesting witness within the meaning of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. He can only be an attesting witness if he subscribes the document as a witness. [p. 946, col. 1.]

TAJAMMAL HUSSAIN v. ALI BAHADUR KHAN.

Mr. Cowasji, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Maung Lat and Nariman, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question in this appeal is whether the mortgage document, Exhibit A, has been duly attested by two witnesses as required by section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. There is one attesting witness, a Chetty, and for the plaintiff-appellant it is urged that the writer of the document, Maung Ba O, who signed the document as scribe is the second attesting witness. Maung Ba O himself marked at the foot of the document with the Burmese word "athi" the place for the signature of the attesting witnesses, and it was in this place that the Chetty witness attested the document, and underneath the Chetty's Tamil signature Ba O transliterated the name into Burmese. Ba O himself signed in a different place describing himself as scribe. In his evidence he states that he was not asked to be an attesting witness, and he simply signed his name as writer, and did not sign as attesting witness.

Their Lordships of the Privy Counsel in Shamu Satter v. Abdul Kadir Rowthan (1), in considering the requirements of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act as regards attestation, held that the words of the section "could only mean that the witnesses were to attest the fact of execution." Their Lordships in the course of their judgment examined a long series of English authorities as to the meaning to be assigned to the words "attestation" and "attest," and they pointed out that the Lord Chancellor in Burdett v. Spilsbury (2), summed up the conclusion in these words:—"The party who sees the Will executed is in fact a witness to it; if he subscribes as witness, he is then attesting witness." Their Lordships evidently accepted this conclusion, and we must, therefore, apply it in the present case.

It is clear that although Ba O was in fact a witness to the mortgage document, he did not subscribe as a witness, and he is, therefore, not an attesting witness within the meaning of section 59.

(1) 16 Ind. Cas. 250; 35 M. 607; 16 C. W. N. 1009; 23 M. L. J. 321; 12 M. L. T. 338; (1912) M. W. N. 935; 10 A. L. J. 259; 14 Bom. L. R. 1034; 16 C. L. J. 596; 39 I. A. 218 (P. C.).

(2) (1843) 10 Cl. & F. 340; 8 E. R. 772; 59 R. R. 105.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs—a separate Advocate's fee being allowed for defendants one and two and for defendants three, four and five.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 163 OF 1919.

April 27, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir George Knox, Kt.

TAJAMMAL HUSSAIN AND ANOTHER —DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS
versus
ALI BAHADUR KHAN—PLAINTIFF
—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 79—Suit to recover possession of holding—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Revision—High Court, interference by.

Where a person seeks to recover possession of his holding the suit should be brought under section 79 of the Agra Tenancy Act and over such a suit the Revenue Court alone has jurisdiction [p. 946, col. 2.]

The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere in revision where a Civil Court has wrongly entertained a suit cognizable by a Revenue Court. [p. 947, col. 1.]

Civil revision against the order of the District Judge, Cawnpore, dated the 18th July 1919.

Mr. Mukhtar Ahmad, for the Petitioners.

Dr. J. N. Misra, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is one of those numerous cases in which Civil Courts attempt to grasp jurisdiction. The plaint is ingeneously worded and the plaintiff has gone so far as to add an unnecessary person in the array of defendants, but the real remedy that the plaintiff seeks for is to recover possession of his holding. The suit should have been brought under section 79, and that being the case, no Court other than a Revenue Court is allowed to take cognizance of any dispute or matter in respect of which any suit might be brought or made. The words are very wide and in my opinion purposely made wide, in order to keep Civil Courts to their proper business and to keep them from meddling with matters which are best understood and best decided by Revenue Courts.

The learned Advocate for the respondent attempted to make a strong case and to maintain that this was not a matter for revision. He called my attention to the following cases :—

Jwala Prasad v. East Indian Railway Co. (1) Jhunku Lol v. Beshashar Das (2) Fazal Rab v. Mansur Ahmad (3).

But on referring to these cases it will be found that not one of them is a revenue case or a case of which a Revenue Court should take cognizance. The revision is decreed and the order of the lower Court is set aside with costs.

Order set aside.

(1) 46 Ind. Cas. 99; 16 A. L. J. 535.
(2) 46 Ind. Cas. 71; 16 A. L. J. 495; 40 A. 612.
(3) 45 Ind. Cas. 772; 16 A. L. J. 433; 40 A. 425.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1155 OF 1919.

November 12, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Bevan-Petman.

GURBACHAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RALLA RAM AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Ordinance (II of 1915), ss. 2, 9—"Serving under war conditions," meaning of—Duty of Court in cases of doubt.

"Serving under war conditions" does not necessarily mean serving abroad.

When the Court is in doubt as to whether a party can be said to be serving under war conditions or not, it ought to refer the matter to the prescribed authority and act on the certificate given by such authority.

Second appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge with appellate powers, Jullunder, dated the 21st March 1919, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Jullundur, dated the 24th January 1919, decreeing the claim.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Bhagat Ram, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—The lower Appellate Court has come to no definite finding regarding the exact age of the plaintiff. For reasons stated that Court came to the conclusion that the entry in the birth register did not refer to the plaintiff and that the plaintiff was older than the person to whom the entry referred. Apparently the defendant had accepted the entry as relating to the plaintiff and relied on the fact that even according to that entry the plaintiff was time-barred. The plaintiff was claiming the benefit of Ordinance II of 1915 and the contest turned to a large extent on this point. It is true that on the record as it stands the plaintiff has failed to prove that he was "serving under war conditions," but the lower Appellate Court apparently did not study the Ordinance and has failed to catch its spirit, otherwise it would not have fallen into the error of thinking that "serving under war conditions" necessarily means serving abroad. The term is defined in the Ordinance. In my opinion the case was one in which the Court should have acted under section 9 of the Ordinance. If it is true that the plaintiff served in France, I think all possible indulgence ought to be extended to him. I, therefore, remand the case to the Court of the Munsif and direct him to refer, under section 9 of the Ordinance II of 1915, the points whether the plaintiff has been serving under war conditions and if so, from which date to which date, for decision by the prescribed authority. I also frame the following issue: "What was plaintiff's age on the date of the institution of the suit?" and direct the Munsif to try the said issue giving the parties full opportunity to produce further evidence. The return to this remand is to be made through the District Judge, who will express his opinion on the finding of the Munsif. Costs in this Court of the present hearing to be costs in the cause.

Case remanded.

S. B. DAS v. MUTHIA CHETTY.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 113 OF 1918.

May 8, 1919.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ormond and Mr. Justice Maung Kin.

S. B. DAS—DEFENDANT No. 2—APPELLANT

versus

C. T. A. R. A. MUTHIA CHETTY—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 60—Attachment of debt—Security deposit for carrying out contract, whether debt and liable to attachment.

An attaching creditor can attach a debt although the debt is not then payable, but it must be an existing debt. [p. 948, cols. 1 & 2.]

Money deposited as security for the due performance and completion of a contract, as well as monies deducted from sums already earned and retained till completion of the work, although liable to forfeiture, are debts due to the contractor until they became liable to be forfeited, and are attachable in execution of a decree against him. [p. 948, col. 2.]

Messrs. Das and Dantra, for the Appellant.

Mr. Aiyar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff Chetty sued his mortgagor Moodalayar on a mortgage, and he sued the present appellant as the 2nd defendant for a declaration that the attachment made by the appellant on the funds which were mortgaged to him was inoperative as regards the mortgage. Moodalayar carried out certain works as a contractor for the Public Works Department at Toungoo. He deposited Rs. 2,100 with the Public Works Department by way of security, and he was paid from time to time the value of the work done less ten per cent., which was retained till the work was completed. The 27th November 1916 was the date of the attachment. At that time the amount earned by Moodalayar which had not been paid him, but which was retained as being ten per cent. of the amount earned, was Rs. 6,831 and there was also Rs. 2,100 the security. The learned District Judge held that the mortgage which was subsequent in date, was subject to the attachment, but that the attachment was good only in respect of the amount that was then payable, i. e., Rs. 1,500 which represented ninety per cent. of the amount earned by Moodalayar and not then paid. The 2nd defendant, the attaching creditor, appeals.

An attaching creditor can attach a debt although the debt is not then payable, but it must be an existing debt. The question in this appeal is, therefore, was the ten per cent. of the amount that had already been earned by the contractor, and retained by the Public Works Department until the completion of the work, and also the security deposited by the contractor, which was also not payable until the completion, existing debts due, but not then payable, to the contractor on the 27th November 1916? The District Judge thought that the contractor must be taken to have refused to carry on his work on the 27th November 1916, whereby he would have forfeited both the ten per cent. of the amount earned by him and retained by the Public Works Department as well as the amount of his security. The District Judge was not warranted in this assumption; as a matter of fact, the contractor did perform his contract and this ten per cent. and the amount of his security were payable to him in October 1917. The security, if it had been in Government paper and kept separate, would have remained the contractor's property until he had forfeited it; and if he paid cash and that cash was mixed with other funds, the Public Works Department would hold that amount in trust for the contractor until it became forfeited. Until forfeiture there would be a debt due by the Public Works Department to the contractor, although it was not payable until the completion of the work. Likewise, the ten per cent., even if it was liable to be forfeited, was money which the contractor had earned, and, therefore, it was a debt due to him until it became forfeited. In Hutt v. Shaw (1) it was held that a sum of money deposited by the judgment debtor with an outside broker as cover for several speculative transactions was not a debt owing by the broker to the judgment debtor until the transactions were closed. The Judges must, therefore, from the circumstances in that case have found that the £.50 given to the broker was given on account of those transactions and not by way of security. We think the attachment was good not only as regards the ninety per cent. of the amount already earned, and which the Public Works Department were ready to pay on the 27th November 1916, but it was also good as to the ten per cent. which had been retained, and also as regards the security Rs. 2,100, although both these sums were not payable till the completion of the work. The decree, therefore, as regards the second defendant will be varied by making a declaration that the mortgage is subject to the attachment as to the Rs. 6,831 (the ten per cent. retained by the Public Works Department) and Rs. 2,1000 (the security) as well as the Rs. 1,500 which has been allowed by the District Judge. The appellant will have his costs in both Courts on the amount in respect of which he has been successful, viz., in the District Court he should have costs on Rs. 10,431 and in this appeal on Rs. 8,931.

(1) (1886) 3 T. L. R. 354.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 945 OF 1918.

May 4, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Justice Das.

Raja KAMALESHWARI PROSAD SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Lala JAGAR NATH SAHAI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Co-sharers—Co-sharer, one of several, paying off rent decree—Contribution, suit for, maintainability of—Court, duty of, performance of—Presumption—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 69—Appropriation, doctrine of, applicability of, to contribution.

Where a co-sharer is not bound by law to pay a rent decree in favour of the superior landlord, he is not liable to contribution where the decree is paid off by the other co-sharer. [p. 949, col. 1.]

Where a statutory duty is imposed on a Court, it must be presumed that that duty has been performed. [p. 950, col. 1.]

No question of appropriation arises in a suit for contribution under section 69 of the Contract Act. [p. 950, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decision of the Subordinate Judge, Monghyr.

Mr. N. C. Sinha, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. B. Mukerji and Rai Tribhuan Nath Sahai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit instituted by the respondents for recovery of Rs. 539 from defendant No. 1. The lower Appellate Court has granted the plaintiffs a decree for the full amount claimed. The defendant No. 1 appeals.

The admitted facts are as follows :—The plaintiffs and the defendants are co-sharers of a certain Mokarrari interest under the Banaily Raj. The defendant No. 1 has five-annas interest in the Mokarrari in two different capacities. He is the mortgagee in possession in respect of 3-annas share in the Mokarrari and he is also the purchaser of 2-annas share, his purchase having been effected on the 8th September 1909. The Baraily Raj brought a suit for recovery of rent for the years 1315 to 1318. Defendant No. 1 was not a party to the suit, although his purchase of the 2 annas interest was previous to the date of the institution of the suit. The Raj got a decree against the defendants second and third parties for Rs. 1,278-4-9. Defendants Nos. 6 and 7 paid Rs. 211-0-0 towards the satisfaction of the decree. The balance, namely, Rs. 1,067-4-9, was paid by the plaintiffs on the following dates, viz., Rs. 6-3-9 before the 7th April 1914, Rs. 200 on the 7th of April 1914 and Rs. 223-4-9 on the 18th of May 1914. The defendants, other than defendant No. 1, paid their proportionate share to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs on the 5th of April 1917 instituted the present suit for recovery of Rs. 399-7-6, the proportion which ought to have been paid by defendant No. 1, and Rs. 139-8-6 as the interest on Rs. 399-7-6, in all Rs. 539.

The first point urged on behalf of the appellant is that so far as his purchased share is concerned, he was not bound by law to pay any portion of the rent decree obtained by the superior landlord and, therefore, the plaintiffs are not entitled to be re-imbursed by him. I think this contention is correct. It will be remembered that the defendants' purchase was prior to the institution of the suit by the superior landlord. In my view, the superior landlord was not entitled to sell the tenure in the possession of defendant No. 1 in a suit in which defendant No. 1 was not a party. It is clear under the law that the consent of the landlord was not necessary to the transfer of title to defendant No. 1. From the date of his purchase defendant No. 1 was the tenant of the superior landlord. The superior landlord could only affect the tenure in the possession of defendant No. 1 in a properly constituted suit against defendant No. 1. Section 13 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is conclusive on this point.

But it was argued on behalf of the respondents that before this argument can be advanced it must be shown that the superior landlord had notice of the purchase made by defendant No. 1. In my view, we must assume that everything which the Court was bound to do in pursuance of a statutory duty was in fact done in this instance. Section 13 provides that the Court, before confirming the sale under Order XXI, rule 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, shall require the purchaser to pay into Court the landlord's fee prescribed by section 12 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and such further fee for service of notice of the sale on the landlord as may be prescribed. The sale has in fact been confirmed and, therefore, I must assume that the fees required by the Court to be paid by the purchaser were in fact paid before the sale was confirmed. If these fees were in fact paid, then clearly it was the duty of the Court to send to the Collector the landlord's fee and a notice of the sale in the prescribed form and it was the duty of Collector to cause the fee to be transmitted to, and the notice to be served on, the landlord in the prescribed manner. These are statutory duties and I am bound to presume that these statutory duties were in fact performed.

If that be so, then clearly the landlord could not, by a decree obtained against the former tenant, affect the tenure in the hands of defendant No. 1. That tenure could only be affected by a decree for rent against the defendant No. 1 in a properly constituted suit against him. In my view, therefore, the defendant No. 1 was not bound by law to pay any portion of the rent decree obtained by the landlord in respect of the 2 annas share purchased by the defendant No. 1.

There still remains the question of the liability of defendant No. 1 in respect of five-annas share held by him as a mortgagee in possession. He was undoubtedly bound by law to pay his proportion of the decretal amount in respect of his 3-annas share. The plaintiffs, being interested in the payment of this money by defendant No. 1, have actually paid it and, if their suit is within time, they are entitled to be re-imbursed by the defendant. It is urged, however, by the appellant that the plaintiffs' suit in regard to whatever they paid before the 5th of April 1914 is barred by limitation. This contention must prevail. It appears that the plaintiffs paid Rs. 639 before the 5th of April 1914. The suit for contribution, therefore, with respect to this item should have been brought within three years from the date of payment. But it is contended on behalf of the respondens, a contention which has found favour with the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiffs are entitled to take up the position that whatever they paid before the 7th of April 1914 must be deemed to have been paid on their own behalf and on behalf of the co-sharers other than the defendant No. 1. The argument is that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from the defendant No. 1 Rs. 399. The plaintiffs have actually paid to the landlords, in satisfaction of his decree, more than Rs. 399 within three years of suit. Therefore they must be deemed to have paid the share of defendant No. 1 within three years of suit and accordingly their suit is within time. I do not agree with this contention at all. In my view, every rupee paid by the plaintiffs must be deemed to have been paid on behalf of all the co-sharers. No question of appropriation arises in a suit for contribution under section 69 of the Indian Contract Act. The plaintiffs' case is that they are interested in the payment of money which others were bound by law to pay. They have paid and are entitled to be re imbursed by the others. In my view, the plaintiffs must be deemed to have paid every portion of the money actually paid by them on behalf of all the co-sharers. In that view so far as Rs. 639 is concerned, they are not entitled to be re-imbursed by defendant No. 1 in respect of the 3 annas share held by him as a mortgagee. Plaintiffs are, however, entitled to be re-imbursed in regard to Rs. 428 4-9 paid by them within three years of suit. They are entitled to recover from defendant No. 1 the proportion which the defendant No. 1 ought to have paid to the plaintiffs in respect of his 3 annas share. Let the figure be worked out in office and the decree of the lower Appellate Court be modified accordingly. The parties are entitled to their costs in proportion to their success.

Decree modified.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 36 OF 1919.

October 21, 1919.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr Justice Robinson.

M. A. M. MUTHIA CHETTY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SEENA V. THEVAR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch I, Art 142, applicability of—Possession and dispossession—Burden of proof.

In order to avail himself of the period of limitation prescribed by Article 142 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act, the plaintiff in a suit for possession of immoveable property must prove the dispossession which he alleges, and that he was in possession within twelve years of the suit. [p. 951, col. 2]

Mr Dhar, for the Appellant.

Mr. Halkar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff appellant, a Chetty money lender, brought this suit in 1916 to eject the defendants from a piece of paddy land measuring about eighteen acres. His case is that he bought the land in 1905, from one Sankaralingam, that he was in possession through his tenants from that time up to 1910, when the defendants ousted him by turning out his tenant. The defendants denied that the plaintiff was ever in possession either personally or by a tenant. They put plaintiff to proof of his alleged purchase in 1906. They admitted that the land formerly belonged to Sankalingam but said that about twenty years before the suit, i. e, about 1896 Sankalingam sold the land to them, and that on their giving him a promissory note for the purchase money he made over the land to them, and promised to execute a registered conveyance as soon as they should pay the amount due on the pro note.

The findings of fact are that the land in question was sold by Sankalingam in 1906 by a registered conveyance to the plaintiff but that the plaintiff never obtained possession. He alleged that he let the land for four years beginning in 1906 to a cultivator named Arsappa Thevan and in 1910 to a Burman Maung Kan Gyin, who was ousted by the defendants. But the evidence in support of these allegations was disbelieved and the Court found it established that the defendants had been in continuous possession for eighteen or twenty years. On the other hand the defendants did not succeed in satisfying Court that they were in possession as owners. The learned Divisional Judge was not satisfied as to the alleged sale by Sankalingam to the defendants about 1896, and he thought it possible that the defendants were in possession merely as tenants of Sankalingam and Sankalingam's predecessors-in-title. But on his finding that the plaintiff had failed to prove possession within twelve years of the suit the Divisional Judge, concurring with the District Court, dismissed the plaintiff-appellant's suit.

The suit is clearly governed by Article 142 of the Limitation Act and it is a well established rule of law that in suits under this Article the onus of proof lies on the plaintiff. He has to prove the dispossession which he alleges and that he was in possession within twelve years of the suit. Here the plaintiff has failed to prove that he or tenants of his were in possession at any time, and the allegation as to dispossession consequently falls to the ground. As the plaintiff failed to prove possession within twelve years of the suit which was essential to the maintenance of the suit, it was unnecessary to go into the question of the defendant's title at all.

It is urged in second appeal that the plaintiff having acquired Sankalingam's title by purchase in 1906, i. e. within twelve years of the suit, it should be held that the plaintiff obtained possession in 1906 through the defendants themselves, as the defendants must be regarded as Sankalingam's tenants. But the plaintiff has not shown that the defendants were Sankalingam's tenants or licensees in 1906. The learned

KASTURI v. LOTE MAJOR.

Divisional Judge observes that this is "quite possible," but there is no proof of it. The plea is substantially an attempt to shift the burden of proof to the defendants, and we are in effect asked to hold that the plaintiff's suit must prevail because the defendants have not proved adverse possession for twelve years. The defendants deny that they were Sankalingam's tenants in 1906; their case is that they became full owners by purchase from Sankalingam some ten years earlier. They got no conveyance because they did not pay the purchase money in cash; but the Transfer of Property Act, section 54, was not in force in rural areas in 1906, and oral transfers with delivery of possession then in vogue were valid. If the suit were a suit governed by Article 144 of the Limitation Act, the plaintiff on proving his title could put the defendants to proof of their allegations of adverse possession. But the Article 144 cannot be applied in this case. It is a residuary Article which has to be applied only to suits for possession of immoveable property not otherwise expressly provided for, and the present suit is expressly provided for in Article 142 under which no question of adverse possession arises.

The suit was rightly dismissed, and we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 300 OF 1919.

April 24, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Macnair, A. J. C.

Musammat KASTURI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

LOTE MAJOR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Inheritance—Illegitimate daughter, right of, to inherit her mother's property—Hindu female entitled to maintenance—Possession—Mutation—No indication that possession is in lieu of maintenance—Adverse possession—Daughter, right of, to inherit.

According to Hindu Law an illegitimate daughter, even among twice born classes, inherits the property of her mother in preference to trespassers. [p. 953, col. 1; p 954, col. 1.]

Where a share in the property of a Hindu was held by his mistress, and mutation was effected in her favour some 40 years ago, and although she was entitled to maintenance, there was nothing to show that her possession was in lieu of maintenance, it was held that she had acquired title by adverse possession and that upon her death her share devolved on her daughter [p. 954, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Jubbulpore, in Civil Appeal No. 1 of 1919, decided on the 31st March 1919.

Mr. V. V. Chitale, for the Appellant.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Shankar had three sons, Kandhai, Sheobux and Birbal. The case of the plaintiffs as set out in the plaint and pleadings is as follows: The five anna 4 pie patti to which this suit relates was the joint property of the three brothers. Kandhai died about 45 years ago. After the death of Kandhai mutation was ultimated effected in the name of his widow Musammat Gomti with respect to a three anna 6 pie patti. After this Musammat Gomti was the mistress of Birbal. The defendant Kasturi is the illegitimate daughter of Gomti by Birbal. She has got a three annas 6 pie patti entered in her name in the revenue records and is claiming profits with regard to that patti.

The plaintiffs sue for a declaration that the defendant has no right to any share in the 5 annas 4 pie patti. The learned Munsif held that even if Gomti was in possession of the patti (apparently the three annas 6 pie patti), she was in possession as widow of Kardhai and her heirs would be her natural (sic) daughters, and not the defendant.

I cannot follow the remainder of the learned Munsif's judgment. The plaintiffs were granted a declaration. The defendant appealed.

The learned Additional District Judge held that the possession of Gomti, who was living with Birbal as his wife or mistress, could only be said to be adverse to plaintiffs after the death of Birbal twelve years ago He also held that the defendant who had received no share in the profits since the death of Gomti eight or nine years ago, could not be said to be in possession. He held that Musammat Gomti had not acquired a title by adverse possession: the defendant, an illegitimate daughter of Musammat Gomti, had no title to succeed to the property of Musammat Gomti's former husband Kandhai. The appeal was dismissed.

The main argument urged before me in second appeal is that Musammat Gomti had acquired a title by adverse possession. This title descended to her illegitimate daughter. The learned Counsel for the respondents contended that an illegitimate daughter could not inherit the property of her mother if she was not a Sudra.

The question is not free from difficulty but the balance of authority is strongly in favour of the view that an illegitimate daughter, even among the twice born classes, inherits the property of her mother.

The authors of several commentaries on Hindu Law expres a clear opinion on the point. In Ghose's Principles of Hindu Law, Volume I, 3rd Edition, Vribat-Parasara, Chapter V, is cited at page 69:

"The son, begotten by one of equal caste (the illegitimate son), is the offerer of pindas of his mother, and is (in every respect) a son to her; but he is nothing to the begetter, as he is born of lust."

On page 369 it is stated:

"The decisions against the rights of the children of unchaste females are not based on any rule of the Smritis".

Again on page 763.

"According to Hindu Law, an illegitimate child is not the child of the father, but only of the mother, and can thus have no relations or rights of inheritance except to the mother's property"; and on page 767:

"I have shown at page 369 that the illegitimate sons offer pindas to their mother and are thus related according to law to her and to one another and have thus also rights of inheritance to the estate of the mother and also of one another. There are no doubt several dscisions denying such relationship and right. But the texts cited in this book were not before the Judges, and it also must be said that there is very great force in the observations of the Oudh Court, in the case mentioned above, that such rights should be allowed on grounds of natural justice".

Trevelyan in his work on Hindu Law, 2nd Edition at page 462 states:

"Illegitimacy is not a bar to the succession of children to their mother's property, but in a competition between legitimate and illegitimate children the rights of the former prevail.

This has no application to the illegitimate child of a married woman."

In Gour's Hindu Code published in 1919 it is stated in paragraph 2180 that illegitimate daughters are entitled to inherit to their mothers. Dr. Gour is speaking of illegitimate daughters whether of a twice born or of a Sudra.

In Mayne's Hindu Law, 8th Edition, section 552, the passage occurs:

"Still less is there any absence of heritable blood as between bastards and their mother".

With the doubtful exception of the sentence cited from Mayne, it is clear that all the passages cited refer to the twice born classes as well as to Sudras. Trevelyan excludes adulterous issue, but this is immaterial for the decision of the present appeal. The case law on the subject is more obscure. It is complicated by distinctions between Sudras and twice born classes, by reliance on custom in the case of certain classes, and by the distinction drawn between adulterous and non-adulterous issue. In Myna Boyee v. Ootaram (1) the plaintiff was the daughter of a wife living in adultery. Their Lordships stated at page 423:—

"If any general usage in this part of India has ripened into a custom having the force of law, that the illegitimate children of a woman pursuing an unchaste course of life, whether married or unmarried, inherit her property, this custom is not in proof."

It is clear, however, that their Lordships laid stress on the fact that the plaintiff was adulterous issue. In Arunagiri Mudali v. Ranganayaki Ammal(2) the plaintiff's illegitimate daughters sued to recover possession of a house to which they claimed to be entitled in succession to their mother. Although the question whether the daughters had any right of inheritance was not discussed, the daughters obtained a decree.

(1) 8 M. I. A. 400; 2 W. R. P. C. 4; 2 M. H. C. R. 196 1 Suth. P. C. J. 452; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 797; 19 E. R. 582.
(2) 21 M. 40; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 384.

MAUNG SEIN v. U PO KO.

The respondents rely strongly on Meenakshi v. Muniandi Panikkan (3). In that case the competition was between the illegitimate son of a Sudra woman and her illegitimate daughter born in prostitution. The learned Judges who decided this case do not dissent from previous rulings to the effect that illegitimate daughters succeed in the absence of legitimate heirs. Oldfield, J., states that the reference in a former case to the rights of illegitimate children is not inconsistent with their postponement to all legitimate heirs and later on speaks of the expressly limited recognition of the rights of illegitimate children in Hindu Law. Seshagiri Ayyar, J., endeavours to reconcile the statement that illegitimate sons are entitled to succeed to their mother.

In Tripura Charan Banerjee v. Hari Mati Dasi (4) it is stated at page 500*:—

"Under these circumstances, I am of opinion that the rule as to separation by degradation is as I have suggested above, and that such separation does not operate to sever a prostitute from her sons or her chaste daughters born after her degradation, so as to disable them from inheriting from her."

The Judge then considers that the illegitimate sons or daughters of a prostitute have a right of inheritance. The decision of this case rests on this consideration. In Jagannath Raghunath v. Narayan Lal (5) it was held that the stridhan of a female devolves upon her husband on her death in preference to the son born of her by adulterous intercourse.

There is then very considerable authority for the proposition that an illegitimate child, whether of a Sudra or of a twice born, inherits the property of the mother if there are no preferential heirs and if the child is not born of adulterous intercourse. I find no authority to the contrary. I agree with Rao Bahadur, J C. Ghose that common humanity and natural justice appear to require that an innocent child should have some right of inheritance from the erring mother.

(3) 25 Ind Cas. 957; 38 M. 1144; 1 L. W. 704; (1914, M. W. N. 672; 16 M. L. T. 270; 27 M. L. J. 353.

(4) 9 Ind. Cas. 657; 38 C. 493; 15 C. W. N. 807.

(5) 7 Ind. Cas. 459; 34 B. 553; 12 Bom. L. R. 545.

*Page of 38 C.—Ed.

In the present case, then, the defendant succeeded to the rights of her mother in preference to trespassers.

The plaintiffs' case is that Gomti was the widow of a member of a joint family. She had then no right to succeed on the death of her husband: but the plaintiffs admit that mutation was effected in the name of Musammat Gomti some forty years ago. The learned Counsel for the respondents was at first prepared to admit that Musammat Gomti's possession was adverse. He subsequently urged that this possession was in lieu of maintenance. Mutation in favour of Gomti is evidence of her possession and possession is prima facie adverse. Musammat Gomti was entitled to maintenance, but there is nothing to indicate that her possession of the share in question was in lieu of maintenance. I hold then that Musammat Gomti acquired title by adverse possession.

On her death her share devolved upon her illegitimate daughter, the defendant. It is admitted that the defendant got the share entered in her name and claimed profits. It is unnecessary to consider the pleadings of the defendant. The plaintiffs' suit must fail if Musammat Gomti obtained rights by adverse possession and these rights descended to her daughter. The appeal, therefore, succeeds. The suit is dismissed. The plaintiffs must bear costs in all Courts.

Appeal accepted.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 143 OF 1918.

June 23, 1919.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Robinson.

MAUNG SEIN—APPELLANT

versus

U PO KO—RESPONDENT.

Buddhist Law, Burmese Adoption—Giving and taking, evidence of—Presumption—Proof necessary.

Under Burmese Buddhist Law it is not essential in adoption cases that direct evidence should be given of the actual giving and taking in adoption. No documentary evidence is necessary and no particular ceremony or formality is required. Where it is clearly proved that the child was brought up with a view to inherit, the actual giving and taking may be presumed; but where the giving and taking is not actually proved, it is incumbent on the adopted child to prove his case by clear and unambiguous evidence as to the publicity and notoriety of his status as kittima child. [p. 955, col. 2.]

Mr. May Oung, for the Appellant.

Mr. Hay, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff Ma I sued for a declaration that she was the Kittima adopted daughter of the defendant-respondent Maung Po Ko, and of his wife Ma Thet deceased, and she claimed a quarter share of the joint property as being the Aurasa daughter, her adoptive mother Ma Thet having died. The defendant Maung Po Ko denied the adoption, but he said that the plaintiff had been brought up by his wife's father and mother. The Judge on the Original Side held that the plaintiff had proved the adoption but not a Kittima adoption with a view to inherit, and the suit was, therefore, dismissed.

The plaintiff Ma I died after filing the suit and the claim was prosecuted by her husband Maung Sein and her minor daughter as legal representations of Ma I.

Po Ko and Ma Thet had no natural issue, but they admittedly adopted as their son one Po Win who was the grand-nephew of Ma Thet's mother Ma Mo, and Po Win is a witness for defendant Maung Po Ko in this case. He is younger than the plaintiff Ma I and his adoption by Maung Po Ko and Ma Thet was subsequent by several years to the time of Ma I's arrival in the family. The plaintiff's evidence shows that she was brought up from the age of four or five up to the time of her marriage in the house of Po Kyaw Saw and Ma Mo, the parents of Ma Thet, and that during the greater part of this time Po Ko and Ma Thet also lived in the same house. At the time of Ma I's arrival in the house Po Kyaw Saw was a man of some wealth and substance while Po Ko was a young man, and had no substantial means of his own. Ma I was about forty-four years old at the time of the suit (in 1918) and she was about thirty when she married Maung Sein. The plaintiff's witnesses are unable to give any particulars as to the actual giving and taking in adoption. But the defendant Po Ko states that Ma I as an orphan child was brought to Kanaungto by a man named Kyin Bo who said he had no means of bringing up the child, and asked Ma Mo and Kyaw Saw to look after her out of compassion. Po Kyaw Saw is said to have died about twenty-four or twenty five years ago, and Ma Mo about eight or nine years ago. The evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses leaves it in some doubt whether she was brought up by Po Ko and his wife or by Kyaw Saw and Ma Mo. It may well be that she was taken in by the old couple originally and that after their death Ma Thet looked after her. After her marriage with Maung Sein the plaintiff left Kanaungto for five years or more. When they came back to Kanaungto, Maung Sein says that they put up for a few months with Po Ko and Ma Thet, and then built themselves an abode in a different part of the village and lived there. Subsequently they built a house in a corner of Po Ko's compound. Maung Sein says he bought this land for Rs. 40 from Po Ko; but Po Ko says that he did not sell the land to Maung Sein but only sold him the materials of an old house on behalf of Po Win.

It is not essential in adoption-cases that direct evidence should be given of the actual giving and taking in adoption. No documentary evidence is necessary and no particular ceremony or formality is requried. Where it is clearly proved that the child was brought up with a view to inherit, the actual giving and taking may be presumed; but where, as in this case, the giving and taking is not actually proved, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to prove her case by clear and unambiguous evidence as to the publicity and notoriety of her status as Kittima child.

The plaintiff produces witnesses from among the neighbours in Kanaungto, whose evidence shows that she was brought up in this house up to the time of her marriage and that she was kindly treated by Po Ko and Ma Thet as well as by Ma Thet's parents. It appears from the statements of these witnesses that Ma I was treated as a natural child of the family (i.e., the combined family of Kyaw Saw and Ma Mo, and Po Ko and Ma Thet) would be treated, and that no distinction was made between her and the admittedly adopted child Maung Po Win. But although some of these witnesses are closely connected with Po Ko's family, none of them is able to give any information as to how Ma I entered the family.

This point is left in utter obscurity by the plaintiff's witnesses and the only account we have is that given by the defendant Po Ko. It is clear that Po Ko never publicly declared that he had adopted Ma I, although there are several witnesses who say that Ma Thet deceased did say on various occasions that Ma I was her daughter. The plaintiff produced as her first witness the Pleader Maung Po Ya from Twante, who is a friend of the family of long standing. When Maung Sein sent Po Ko a notice of his present claim, Po Ko went to Maung Po Ya and consulted him as a friend. The gist of his evidence is that Po Ko never admitted that Ma I was his adopted daughter, but on the other hand he never denied it. He asked Po Ya to try and effect an amicable settlement of the claim with Maung Sein. Maung Po Ya did his best to bring about a settlement, but the attempt failed because the parties could not agree as to the terms. We cannot attach great weight to the fact that defendant was willing to come to an arrangement with Maung Sein. It may well be that he was willing to yield to some extent to Maung Sein's demands because Ma I had for so many years lived with him, and had been brought up in his house. He may also have thought, though he had never acknowledged her as a Kittima daughter, she had some claim upon him owing to the fact that she had been brought up in his house. Besides he would naturally be anxious to avoid going to Court.

Perhaps the strongest piece of evidence in the plaintiff's favour is that of the promissory note form which was drawn up by the defendant during his mother in-law's lifetime. In this form the names of the lenders are given as Po Ko, Ma Thet, son Po Win, and daughter Ma I, and it is argued with some appearance of probability that Po Ko would not have caused promissory note forms to be drawn up in this way if he had not adopted Ma I as his Kittima daughter. It is said that these forms were never actually used for the purpose of loans, because Ma Mo objected to her name being omitted from them, but the fact remains and it is a strong point in the plaintiff's favour that the forms were actually drawn up in this way with her name inserted as joint lender. The explanation given by Maung Po Ko that he inserted Ma I's name so that she might collect the money during his absence, does not appear to account for it.

There is another similar piece of evidence, that of the invitation cards which were issued with Maung Po Ko's cognizance or approval after Ma Thet's death. In these cards the persons issuing the invitation are mentioned, namely, U Po Ko, his son-in-law Maung Sein, Ma I (Maung Sein's wife), his son Maung Po Win, and his wife Ma Hlaing. But the inclusion of Ma I's name in the funeral card can hardly be relied upon as proof that she was adopted as a Kittima daughter. Her name may well have been inserted because she had been so long a member of the household of the deceased Ma Thet and had been treated by Ma Thet as a daughter.

The entry of Ma I's name in the promissory note is no doubt a circumstance of great weight, but it has to be weighed against several important facts which appear to be inconsistent with the plaintiff's claim. Some of these facts have already been mentioned. We notice also the absence of evidence that on the occasion of her marriage with Maung Sein any valuable presents were given to her by Po Ko and Ma Thet, or that any feast was given by them on that occasion. We are impressed by the extraordinary circumstance that after she and her husband had returned to Kanaungto and were invited by Po Ko to go and solace him in his loneliness he required them to pay Rs. 40 for the materials, of the dwelling that they were to occupy in his compound. The learned Judge on the Original Side has rightly attached great importance to this incident, as being wholly inconsistent with the view that Po Ko had adopted Ma I with a view to inherit.

The conclusion at which we arrive is that the evidence produced by the plaintiff falls short of proving that she was adopted by Po Ko and his wife Ma Thet with a view to inherit and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

JAINAB BIBI v. HYDERALLY SAHEB.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
FULL BENCH.
CIVIL APPEAL No. 3 OF 1919.
March 25, 1920.
Present:—Sir John Wallis, KT., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Coutts Trotter and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

JAINAB BIBI SAHEBA—DEFENDANT No. 1—APPELLANT

versus

HYDERALLY SAHEB AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 TO 4—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 33, 165—Evidence taken in judicial proceeding, admissibility of, in subsequent proceeding between same parties, by consent of parties.

Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding is admissible in a later proceeding between the same parties where they agree upon that course, irrespective of the conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Evidence Act. [p. 959, col. 1; p. 960, col. 1.]

Ponnuswami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai, 46 Ind. Cas. 849; 41 M. 731; 34 M. L. J. 526; (1918) M. W. N. 768, overruled.

Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkata Rao, 21 Ind. Cas. 319; 38 M. 160; 25 M. L. J. 360; (1913) M. W. N. 800; Krishna Reddi v. Sundara Reddi, 26 Ind. Cas. 384; (1914) M. W. N. 931 and Ramaya v. Devappa Ganpaya, 30 B. 109; 7 Bom. L. R. 642, followed.

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Masulipatam, in Original Suit No. 85 of 1916.

The appeal coming on for hearing on the 30th October 1919, upon perusing the grounds of appeal, the judgment and decree of the lower Court and the material papers in the suit and upon hearing the arguments of Mr. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar and Mr. T. Ramachandra Rao, for the Appellant, and of Mr. P. Narayanamoorti, for the 1st Respondents and Mr. K. Ramamurti, for the 2nd Respondent, and the other respondents not appearing in person or by Pleader, the Court (Oldfield and Krishnan, JJ.) made the following ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A FULL BENCH.

The greater part of the evidence in this case was taken in a previous judicial proceeding to which the same persons were parties and in which the same main issues were raised. That evidence was admitted by the lower Court by consent. The first point taken here is that it was inadmissible. Authority on the question is conflicting in Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1), Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkata Rao (2) and Krishna Reddi v. Sundara Reddi (3). We, therefore, refer to a Full Bench the question whether such evidence is admissible.

This appeal came on for hearing on the 5th March 1920 in pursuance of the Order of Reference to the Full Bench.

Messrs. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar and T. Ramachandra Rao, for the Appellant.—The lower Court erred in admitting the evidence of witnesses recorded in previous proceedings. The consent of parties cannot cure a statutory defect. The provisions of section 33 of the Evidence Act are stringent. The section enumerates the conditions under which alone the evidence is admissible. The parties cannot render legal that which is declared illegal by Statute. See Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1). The proviso to section 165 of the Evidence Act makes the position clear. Whatever questions may be put by a Court, its judgment must be based on relevant facts.

Mr. P. Narayanamurti and Mr. K. Ramamurti, for Respondents Nos. 1 & 2—Consent of parties cures all defects. Section 33 of the Evidence Act must be read independently of the consent of parties. The question relates only to the method of proof. Evidence may be taken orally and even affidavit evidence is sometimes accepted. Where parties are agreed that evidence recorded in a prior proceeding may be used as evidence in a case, there can be no justification in ignoring their joint request and insisting on statutory formalities. Much of the Court's time will be saved by adopting this procedure. The proviso to section 165 has no bearing on this question. It does not state what facts should be considered to be duly proved. The English practice is the same. See Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkata Rao (2), Krishna Reddi v. Sundara Reddi (3) and Ramaya v. Devappa Ganpaya (4). Ponnuswami

(1) 46 Ind. Cas. 849; 41 M. 731; 34 M. L. J. 526; (1918) M. W. N. 768.
(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 319; 38 M. 160; 25 M. L. J. 360; (1913) M. W. N. 800.
(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 384; (1914) M. W. N. 931.
(4) 30 B. 109; 7 Bom. L. R. 642.

Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1) has been wrongly decided. There are recognised exceptions to viva voce examinations and the rule in question is one of such exceptions. There is nothing to preclude a party from waiving the benefit of the provisions of section 33 of the Evidence Act.

OPINION.

WALLIS, C. J.—The decision in Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1), that the consent of the parties to a suit cannot make admissible the evidence given in a previous judicial proceeding between the same parties where some of the issues were the same, was based mainly on the provisions of sections 165 and 33 of the Indian Evidence Act. Section 165, which enables the presiding Judge to ask any question "about any fact relevant or irrelevant", contains a proviso "that the judgment must be based on facts declared by this Act to be relevant and duly proved." The effect of this section merely is that, while the presiding Judge in the course of the trial may ask questions about irrelevant facts, including under the scheme of the Act statements made to the witness by other parties or hearsay, he must base his judgment upon facts which are relevant to the issues and are duly proved. It does not throw any light on the question, what facts should be considered to be duly proved. Section 33, which occurs under the heading "statements by persons who cannot be called as witnesses," provides that "evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding is relevant for the purpose of proving in a subsequent judicial proceeding the truth of the facts which it states" in the circumstances set out in the rest of the section. As pointed out in Amir Ali and Woodroffe's Commentries, the word "relevant", as used in the Act, is equivalent to "having probative force" and the effect of the section is to make the evidence admissible in the circumstance specified independently of the consent of the parties. Though differently worded, this section has really much the same effect as Order XXXVII, rule 3, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, which enables the Court to order evidence taken in another case to be read. This is in accordance with the old Chancery practice, which is stated as follows in Daniel's Chancery Practice, Chapter XII, section 2 (1), page 515: "Evidence taken in another Court may be read in a cause on production of a copy of the pleadings if the two suits are between the same parties or their privies, and the issue is the same; and such depositions are admissible in evidence in the former cause," citing Williams v. Williams (5). Such orders are only made in cases similar to those specified in section 33, but if the Court could make such depositions admissible even without the consent of parties, the case for admitting them by consent is even stronger. Rules 1 and 18 of Order XXXVII, which require the examination of the witnesses to be viva voce in open Court, except in cases where proof is to be made by affidavit or evidence taken on commission to be admitted, and provide that these two modes of proof shall not be adopted except in the cases specified, both contain a saving clause enabling it to be done in any case by the consent of parties.

This is a recognition of the principle that such matters may properly be regulated by the consent of the parties. The admission by consent of evidence taken in other cases raising the same issues is of daily occurrence in England and must now be taken to be the settled practice, which is the law of the Court. If there is not much direct authority on the point, that would appear to be because it had never been seriously questioned. In Conradi v. Conradi (6) a divorce suit in which a new trial had been ordered, the question arose whether according to the practice of that Court the Judge's notes of the deposition of a witness at the earlier trial who had since died could be read at the second trial except by consent. Lord Penzance, who had been a Common Law Judge, observed that he had known of its having been made a condition of granting a new trial that the Judge's notes of the previous trial should be admitted. No such order could have been made except on the footing that the consent of the parties could render the evidence admissible.

There is, in my opinion, no sufficient reason for holding that a different rule is applicable in India where the practice in cases such as the present is scarcely less well established than in England, and is of such obvious convenience that very strong grounds should be shown for holding it inadmissible. The Indian Evidence Act, it is true, contains no express recognition of the practice, but neither, so far as I can see, is any such express recognition to be found in Taylor on Evidence. The Indian Statute and the English treatise both confine themselves to stating the well-established rules of evidence, and do not deal with the question how far the strict requirements of the established rules may be departed from by consent in cases such as this. Far from the practice being opposed to public policy, evidence not taken before the Judge actually deciding the case has been made admissible in India by Statute, as pointed out by Sundara Ayyar, J., in Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkata Rao (2), in cases where a suit is transferred from one Court to another and where there is a change of Judge in the trying Court owing to death, transfer or other cause. In these circumstances the practice seems to be in accordance with the principle embodied in the maxim Unusquisque potest renuntiare juri pro se introducto, seeing that it is not only not opposed to public policy but entirely in accordance with it. The trend of the Indian decisions which are referred to by Sundara Aiyar J., is also in its favour, and the judgment of Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., in Ramaya v. Devappa Ganpaya (4) is to the same effect. Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1) must be overruled and the question answered in the affirmative.

(5) (1894) 12 W. R. 663; 10 L. T. (N. S.) 286; 10 Jur (N. S.) 608; 3 N. R. 701.

(6) (1868) 1 P. & D. 514; 37 L. J. Mat. 55; 18 L. T. 659; 16 W. R. 1023.

COUTTS TROTTER, J.—It is clear that in this country neither an omission by the Advocate to object to the giving of irrelevant and inadmissible evidence nor the failure of the tribunal to exclude it of its own motion will validate a decree based on material which the Evidence Act declares to be inherently and in substance irrelevant to the issue. A wholly different question arises, where the objection is not as to the nature and quality of the evidence in itself but merely as to the mode of proof put forward. I agree that consent can cure what would otherwise be a defective method of putting forward evidence in its substance and context relevant and germane to the issues; and that to hold otherwise would not only be contrary to the established practice both in England and in this country but would prohibit litigants from adopting a method leading to the saving of time and expense and in itself neither inconvenient nor unjust. I am of opinion that Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkata Rao (2) was rightly decided and that Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1) is contrary both to principle and practice.

KRISHNAN, J.—This reference raises the question of the correctness of the ruling in Ponnusaumy Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1). The learned Judges who decided that case held, on a construction of sections 33 and 165 of the Indian Evidence Act, that in spite of the consent of parties the evidence given by a witness in a former proceeding was not admissible in a later proceeding between the same parties unless the "conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act were found by the trial Judge to exist." In arriving at this conclusion they expressly declined to follow an earlier ruling of this Court in Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkata Rao (2). With all respect to the learned Judges it seems to me that their view cannot be supported.

As pointed out in Krishna Reddi v. Sundara Reddi (3) the question involved here is one of mode of proof of relevant facts rather than one of the relevancy of the facts themselves. The former depositions were sought to be admitted as proof of facts relevant to the present case spoken to by the witnesses then. The primary rule to prove relevant facts by the evidence of witnesses is to call them before the trial Judge and examine them viva voce in the manner stated in Chapter X of the Evidence Act. But that rule has several recognised exceptions, such as the examination of witnesses on commission, or the use of affidavits as evidence, the use of evidence taken by one Judge by another as in cases where a suit is transferred from one Court to another or when there is a change of Judge in the trying Court. One of such exceptions recognised by law is the method of filing the record of evidence of a witness taken in a former judicial proceeding. This is allowed by section 33 of the Evidence Act subject, no doubt, to certain restrictions and conditions. These limitations seem from their nature to be intended to protect the opposing party from being prejudiced by such admission, as it may interfere with his right of cross-examination and of testing the credibility of the witness. I quite agree that if such evidence is to be admitted against the opposition of a party, the Judge should be satisfied that the conditions and restrictions imposed by section 33 are fully complied with; but I can see no difficulty in holding that a party may waive the benefit of those provisions which are intended for his benefit, at any rate in a civil suit where no question of public policy is involved, whatever the position may be in a criminal trial. A civil suit is a proceeding inter partes and as parties can by consent settle its final result by having a consent decree passed, there is no reason why they should not be permitted to consent to treat something as evidence of a relevant fact which it may not otherwise be; and when the trial Judge has admitted and acted upon such evidence, it is not only proper evidence but the parties ought not to be allowed to object to its admissibility in appeal.

This view is in accordance with the rulings of our Court in Angammal v. Aslami Sahib (7) and Krishna Reddi v. Sundara Reddi (3), and it has also the high authority of Sir Lawrence Jenkins in its favour in Ramaya v. Devappa Ganpaya (4). That learned Judge says: "parties, if so minded, may ordinarily agree that evidence shall be taken in a particular way, and it is common experience that parties do agree that evidence in one suit shall be treated as evidence in another. That is not a matter which can be said to affect the jurisdiction of the Court. It is merely that parties allow certain materials to be used as evidence which apart from their consent cannot be so used."

It is also in accordance with the established practice both here and England, and we should not lightly depart from such practice as it tends to the saving of time and expense. Again, where such evidence has been admitted and acted upon by the trying Judge without objection, it is clear from Lakshman Govind v. Amrit Gopal (2) and the authorities cited in it that the Appellate Court should not allow any objection to be taken to the procedure.

The learned Judges in the 41 Madras case consider that what they call "the stringent provisions" of section 165 of the Evidence Act, that is, the first proviso in it, prevent the views above stated from being taken. I agree with the learned Chief Justice that that section has really no bearing on the question before us.

The section is enacted to enable the presiding Judge to ask any question he pleases, whether relevant or irrelevant, and to order the production of any document or thing which he wishes to have. The provision relied on in Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1) is the proviso to that section; and as such it has no general application but merely prohibits the Judge from basing his judgment on the facts so obtained by him unless they are relevant and duly proved. It comes into operation only when the Judge has acted under the section.

I, therefore, agree that our answer to the reference must be in the affirmative and that the case in Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai (1) must be overruled.

M. C. P.

Answered in the affirmative.

(8, 24 B. 591; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 924.

(7) 21 Ind. Cas. 883; 38 M. 710 at p. 731; 14 M. L. 418, (1913) M. W. N. 974; 25 M. L. J. 625.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

SPECIAL SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 226 OF 1917.

November 21, 1981.

Present:—Mr. Justice Maung Kin.

M. M. P. L. K. CHETTY—APPELLANT

versus

SUPAYA MAISTRY—RESPONDENT.

Maliciously procuring order of Court—Damages, suit for—Malice, absence of, effect of.

In the absence of proof of malice or its equivalent, a suit for damages for having wrongfully procured an order of Court appointing a Receiver will not lie. [p. 962, col. 1.]

M. M. P. L. K. CHETTY v. SUPAYA MAISTRY.

Mr. Doctor, for the Appellant.

Mr. Chari, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In Suit No. 10 of 1914 of the Sub Divisional Court of Kyaiklat the defendant appellant sued Adhira for rent making the plaintiff-respondent the second defendant on the ground that he had stood surety for the payment of the rent by the first defendant. The defendant-appellant successfully applied for the appointment of a Receiver of the paddy constituting the rent on the ground that the defendants were removing it. The Receiver seized two thousand three hundred baskets of paddy which was on plaintiff respondent's thrashing floor and sold it. The sale-proceeds were paid to the defendant appellant.

Some considerable time afterwards the defendant appellant's suit was dismissed against the plaintiff-respondent, the Court holding that the paddy seized by the Receiver was the plaintiff-respondent's paddy and not the first defendant's. The result was that the Receiver was discharged. The sale-proceeds which were paid out to the defendant-appellant were ordered to be returned and paid to the plaintiff respondent. Subsequently plaintiff-respondent filed the present suit for damages after giving credit for what he had received and obtained a decree for Rs. 2,646, which amount was reduced to Rs. 1,002 by the Divisional Court.

The defendant-appellant has now appealed to this Court and the grounds he has urged are that the suit was time barred, and that the plaintiff cannot succeed without proof of malice.

The Sub-Divisional Court held that the defendant obtained the appointment of a Receiver wrongfully. The Divisional Court held that the order for the appointment of a Receiver was obtained on insufficient grounds. Neither of the lower Courts found that in applying for the appointment of a Receiver, the defendant was actuated by malice. On reference to the plaint it is found that the suit was not based on malice.

The utmost that can be said against the defendant is that he obtained an erroneous order from the Court. The case he attempted to make out was insufficient, and the Court gave an erroneous decision. There is nothing to show that the affidavits which the defendant filed in support of his application for the appointment of a Receiver were false to his knowledge.

In the Mina Kumari Bibi v. Surendra Narain Chakravaty (1) it was laid down that "It is well settled that no action will lie against any person for procuring an erroneous decision of a Court of Justice. This is so, even though the Court has no jurisdiction in the matter, and although its...order is for that or any other reason invalid. A Court of Justice is not the agent or servant of the litigant who sets it in motion so as to make that litigant responsible for the errors of law or fact which the Court commits. Every party is entitled to rely absolutely on the presumption that the Court will observe the limits of its own jurisdiction and decide correctly on the facts and law." Later in the judgment it is stated that in Joykalee Dasee v. Chandmalla (2) Sir Barnes Peacock, C. J., pointed out that if a person makes an application maliciously or without probable and reasonable cause to a Court of competent jurisdiction to seize the property of another person as the property of his judgment debtor, he may be liable to damages for any injury which may be occasioned by reason of the order of the Court, and upon the same principle a person may be liable to damages for applying for an injunction upon a ground which he knows to be insufficient. The learned Judges (Mookerji and Vincent, JJ.) proceed to say:—"But this doctrine has no application where a person is not acting maliciously or without probable cause." The same view has been taken by the Madras and Allahabad High Courts in Boja Reddi v. Perumal Reddi (3) and Dudhnath Pandu v. Mathura Prasad (4).

In Madras Steam Navigation Company v. Shalimar Works Limited (5) the defendant Company sued the plaintiff for an amount alleged to be due to them for maritime necessaries and obtained a warrant of arrest of the Company's ship. The ship remained under arrest for a considerable time. The suit of the defendant Company was dismissed eventually on the ground of want of jurisdiction. The plaintiff Company then filed a

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 12; 14 C. W. N. 96; 10 C. L. J. 226.
(2) 9 W. R. 133.
(3) 26 M. 506.
(4) 24 A. 317; A. W. N. (1902) 75.
(5) 28 Ind. Cas. 463; 42 C. 85.

BALKRISHNA SAHAI v. SHAM SUNDAR SAHAY.

suit for the wrongful arrest of the ship. The suit framed was based on malice or its equivalent, but at the hearing the suit was proceeded with on the footing of its being one for mere trespass. It was held by Jenkins, C. J., and Stephen, J., that in the absence of proof of malice or its equivalent, a suit for simple trespass will not lie for the arrest of a ship.

The position in the case before me is similar to that in the case cited above. By appointing a Receiver the Court gave the Receiver power to seize the paddy and he did seize it. On the authority of the rulings quoted above I am bound to hold that the suit of the plaintiff-respondent did not lie. In this view it is unnecessary to consider the question of limitation. The appeal is allowed with costs.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER No. 6 OF 1919.

May 14, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Coutts and Mr. Justice Adami.

BALKRISHNA SAHAI AND ANOTHER —APPELLANTS

versus

Babu SHAM SUNDAR SAHAY AND OTHERS —DECREE-HOLDERS, SHEOKARAN DAS— JUDGMENT DEBTOR—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Debt incurred by father on suretyship—Son, liability of.

A Hindu son or grandson governed by the Mitakshara Law is liable for the debt of his father or grandfather due on account of a contract of suretyship for the payment of money and which comes within the meaning of vyavarika, which has been translated as lawful, useful or customary, unless the transaction is either illegal or immoral.

Appeal from an order of the Munsif, Mozuffarpore.

Messrs. Kulwant Sahay and Rai Tribhuan Nath Sahay, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Parmeshwar Dayal and Jadubans Sahay, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

COUTTS, J.—The decree-holder obtained a decree against three persons] on the basis of two Hundis. The Hundis were drawn by the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and were accepted by the defendant No. 1. Execution was taken out against the defendant No. 1 and his property was attached. He died but no steps were taken for substitution and the execution case was dismissed. On the 6th of July 1917 the decree-holder filed another application for execution, which is the one with which we are now concerned. In that application he sought to substitute the minor son of the defendant No. 1. The minor objected that his father was only a surety and that execution could not proceed against him.

SHEOLAL v. CHINDHU.

In the Court of first instance the objection was allowed but on appeal the order, allowing the objection, was set aside and the minor defendant has now appealed to this Court.

The case is completely concluded by the decision of this Court in Mahabir Prasad Sri Narayan (1), in which it was held that a Hindu son or grandson governed by the Mitakshara Law is liable for the debt of his father or grandfather due on account of a contract of suretyship for the payment of money and which comes within the meaning of vyavarika, which has been translated as lawful, useful or customary, unless the transaction is either illegal or immoral. I agree with the view taken in this decision, which is also in accordance with the law as laid down by the Calcutta High Court. I would accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

ADAMI, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 46 Ind. Cas. 27; 3 P. L. J. 396; (1918) Pat. 328; 4 P. L. W. 437.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 266 OF 1919.

March 11, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Macnair, A. J. C.

Seth SHEOLAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

CHINDHU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS— RESPONDENTS.

Suit against legal representative of deceased debtor—Assets, extent of, proof of, whether necessary.

NAGAPPA CHETTY v. AH FOKE.

In a suit against the legal representative of a debtor, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree if he proves that any assets belonging to the deceased debtor exist. He is not bound to prove the extent of such assets.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Chhindwara, in Civil Appeal No. 137 of 1918, decided on the 31st January 1919.

Mr. M. B. Kinkhede, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The learned District Judge has held that the respondents in this Court are bound to pay the decretal amount to the extent of the value of any ancestral family property and any separate property inherited by them from him which is in their hands for which they have not already duly accounted, provided that such property can be proceeded against in execution. He has held that it is for the plaintiff to prove that there is any such property and he has passed a decree defining the property which is liable.

It is settled law that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree if he proves that any assets exist. The plaintiff was not bound to prove the extent of this property. There was no issue on the point. I consider that the learned District Judge was wrong in finding that certain property was exempt from attachment, when the plaintiff was not bound to allege and prove the contrary and has not had a reasonable opportunity of adducing evidence on this point. The appellant's Counsel before me states he will be satisfied if the decree of the lower Appellate Court be modified by the addition of the words "used for agricultural purposes" after the words "house, land or cattle." I, therefore, order that these words be inserted.

The respondents must bear the costs of this appeal. Pleader's fee Rs. 15.

Decree modified.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 87 OF 1918.

April 11, 1919.

Present.—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Ormond.

P. M. A. NAGAPPA CHETTY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

AH FOKE—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Auction sale—Agreement not to bid against each other, whether unlawful—Bidding curtailed—Fraud on vendor.

It is not unlawful for two or more persons to agree not to bid against each other at an auction sale. The fact that owing to such an agreement the bidding is curtailed is not a fraud upon the vendor. [p. 965, col. 2; p. 966, col. 1.]

Mr. Giles, for the Appellant.

Mr. Das, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff Ah Foke sued the defendant Chetty firm for the recovery of two sums of Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 4,000 deposited with the defendant P. M. A. Nagappa Chetty on the 2nd April 1917. One Li Kut Chaung was joined as second defendant. The plaintiff alleged that he deposited the money with the Chetty in order that it might be paid out to the second defendant, if he abstained from bidding at the auction of certain Government licenses for the sale of country liquor, namely, Hlawza licenses Nos. 2 and 3. According to the plaintiff, a further condition was made that the license No. 2 should be knocked down to him for not more than Rs. 72,000 and No. 3 for not more than Rs. 70,000. The auction took place on the 2nd April. No. 2 license was knocked down for Rs. 1,05,000 and No. 3 for Rs. 75,100. No. 2 license was bought in the name of Li Kan Shoo who was a partner of Ah Foke, and Ah Foke and Li Kan Shoo were partners with one Wong King in the purchase of No. 3 license. The second defendant, Li Kut Chaung, did not bid for No. 2 license, but after that license was knocked down to Li Kan Shoo, he took part in the bidding for No. 3 license.

The plaintiff states that as the prices were higher than those agreed upon he went to the Chetty, the first defendant, on the same evening and demanded re-payment of the amount deposited. The Chetty told him that he would re-pay the money after consulting the second defendant Li Kut Chaung. The plaintiff made further demands, and as the money was not re-paid by the Chetty he brought this suit, joining Li Kut Chaung as second defendant, because the first defendant stated that he had paid the money to Li Kut Chaung.

The Chetty denied that the money had been deposited by the plaintiff, and maintained that it had been deposited by the second defendant, Li Kut Chaung. Li Kut Chaung also denied the plaintiff's case, and said that he had deposited the money with the Chetty. It is common ground, however, between the plaintiff and the second defendant that the deposit was made with a view to prevent Li Kut Chaung from bidding at the auction. But according to Li Kut Chaung the inducement offered to him by the plaintiff was not a payment of Rs. 9,000 in the event of the license being knocked down at the prices arranged between them but a promise to admit Li Kut Chaung to a quarter share in a partnership in the two licenses, if the licenses were knocked down to the plaintiff at not more than one lakh and Rs. 85,000 respectively. According to Li Kut Chaung's version, it was arranged that he should deposit with the Chetty an instalment towards his quarter share in the proposed partnership and the sum of Rs. 9,000 which he deposited, with the Chetty was apporximately one-fourth of the estimated amount of the one-fifth instalments to be paid in respect of the two licenses on the fall of the hammer. Li Kut Chaung states that as license No. 2 was knocked down for more than a lakh, he considered that the bargain had fallen through, and went to the Chetty to withdraw the money which he had deposited.

On the evening of the day of the auction, the Chetty gave the second defendant, Li Kut Chaung, a promissory note for the amount deposited, Rs. 9,000, and it is the case of both the defendants that the money was not actually paid to Li Kut Chaung till the 7th June and that, in the meantime, it was left in deposit with the Chetty without interest, as Li Kut Chaung had no immediate use for it.

The Chetty states that Ah Foke and Li Kut Chaung both came at the time of the original deposit, and the second defendant handed over the money, saying: "Keep this Rs. 9,000 with you. I am going to an auction. I shall be coming back in the evening. On my return I shall tell you what to do with the money." The Chetty states that he was told nothing at the time as to the arrangement between the plaintiff and the second defendant. Li Kut Chaung says that when depositing the money with the Chetty he told him that it was to be used for buying a license at the auction, and that the license was to be bought by him and Ah Foke jointly. The plaintiff Ah Foke, on the other hand, states that the arrangement between him and Li Kut Chaung was explained to the Chetty at the time of the deposit, and that a piece of paper written in Chinese and signed by himself, Li Kut Chaung and Wong King, who was also present, was made over to the Chetty. Wong King, who was a partner of Ah Foke in the Hlawza business, corroborates him fully on this point. Wong King also states that out of the Rs. 4,000 which was deposited in respect of No. 3 license he contributed Rs. 2,000. He produces an account book which is called "Cash book of the various liquor shops for 1917," and this book appears to be written in the ordinary course of business. It contains an entry of 2nd April 1917 in respect of No. 3 Hlawza shop, "Paid for Baksheesh for insuring peace in the license—Rs. 2,000." According to the plaintiff the balance, Rs. 7,000, of the Rs. 9,000 deposited with the Chetty was furnished by his partner Li Kan Shoo, and Li Kan Shoo in his evidence corroborates him on this point. Li Kan Shoo, however, produced no accounts. The plaintiff tendered certain accounts, and they were rejected because in a previous affidavit of documents the plaintiff had stated that he had no accounts relating to the matter of the suit.

On a consideration of the facts and probabilities of the case, the learned Judge on the Original Side found that the deposit of Rs. 9,000 was made by the plaintiff, and not by the second defendant, but the learned Judge held further that the object of the agreement between the plaintiff and the second defendant was fraudulent, and the agreement was, therefore, unlawful and void under section 23 of the Contract Act. He, therefore, decided that the plaintiff could not recover from the second defendant, Li Kut Chaung. As regards the first defendant Nagappa Chetty, however, the Judge held that he was liable to repay the money to the depositor, Ah Foke, on the ground that Ah Foke had sent him a lawyer's letter demanding the refund of the money before it had been paid over to the second defendant, and when only a promissory note had been given for the amount to the second defendant, and the Judge cited an authority under section 23 of the Contract Act, showing that authority to pay money in respect of an unlawful transaction may be revoked at any time before the money has been actually paid. A decree was, therefore, granted against the first defendant as prayed.

We think the learned Judge has taken the right view of the facts. Ah Foke's partner Li Kan Shoo was at daggers drawn with Li Kut Chaung, and it seems very unlikely, as the learned Judge points out, that in these circumstances Li Kut Chaung would be willing to join in a partnership with Ah Foke and Li Kan Shoo. Ah Foke and Li Kut Chaung were mutually distrustful. The plaintiff was very apprehensive that Li Kut Chaung would bid up the licenses to an exorbitant figure to spite him and Li Kan Shoo. It was, therefore, Li Kut Chaung who had to be bought off, and there is nothing improbable in the plaintiff's story that he and his partners between them decided to buy off Li Kut Chaung's opposition at the auction, and that the money should be deposited in the meantime with the Chetty who was trusted by both sides. On the other hand, Li Kut Chaung's story that he was promised a quarter share in the licenses, and that he deposited the Rs. 9,000 as an instalment toward the purchase price, seems very improbable in the circumstances. The very fact that Li Kut Chaung had deposited Rs. 9,000 of his own money with the Chetty would not bind the plaintiff in any way and would still leave the plaintiff a free hand to carry out or not his promise of a quarter share in the licenses.

But we feel bound to hold that the learned Judge has taken an erroneous view of the law in deciding that the agreement between Ah Foke, the plaintiff, and Li Kut Chaung, the second defendant, was fraudulent. It is well established according to English law that an agreement between two or more persons not to bid against each other at an auction is not an unlawful agreement. Vide Galton v. Emuss (1), Carew's Estate In re (2), Heffer v. Martyn (3). See also Snell's Principles of Equity, page 455 (17th Edition), Smith's Manual of Equity, 15th Edition, page 75, and Story's Equity Jurisprudence, 2nd Edition, page 187. The view taken by the learned Judge is based on certain remarks of Mookerji, J., in Ambika Prasad Singh v. Whitwell (4). It is there said that the test in each case is, what was the object of the agreement among the bidders. If the object be to obtain the property at a sacrifice by artifice, the combination is fraudulent; if the object be to make a fair bargain, or even to divide the property for the accommodation of the purchasers, the combination cannot be said to be fraudulent. But these remarks are based upon certain American cases cited in Mr. Justice Mookerji's judgment, and they seem to be at variance with the rule laid down by Lord Romilly in Heffer v. Martyn (3) that "intending buyers may arrange between themselves which lots they will bid for and which not, and agree not to compete with each other, and if they may do so...they may take money for abstaining to compete, as well as arrange to take one lot against another." We concur in the following remarks of the learned Judge on the Original Side in this case. They are in consonance with Lord Romilly's remarks in Heffer v. Martyn (3): "The question whether the vendor, who has ample power to ascertain the value of his property, and who can by putting a reserve price upon it, avoid having to part with it at less than his own price, is entitled to rescind his contract, merely because he has not chosen to put a reserve price, or has put too low a price, is quite a different one. If he is willing to sell at a certain price and gets that price, has he any right to complain because if he had put a higher price, he would have obtained it?" It appears to follow that the vendor

(1) (1844) 13 L. J. Ch. 389; 8 Jur. 507; 1 Coll. 243; 63 E. R. 402.

(2) (1858) 28 L. J. Ch. 248; 26 Beav. 187; 4 Jur. (N. S.) 1290; 7 W. R. 81; 53 E. R. 869; 122 R. R. 76.

(3) (1867) 36 L. J. Ch. 372 at p. 373; 15 W. R. 390.

(4) 6 C. L. J. 111.

has no reason to complain if the bidders by combination amongst themselves curtail the bidding. And if there is no fraud upon the vendor, it is hard to see how there can be any fraud at all.

We decide that the agreement between the plaintiff and the second defendant was not unlawful and that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the amount of his deposit from the Chetty. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

REVISION No. 88 OF 1919-20.

May 6, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Hopkins, S. M., and Mr. Porter, J. M.

SANT PATHAK AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

Raja PARTAB BAHADUR—RESPONDENT.

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 37, Exp. I—Trespasser, land held by, nature of.

Land held by a trespasser is not a "holding" or parcel of land held by a tenant and forming the subject of a separate engagement within the meaning of Explanation I to section 37 of the Oudh Rent Act.

Application for review of the order of the Board of Revenue, United Provinces, dated the 13th of December 1919, in the case of ejectment.

JUDGMENT.

PORTER, J. M.—[May 5, 1920.]—This is an application for review of an order of this Court, dated 11th December 1919. By that order the first issue in the suit contesting ejectment in the Court of the Assistant Collector, in which applicant was plaintiff, was finally decided against him. He was held to be a trespasser, liable to ejectment by an unstamped notice.

He applied for review on the grounds that issues Nos. (2) and (3) as framed in the first Court were never decided. The application was admitted for hearing by my predecessor. As issue No. (1) had been decided in his favour in the first Court, it is true that no decision was given, or was necessary there on a part of issue No. (2) and on issue No. (3).

Issue No. (2) was:—"Has the service of the notice been proper? Is the notice in order? Is a Court-fee stamp due?".

The last portion has been decided. The first portion relates to Mahabir, plaintiff No. 2 in the suit, who is said to have been absent in Bombay. The notice was affixed to his house. Mahabir personally contested the notice, which sufficiently disposes of the objection now raised.

Issue No. (3) was:—"Does the notice relate to a part of the holding?" The Patwari was not examined. The applicant, however, has been held to be a trespasser. The land in suit was, therefore, no holding, or parcel of land held by a tenant and forming the subject of a separate engagement (section 37, Explanation. 1).

I would dismiss the application with costs.

HOPKINS, J. M.—I agree.

Application dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 970 OF 1916.

June 1, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Leslie-Jones.

HARNAM SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

BHOLA SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, r. 2, scope of—Mortgage—Suit for possession of mortgaged land—Subsequent suit for return of mortgage money, whether barred.

Order II, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code is directed against two evils, the splitting of claims and the splitting of remedies. If a man omits from his suit a portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of it: if he omits one of his remedies, he cannot afterwards pursue it. [p. 967, col. 2.]

HARNAM SINGH v. BHOLA SINGH.

Govind v. Parashram, 25 B. 161; 2 Bom. L. R. 864, followed.

Plaintiffs sued defendants for recovery of mortgage money with interest, alleging that the land of B., defendant No. 1, was originally mortgaged with possession to C., defendant No. 2, by three deeds, but that these mortgages were transferred to their father I. by C. They also alleged that B. orally mortgaged this land to I. for Rs. 1,000 and that mutation of this mortgage was effected but was set aside on appeal. It appeared that I. had sued B. for possession of the land alleged to have been orally mortgaged to him, but his suit was dismissed on the ground that the mortgage was not proved:

Held, (1) that the plaintiffs ought to have sued for both the remedies—the possession of the land or the return of the mortgage money—in the alternative in one suit. [p. 967, col. 1.]

(2) that having omitted to sue for the mortgage money in the first suit, they were precluded from suing for it now by Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 967, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 3rd January 1916, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Class, Ferozepore, dated the 16th August 1915.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Devi Dial, for Chogat Singh, Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The land of Bhola Singh, defendant No. 1, was mortgaged with possession to Chogat Singh, defendant No. 2, by three deeds for Rs. 550, Rs. 50 and Rs. 200 respectively. The plaintiffs allege that these mortgages were transferred to their father Ishar Singh by Chogat Singh and that each deed bears an endorsement on it referring to the assignment. It is also alleged that Bhola Singh orally mortgaged this land to Ishar Singh for Rs. 1,000 and that mutation of this mortgage was effected but set aside on appeal. Ishar Singh then sued Bhola Singh for possession of the land alleged to have been orally mortgaged to him, but his suit was dismissed on the ground that he was unable to prove the mortgage. He then brought this suit for Rs. 1,000 mortgage money plus Rs. 600 interest and made Chogat Singh, Mala Singh and Bishen Singh defendants as well as Bhola Singh. The Courts below have dismissed the suit, holding that as regards Bhola Singh it is barred by Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, and the plaintiffs have no cause of action against the other defendants.

Mr. Nand Lal has argued the case on behalf of the appellants, sons of Ishar Singh, and has contended that the present suit against Bhola Singh is not barred by Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, but he cites no authority in support of his argument. As pointed out in Govind v. Parashram (1), "Section 43 (corresponding to Order II, rule 2 of the present Code) is directed against two evils—the splitting of claims and the splitting of remedies. If a man omits from his suit a portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of it: if he omits one of his remedies, he cannot afterwards pursue it." Now in the present case the plaintiffs' cause of action was the alleged oral mortgage to Ishar Singh by Bhola Singh and the latter's refusal to acknowledge it. Another part of the cause of action was the assignment of Chogat Singh's mortgage rights which he had under three separate deeds of mortgage. The cause of action in both suits is, in our opinion, exactly the same. The plaintiffs had two remedies, one possession of the land; the other return of the money paid by their father. They ought to have sued for these remedies in the alternative in one suit. Having omitted to sue for the mortgage money in the first suit they are, in our opinion, clearly precluded from now suing for it. We, therefore, agree with the lower Courts that the suit as against Bhola Singh is barred by Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. We also agree with the learned District Judge's reasons for holding that the plaintiffs cannot succeed as against Chogat Singh. Their father Ishar Singh paid Chogat Singh Rs. 800 for the mortgages which he held against Bhola Singh, and Chogat Singh was not to blame for the fact that his assignee failed in his suit for possession of the land against the mortgagor. Plaintiffs' father's failure was really due to the fact that he did not get a properly registered deed of mortgage from Bhola Singh. The plaintiffs do not allege that their father was defrauded in any way by Chogat Singh and, therefore, they are not entitled to any relief on the ground of fraud. Chogat Singh is in no way to blame for the failure of the previous suit and we agree with the learned District Judge that he is not liable for re-payment of the money which Jshar Singh paid to him.

(1) 25 B. 161; 2 Bom. L. R. 864.

We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs against Chogat Singh, who alone is represented before us.

Appeal dismissed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 167 OF 1917.
September 4, 1918.
Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Ormond.
KO PU AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
MA THEIN YIN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 68, applicability of—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 78—Administration security bond, suit on—Limitation applicable.

An administration security bond is not a bond subject to a condition as contemplated in Article 68 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act, consequently the period of limitation prescribed by that article does not apply to a suit brought upon a breach of the terms of the bond. Article 68 applies to a bond which is to become enforceable only when a specified condition is broken. The obligation to sue under an administration surety bond is liable to be enforced at once, and can only be avoided by the sureties showing that the conditions laid down in the bond have been fully carried out, or carried out as far as possible up to the time of the suit. The right to sue on such a bond accrues on failure of the administrator to comply with any of the conditions, or on the administrator putting it out of his power to comply with them. [p. 969, col. 1.]

Mr. Ohari, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Giles and Doctor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for the administration of the estate of two deceased persons Ko Kala and Ma Nge, who died intestate in 1903. The plantiff Ma Thein Yin claims as the sole heiress and the first defendant Ma Nyein Hla is the administratrix of the estate. Ma Nyein Hla obtained Letters of Administration in May 1903. The security bond for Rs. 10,000 under section 78 of the Probate and Administratio Act was executed by the second and third defendants, who are the present appellants, on the 16th April 1904. At that time the plaintiff was a minor and she states in her plaint in the present case that she attained her majority on the 6th March 1914 (when she attained the age of eighteen years). She brought this suit in April 1915 as an adult and no question was raised at that time that she was still a minor.

The surety bond is in the usual form. It provides that the sureties are bound in the sum of Rs. 10,0.0 to be paid to the Judge of the District Court, Hanthawaddy, for the time being and goes on to prescribe certain conditions which are to be fulfilled by the administratrix. She has to make and exhibit an inventory of the estate by a certain date, and by another prescribed date she has to furnish an account of her administration. As to the residue of the estate she has to pay such persons as shall be lawfully entitled to it, and finally she has to deliver the Letters of Administration to the Court. It is provided that on her fulfilling these conditions the sureties' obligation is to be void and of no effect, but it is otherwise to remain in full force. This surety bond was assigned to the plaintiff on the 12th March 1915 under section 79 of the Probate and Administration Act, and she filed her administration suit on the 30th April 1915.

The particular breach of the bond alleged in the plaint is that the administratrix failed to hand over the residue of the estate to the person entitled thereto, namely, the plaintiff.

The appellants pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation. This plea has been disallowed by the District Court, and the sole question in this appeal is whether it has been rightly disallowed. The District Court held that as the plaintiff was a minor up to 1914, there was no one to whom the administratrix could make over the residue of the estate, there being no one from whom she could receive a valid discharge. The Judge considered, therefore, that the breach of the bond did not occur, and in virtue of section 6 of the Limitation Act the plaintiff's cause of action did not arise, till the plaintiff attained her majority in March 1914, and that the period of three years' limitation prescribed under Article 68 of the Limitation Act did not begin to run till then.

In appeal it is contended on behalf of the sureties that a breach of the surety bond occurred when the administratrix failed to file an inventory within six months from the date of the bond and that limitation began to run from then. Assuming that Article 68 applies to the case, no authority has been shown for holding that limitation runs from the date when the inventory should have been filed. The ruling of this Court in Ahmed Moola Dawood v. Fatima Bee Bee (1) does not support this view, and the rulings of the Madras and Allahabad High Courts in Ramanatham Chetty v. Ragammal (2) and Kantee Chandra Mukerji v. Al i-Nabi (3) are also against it. It seems by no means clear, however, that Article 68 applies at all to a bond of this nature. The Allahabad High Court in the case cited did not mention what article they considered to be applicable, but as the learned Judges held the period of limitation to be six years, it would appear that they were not applying Article 68, but probably considered that Article 120 should be applied. Article 68 provides for the case of a bond subject to a condition and the period of limitation under that Article is three years from the time when the condition was broken. But a bond under section 78 of the Probate and Administration Act does not appear to fall within the description of a bond subject to a condition as contemplated in Article 68. That article appears to apply to a bond which is to become enforceable only when a specified condition is broken. The obligation to pay under an administration surety bond is liable to be enforced at once, and can only be avoided by the sureties showing that the conditions laid down in the bond have been fully carried out, or carried out as far as possible up to the time of the suit. The right to sue on such a bond would accrue on failure of the administrator to comply with any of the conditions or on the administrator putting it out of his power to comply with them. The fact that no action is taken on the breach of any one or more of the various successive conditions contained in such a bond would not bar a suit on a breach of a subsequent condition. This view is in accordance with that expressed in the Madras case cited above.

In the present case as the District Court has held that as there was no person who could give a valid discharge for the residue of the estate until the plaintiff had attained her majority (less than three years before the suit), the plaintiff's cause of action on the breach of the condition as to payment of the residue would not arise till then.

It has been argued for the appellants that the administratrix Ma Nyein Hla was also the guardian of the minor plaintiff under the Guardians and Wards Act and that when the administratrix had realised the estate, she held the property as guardian on behalf of the minor and in effect handed over the share of the minor to the person properly entitled to receive it and, therefore, that the sureties are not liable for any maladministration of the estate by the administratrix. There would no doubt be much force in this plea if the administratrix Ma Nyein Hla were in fact the duly appointed guardian of the minor. The Madras case already cited is an authority for the proposition that, when the administration has been completed, if the administrator can continue to hold the property in some capacity other than that of administrator, then the presumption is that he is holding the property in that other capacity. It is clear, however, that the plea must fail on the ground that the administratrix Ma Nyein Hla was not in fact appointed to be the guardian of Ma Thein Yin. It is true that the Letters of Administration issued to her in 1903 were granted on her application that she should be appointed as guardian of the minor. In passing orders in that case (Civil Miscellaneous Case No. 34 of 1903 in the District Court of Hanthawaddy) the District Judge observed "the minor, a little girl, has been, and is still living with petitioner who seems to me a suitable person in every way to be guardian of her person and property, and Letters of Administration may issue to Nyein Hla as prayed." It appears, therefore, that Ma Nyein Hla, having first applied to be the guardian of the minor, afterwards found it more convenient to be appointed as administra-

(1) 26 Ind. Cas. 505; 8 Bur. L. T. 59; 8 L. B. R. 99.
(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 849; 17 M. L. T. 61.
(3) 9 Ind. Cas. 935; 33 A. 414; 8 A L. J. 199.

trix of the estate and abandoned her application to be appointed guardian. The Privy Council case of Mungniram Marwari v. Gursahai Nand (4) has been cited to show that when a Court to which an application has been made for a certificate of guardianship has adjudged the applicant entitled to have one, he then substantially obtains it, although the actual certificate may not be drawn up or issued at the time. In that case the Judge passed a definite order on the application for a certificate: "application allowed." Their Lordships say: "When the Court makes that enquiry and comes to a decision that the application should be allowed, that is doing all that is substantially necessary in the matter; and when the order is made that the applicant shall have his certificate, the applicant really then obtains his certificate." But the present case must be distinguished from the above inasmuch as the District Court passed no order on the application for a certificate, but clearly with the assent or at the instance of the applicant granted her Letters of Administration instead. It must be held, therefore, that Ma Nyein Hla was not appointed guardian of the plaintiff.

On these grounds we hold that the suit against the sureties was not barred by limitation, and we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) 17 C. 347; 16 I. A. 195; 13 Ind. Jur. 449; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 463; 8 Ind Dec. (N. S) 770

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS Nos. 1295 and 1296 OF 1918.

May 10, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

RADHE MANDER AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

FAKIR MANDER AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Easement, suit based upon—Easement not established—Natural right, decree, whether can be based on—Natural right not specifically pleaded—Appellate Court whether can make new case not set out in plaint.

Where a plaintiff claims a right based upon easement and fails to establish the exercise of the right for the statutory period, he cannot succeed upon his natural right, and it is not open to the Court to make out a case not set up in the plaint and grant relief. [p. 971, col. 1.]

Plaintiff sued for a declaration of right by easement to two mochas for draining off rain water from his lands, but he failed to establish the exercise of the right for the statutory period. The Appellate Court, however, gave him a decree, holding that he was entitled to the natural flow of the water through the mochas. In second appeal:

Held, that the decree could not be maintained; that the plaintiff having failed to establish the easement asserted by him, it was not open to the Appellate Court to change the claim into one for the flow of natural water; that the plaintiff could not succeed upon his natural right to drain off water from higher to lower lands in the absence of evidence that the water flowed in the usual course of nature and in undefined channels, and that to succeed upon his natural right, the plaintiff must have specifically pleaded such right. [p. 971, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Bhagulpore.

Mr. Siva Narayan Bose, for the Appellants.

Mr. Baikuntha Nath Mitter, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These two appeals arise out of one suit instituted by the plaintiffs for a declaration of right of easement in two narrow strips called Moohas, and for removal of an obstruction placed by the defendants in them and for injunction and damages. The plaintiffs' case is that these Moohas were needed for draining off rain water and the natural slope was from north to south and west to east, that these Moohas had been in existence for 24 or 25 years and during all these years the rain water had been flowing through the said Moohas. The defendants' case was that the suit was not maintainable, that the landlord was a necessary party, that the Moohas were not passages for water but were parti lands used as foot-paths only, that the plaintiffs had not acquired prescriptive right to the passage of water through the two Moohas and that the story of the obstruction was false and that the plaintiffs had incurred no loss and as such the suit was liable to be dismissed. The trial Court held that the plaintiffs had established their right to the Moohas in the southern block and that the defendants had restrained the flow by obstructing the passage of the water and so gave a special decree to the plaintiffs. In appeal the learned Judge held, and in my opinion very rightly, that the claim based upon easement completely failed, inasmuch as apart from the fact that they had not established their exercise of the right for the statutory period, they had not made the landlord a party and, therefore, he held that the plaintiffs could not get a declaration of the right based on easement. But by a curious process of reasoning and misconception of law he has made out a new case for the plaintiffs and given a decree to them. He has held that the plaintiffs are entitled to the natural flow of water through the Mochas and that the defendants have got no right to put any obstruction in them. A reference to parapragh 4 of the plaint will show that the plaintiffs' case was that they dug out earth and constructed these Mochas for the outlet of rain water from the Barethas, and this they did over 24 or 25 years ago. His whole case was based upon the right to take water through these two artificial Mochas and he based his claim entirely on the exercise of this right for a period of 24 or 25 years. How on this case in the plaint the learned Judge could change it into a claim for the flow of natural water it is impossible for me to understand. There is no doubt that not only has every landowner a natural right to collect and retain within the limits of his own land surface water not flowing in a definite channel but he has also the right to drain it off on his neighbour's lower land or put it to whatever use he pleases, but as was held in Arkwright v. Gell (1) and Young & Co, v. Bankier Distillery Co. (2) "though there is a natural right of drainage from higher lands to lower lands of water flowing in the usual course of nature and in undefined channels, there is no obligation upon an adjoining landowner to submit to an artificial discharge from his neighbour's lands unless he is bound by an easement to do so." The case of easement asserted by the plaintiff has failed, so the plaintiff cannot succeed upon his natural right to drain off water from higher lands to lower lands unless it is established that the water flows in the usual course of nature and in undefined channels. On the case set up in the plaint itself it is perfectly clear that this claim, though raised for the plaintiffs by the learned Subordinate Judge in appeal, cannot be raised by the plaintiffs themselves. It is an elementary principle that if the plaintiff bases his claim upon the natural right, he must specifically plead it. This, however, as I have shown, far from having been specifically pleaded, was not pleaded at all. It has, however, been suggested by the learned Subordinate Judge that as the plaintiffs asserted that the defendants had committed a nuisance, the plainiffs were entitled to the abatement of that nuisance. This can only be possible if the plaintiffs can succeed in showing that they were entitled to dig earth from the Mochas which they have done. This on the findings of the Subordinate Judge the plaintiffs have failed to prove. In my opinion it is impossible to uphold the decree of the lower Appellate Court on the ground on which it is based. The result is that this appeal is decreed and the appellants are entitled to costs in this Court as well as in the Courts below.

Appeal decreed.

(1) (1839) 5 M. & W. 203; 2 H. & H. 17; 8 L. J. Ex. 201; 151 E. R. 87; 52 R. R. 671.

(2) (1893) A. C. 691; 69 L. T. 838; 58 J. P. 100.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 382 OF 1920.

May 21, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Shadi Lal, Chief Justice.

GOBIND SAHAI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

RAM CHAND—PLAINTIFF AND LADHA MAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Costs—Discretion of Court, how to be exercised—Appeal, when competent.

Courts have full discretion in the matter of award of costs, but that discretion is not an arbitrary one and must be exercised in accordance with general principles [p. 972, col. 1.]

In a pre-emption case the plaintiff's right of pre-emption was admitted, the only point in controversy being the price payable. The District Judge, dissenting from the Court of first instance, held that the whole of the price was paid before the Sub-Registrar and that there was no proof of the return of any part of the price. He accordingly accepted the vendee's appeal as to the price, but did not set aside the first Court's decree awarding costs against him. The vendee filed a second appeal in the High Court:

MA DWE v. TA TIN LUN.

Held (1) that in the circumstances of the case the Court of Second Appeal was entitled to entertain an appeal on the question of costs;

(2) that the vendee, having defeated his adversary on the only point in controversy between them, was entitled to recover his costs.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 10th November 1919, modifying that of the Junior Subordinate Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 8th May 1919.

Mr. D. C. Ralli for Mr. Kanwar Narain, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gobind Ram, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal which is from an appellate decree relates to costs only. It is contended by the learned Counsel for the respondent that no appeal lies. I am unable to accede to this contention. It is true that Courts have full discretion in the matter of awarding costs, but that discretion is not an arbitrary one and must be exercised in accordance with general principles. This rule has been enunciated in several judgments; Vide, inter alia, Daulat Ram v. Durga Prasad (1).

Now what are the relevant facts of this case? The plaintiff's right of pre-emption was admitted by the vendee, and the only point in controversy between them was whether the pre emptor should pre-empt the property on payment of Rs. 1,500 for which the sale had been effected. Now the District Judge, dissenting from the Court of first instance, holds that the whole of the price was paid before the Sub-Registrar and that there is no proof of the return of any part of the price. The learned Judge further finds that the market value of the property is not less than Rs. 1,500. He has accordingly accepted the appeal of the vendee as to the price, but has not set aside the decree of the first Court awarding costs against the vendee. Indeed the matter has been entirely overlooked by him, nor has he given any reason whatsoever why the vendee, when he defeated his adversary on the only point which was in issue before the Appellate Court, should not have recovered his costs in that Court.

In these circumstances I am of opinion that the Court of second appeal is entitled to entertain an appeal on the question of costs. I, therefore, allow the appeal, and direct the plaintiff to pay the costs of the vendee in all the Courts.

As regards cross-objections preferred by the plaintiff, it is sufficient to say that they challenge the finding of the District Judge on the question of price which finding, being one of fact, cannot be assailed. The cross-objections are, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 15 A. 333; A. W. N. (1893) 110.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 43 OF 1918.

November 25, 1918.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Ormond

MA DWE—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MA TIN LUN—RESPONDENT PLAINTIFF

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Joint and separate property—Obligation incurred during marriage but discharged after death of husband, whether can be debited to joint account—Gift of separate property by one party during marriage—Property inherited during marriage—Profits, division of, rule of—Nissayo and nissito, rule of, applicability of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXVI, r. 14 (2)—Commissioner, report of—Objection not taken before trial Court, whether can be taken in appeal.

In deciding what is joint property under Burmese Buddhist Law, all payments of money the obligation for which was undertaken during coverture must be debited to the joint account, even though the actual payment was made by the survivor after the death of the other party to the marriage. [p. 973, col. 2.]

A gift of the separate property of one of the parties to a marriage, even though the name of the other party is joined as donor, must be held to be made out of the separate property of the party to whom the property belongs. [p. 974, col. 1.]

Profits of property inherited by either of the parties to a marriage during coverture are to be divided equally between the parties, and the same rule applies to the profits of the separate property brought by either party to the marriage. [p. 975, col 2.]

The rule of nissayo and nissito does not apply to the profits during coverture of the separate property of either of the parties. [p. 976, col. 1.]

The proper time for an aggrieved party to object to the findings of a Commissioner is when the parties are called upon to state their objections for the consideration of the trial Court, and if either party fails without sufficient cause to state his objections, he cannot be heard on those points in the Appellate Court. [p. 795, col. 1.]

Mr. Ginwala, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Giles and Ormiston, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

TWOMEY, C. J.—The plaintiff respondent Ma Tin Lun jointly with her brother Maung Ba Hla obtained a decree in First Civil Appeal No. 122 of 1911 of this Court against the defendant-appellant Ma Dwe, their step mother, for an eighth share in the joint property or lettetpwa of the marriage of Ma Dwe and Po Aung, who was father of the plaintiffs. Subsequently the second plaintiff Maung Ba Hla died, and the surviving plaintiff Ma Tin Lun is admittedly entitled to the whole of the one-eighth share decreed in favour of herself and her brother. The case was remanded to the District Court which was directed to decide the remaining issues viz.—to ascertain the lettetpwa properties of the marriage, and to decide the amount to which the plaintiffs were entitled under the decree. The District Court thereupon referred the case to a Commissioner to take accounts, and after considering the Commissioner's report awarded Ma Tin Lun a decree for Rs. 39,592-13 minus plaintiff's one-eighth share of the aggregate costs of the suit. The defendant Ma Dwe appeals against this decree on various grounds of fact and of law.

In calculating the amount of the lettetpwa the Court deducted in Ma Dwe's favour all the sums which were held to have been expended by her and her husband Po Aung jointly during the period of coverture on charities and works of merit, and three of Ma Dwe's objections to the District Court's decree relate to large items of expenditure of this class. These three items are: (1) a sum of Rs. 10,000 spent on gilding a Zaungdan or portico at the northern entrance to the Shwe Dagon Pagoda, (2) a sum of Rs. 3,000 spent on building a Zayat at the Konan Kyaung in Pazundaung, and (3) alleged gifts of 400 acres of land valued at Rs. 40,000 for religious purposes.

It was held by the Commissioner who took accounts that the expenditure on gilding the Zaungdan was incurred in Maung Po Aung's lifetime, and, therefore, this sum of Rs. 10,000 should be deducted from the total amount of the lettetpwa. The District Court, however, held that the expenditure of this sum took place after Po Aung had died and that, therefore, it should not debited to lettetpwa, being a work of merit undertaken by Ma Dwe on her own account. The contract for building the Zaungdan was given in October 1904 and according to Saya Hnya, the builder, the work took more than one year and seven months to build. So that it could not have been finished before the end of May 1906. U Po Aung died in June 1905. The gilding was not done by Saya Hnya, but by another contractor U Kaung. U Kaung says that Po Aung was alive when the work was finished. Ma Dwe herself states that Po Aung was alive when the gilding was done, but she admits that gilding is not done during the rains, and, therefore, even assuming that the actual building was completed as early as June 1906, it seems unlikely that the gilding which took from four to six months was completed before Po Aung's death on the first of November; but in order to charge this expenditure to the lettetpwa account it is not necessary that the actual gilding should be completed during coverture. It would be sufficient if the obligation was entered into by the husband and wife jointly. Before the Commissioner it was apparently contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the contract was not made until the middle of 1263, i. e., about October 1901. Mr. Ormiston urged that the contract must have been made when Po Aung was "dead or just about to die." But even if the contract for the work had been entered into before he died, that would be a sufficient reason for charging the whole expenditure of the gilding to the lettetpwa account. As regards this item of Rs. 10,000, therefore, I would dissent from the finding of the District Judge, and restore that of the Commissioner debiting this amount to the lettetpwa.

The Zayat at the Konan Kyaung was admittedly begun after the gilding of the Shwe Dagon Zaungdan had been completed. I think, therefore, that there can be no doubt that the District Court was right in deciding that the expenditure of Rs. 3,000 on the Zayat was incurred after Po Aung's death, and could not properly be charged against the lettetpwa account.

Next as to the alleged gifts of land for religious merit the Commissioner found that an area of 100 acres was given by Ma Dwe for the upkeep of a Zaungdan at Pegu and that this gift was made in the lifetime of her husband U Po Aung. The Commissioner considered that the position was the same as if the payin land had been purchased from Ma Dwe by the joint estate for the purpose of a joint gift. As to the remaining 300 acres the Commissioner found that the gift was made after Po Aung's death and that the value of these 300 acres should, therefore, not be charged against the lettetpwa. The District Court confirmed the finding of the Commissioner in disallowing the 300 acres gift, but it disallowed also the alleged gift of 100 acres on the ground that the land still remained Ma Dwe's payin property at the time of the gift, and, therefore, the value of it could not be debited to the lettetpwa account. The whole of the 400 acres alleged to have been a gift for religious purposes was Ma Dwe's atet or payin property, and even if she had during the period of coverture with Po Aung disposed of these lands by a valid gift, the value of the land could not be debited to the lettetpwa account. The mere fact that Po Aung's name was joined with that of his wife Ma Dwe in the invitation Exhibit 4 relating to the 100 acres gave Maung Po Aung no interest in the lands. It merely indicated that Ma Dwe wished her husband to share in the merit which she hoped to acquire as the reward of her piety. But so far as the evidence shows, there was no outright gift either of the 100 acres or the 300 acres. Exhibit 4 is a rhymed invitation to a dedication ceremony of certain religious buildings erected by Ma Dwe and her husband Po Aung in 1263 B. E. The ceremony was to be held on the 12th waxing Nadaw 1263 (22nd December 1901) at the Shwemawdaw Pagoda, Pegu, and it mentions inter alia a perpetual gift of 100 acres of paddy land for the upkeep of the Pagoda. Speaking of this ceremony Ma Dwe herself states in her evidence:—"I made gifts to the people in general. The 100 acres of paddy land for the upkeep of the Zaungdan at the Shwemawdaw Pagoda were not given to any one; but I kept them in my possession, and the rents of these 100 acres I have set aside for repairs to the Zaungdan." It appears that an address was read out at the ceremony and in that address some mention was made of the gift of land for the upkeep of the Zaungdan. Ma Dwe never parted with possession of these lands; she has been collecting the rents ever since, though she states that after deducting taxes she made over the balance of income from the lands to certain Pongyis, etc. Seeing that no donee was indicated, that no specific lands were mentioned, that Ma Dwe retained the title deeds in her possession, and has continued to deal with the lands in every respect as if they belonged to her, it cannot be held that there was an outright gift of the 100 acres in 1263. Ma Dwe's action at the dedication ceremony at most amounted to an undertaking (given not to any one in particular, but to the public generally) that she would devote the produce of 100 acres of her lands to the upkeep of the Zaungdan at the Shwemawdaw Pagoda. Exhibit 8 is an invitation to a similar ceremony in Hnaung Tagu 1269 (April 1908) i. e., eighteen months after Po Aung's death. It was at this ceremony that the gift of 300 acres (of unspecified land) to Pongyis is alleged to have been made. There are clearly no grounds for charging the value of this land against the lettetpwa account. I think, therefore, we must agree with the District Judge in refusing to make any deduction from the lettetpwa account in respect of lands alleged to have been given for religious purposes.

The parties arrived at an agreement as to the total amount of the rents received from Ma Dwe's payin property during the coverture and as to the amount of revenue paid to Government on this property (statement No. 4). They also agreed as to the amount of rents received from immoveable properties purchased during coverture and as to the revenue paid to Government on these properties (statement No. 6). But in both cases Ma Dwe claimed before the Commissioner that certain other expenses of collection should be deducted in her favour. In the case of statement No. 4 she claimed that these expenses amounted to Rs, 28,419 12-0 and in the case of statement No. 6 to Rs. 16,941. The Commissioner in both cases refused to allow these alleged extra expenses to be deducted. He held that Ma Dwe had failed to prove that any special expenses of collection were incurred over and above the wages (which the Commissioner allowed) of the men actually engaged in collecting the rents. We are asked to take these claims of Rs. 28,419-12-0 and Rs. 16,941 into consideration and to allow them. But when the Commissioner's report was before the District Court, the defendant Ma Dwe raised no objection whatever to the Commissioner's adverse findings with respect to these claims, although the fullest opportunity was given to both parties to file objections to the Commissioner's findings. it was certainaly Ma Dwe's duty if she persisted in her claims as to extra expenses of collection, to object specifically in the District Court to the Commissioner's adverse finding with respect to these claims. Mr. Ginvala argues that although he made no objection in the District Court, he is at liberty to re open the matter before us in appeal. This is tantamount to saying that a party is entitled to ignore altogather the proceedings in the District Court, if the result is unfavourable to him, and to challenge any of the Commissioner's findings for the first time in appeal from the District Court's decree. This can hardly be the intention of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to commissions to examine accounts. It is true that the rules in Order XXVI do not require the parties to file objections before a fixed date, and it has been held by the Calcutta High Court in R. M. S. Chetty v. Mahomed Essa Saheb (1) that the Appellate Court's duty is commensurate with that of the trial Court; and if it is dissatisfied with the proceedings in whole or in part it is incumbent on it to do what the lower Court ought to have done, namely, set them aside either wholly or partially, and send the matter back for such further enquiry as may be necessary. But as explained by Hill, J., in that case, the duty cast upon the trial Court (viz. to satisfy itself that the Commissioner's proceedings are fair and in accordance with law) is in practice modified to this extent, that it is usual to confine the examination to those parts of the Commissioner's report to which exception has been taken by the parties. This is an obvious and well-recognized limitation and it applies not only to the examination of the proceedings by the trial Court, but also to the subsequent examination, if any, by the Appellate Court. The proper time for an aggrieved party to object to the findings of the Commissioner is clearly when the parties are called upon to state their objections for the consideration of the trial Court, and if either party fails without sufficient cause to state his objections, then he cannot be heard on those points in the Appellate Court.

The only other question raised at the hearing of the appeal was whether the whole of the profits of Ma Dwe's payin property could be treated as lettetpwa or whether only a part of these profits should be treated as lettetpwa, the remainder being Ma Dwe's payin. Mr. Ginwala bases his argument on the assumption that if Ma Dwe and Po Aung had effected a divorce by mutual consent, the profits of Ma Dwe's payin property received during coverture would have been divided between them in the proportion of one-third and two-thirds, one third going to Po Aung as the defendant (nissito), and two-thirds to Ma Dwe as the party "by dependence on whom" the property was obtained (nissayo). But this assumption is incorrect The subject of the division of profits on divorce was fully examined in the case of Mi Myin v. Nga Twe (2). It is there pointed out that in the case of property inherited by one spouse during coverture, the partition of the profits made during coverture should be equal, and the same rule applies to the profits of lands brought by either spouse to the marriage, i.e., atet or payin property. The husband and wife live together and presumably manage their concerns together, and even where the profits arise from the separate property of the one, the other would either be in charge of the property, or would be managing the domestic affairs of the family, or in the case of the wife, would be ministering to the other's domestic comfort, and would give him leisure to attend to his outdoor business. See Maung Shue Ngon v. Mi Min Dwe (3). Though property may have come from either the side of the husband or the wife, they would be dealing with it together, or their joint labours would be such as to justify the profits being regarded as acquired equally by both. It is clear from these considerations that the relation of nissayo and nissito does not exist with respect to the profits during coverture of the payin property of either spouse. Ma Dwe in her evidence states that Po Aung took no part in the collection of the rents, and that she managed everything concerning her property. But this statement is plainly incredible. There is no reason to suppose that Po Aung was an exceptional husband in this respect, and that he did not take a share in the management of his wife's property just as any other Burmese husband would. But even if the rule as to nissayo and nissito did apply to the profits of the payin property, and the division in case of divorce should therefore be unequal, it does not follow that the step child Ma Tin Lun in this case should get less than one-eighth of the whole profits. She is entitled to one-eighth of the whole profits because they are wholly lettetpwa.

(1) 5 C. W. N. 692.

(2) U. B. R. (1904—1906), Buddhist Law, Divorce p. 19.

The only change, therefore, which I would make in the account drawn up by the District Court is to add to the expenditure side the sum of Rs. 10,000 spent on gilding the Zaungdan at the Shwae Davon Pagoda. The effect of this alteration is to reduce the net value of the lettetpwa property from Rs. 3,16,742 9 0 to Rs. 3,06,742 9 0 and the plaintiff's one eighth share will be reduced proportionately. The appellant is entitled to her costs on the amount by which she succeeded in this Court, namely one-eighth of Rs. 10,000 and will recover costs in the proportion of Rs. 1,250 to the total value of the appeal.

ORMOND, J.—I concur.

Appeal allowed in part.

(3) S. J. 110.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER No. 31 OF 1918

AND

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 629 OF 1918.

March 16, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

ARUMUGAM PILLAY—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

KRISHNASAWAMI NAIDU AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS NOS. 1 AND 5 AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF RESPONDENT NO. 2 RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 3—Arrangement between parties before decree to treat decree as in part inexecutable, enforceability of.

An arrangement between the parties to a suit made before decree to treat the decree as in part inexecutable cannot be given effect to by Courts.

Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar, 37 Ind. Cas. 836: 40 M. 233: 21 M. L. T. 24; 5 L. W. 132; (1917) M. W. N. 44; 32 M. L. J. 13, explained.

Rama Ayyan v. Sreenivasa Pattar, 19 M. 230; 5 M. L. J. 218; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 865, not approved.

Appeal against the decree of the District Court, Madura, in Appeal Suit No. 106 of 1917, preferred against the order, dated the 13th February 1917, of the Court of the District Munsif, Dindigul, in Execution Appeal No. 801 of 1916, in Execution Petition No. 860 of 1915, in Original Suit No. 255 of 1912.

Petition, under section 115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the decree of the District Court, Madura, in Appeal Suit No. 106 of 1917, preferred against the order of the Court of the District Munsif, Dindigul, in E. A. No. 801 of 1916, in E. P. No. 260 of 1915, in Original Suit No. 255 of 1912.

Mr. K. S. Jayarama Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. S. Ganapathy Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

OLDFIELD, J.—On the question whether effect has been wrongly refused to the arrangement made before decree, I observe that Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar (1) dealt with an arrangement to postpone execution, not with one, such as is pleaded here, for the decree being treated as in part inexecutable. An arrangement of the latter description has received effect in this Court, as far as appears from authorised reports, only in one case, Rama Ayyan v. Sreenivasa Pattar (2), the decision of a single Judge; and I do not think that the decision in Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar (1) obliges us to extend the principle to the extent required by appellant's contention.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 836; 40 M. 233; 21 M. L. T. 24; 5 L. W. 132; (1917) M. W. N. 44; 32 M. L. J. 13.

The other objection to the sale is that it was obtained and carried through by a person having no authority from the decree-holder in the matter. The objection is pressed here in the shape of a contention that the whole proceedings from and including the final decree were taken without notice going to appellant or the judgment-debtor and that they, therefore, were vitiated by fraud and cannot be sustained. But on the assumption, which at present rests on mere assertion, that the purchaser was a party to that fraud, there is still the fact that the absence of notice to appellant or the debtor was never distinctly alleged or, so far as appears, relied on in the lower Courts or in the grounds of appeal here. In fact, so far as we are able to test this case, by reference to the final decree, we observe that the mention in it of the judgment-debtor as absent is ground for a presumption that he had had notice and disregarded it, and then his remedy was by proceedings to have that decree set aside. This objection also to the lower Appellate Court's decision is, therefore, untenable.

The appeal against appellate order is dismissed with costs. The civil revision petition is dismissed; no order as to costs.

SESHAGIRI AIYAR, J.—I agree in the main with the observations of my learned brother in the judgment just now delivered. In Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar (1) I rested my conclusion on the theory of stare decisis. It is argued before us by Mr. Jayarama Aiyar that it follows from my judgment in that case that all the cases referred to therein as supporting the theory of stare decisis must be taken to have been accepted by me as correct. I do not think this suggestion is well founded. The course of decisions was referred to for the general proposition that procedure arrangements are within the language of section 47. I did not intend to accept as correct every one of the decisions I quoted for that purpose. On the other hand I want to make it clear that the decision in Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar (1) should not, in my opinion, be applied to what are termed cognate cases. Further I am clear that an attack against the decree as having been obtained by fraud by one of the parties thereto is not within the principle of Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar (1).

I agree, therefore, with my learned brother that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed;
Revision petition dismissed.

(2) 19 M. 230; 5 M. L. J. 218; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s) 865.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 22 OF 1919-20.

April 30, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Hopkins, S. M., and Mr. Porter, J. M.

Chaudhri GAURI SHANKAR—APPELLANT

versus

MEWA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Ejectment, suit for—Lease, expiry of—Plaintiff not relying on lease—Cause of action, change of.

A suit for ejectment was contested on the ground that the defendant had acquired occupancy rights. To rebut this the plaintiff produced a lease to cover a period of 8 years. Defendant objected in appeal that the lease should have been made the basis of the suit and that the suit ought to have been under section 58 of the Agra Tenancy Act. The objection was allowed and the suit dismissed on the ground that plaintiff ought not to have been allowed to change his cause of action. In second appeal:

Held, that the plaintiff had not changed his cause of action and that he was not bound to base his claim on the lease. [p 978, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the order of the Commissioner, Allahabad Division, dated the 8th of September 1919, in the case of ejectment.

JUDGMENT.

HOPKINS, S. M.—(April 21, 1920.)—The appellant sued to eject the respondents as non-occupancy tenants. They resisted the suit on the ground that they had acquired occupancy rights. The appellant then filed a registered lease covering the eight years 1316—1323 F. in order to rebut the claim of occupancy rights. The respondents objected that this lease, if it was relied upon, ought to have been made the basis of the suit and that the suit ought to have been laid under section 58 (b) of the Tenancy Act. The Commissioner has accepted this objection and has dismissed the appellants' suit on the ground that they ought not to have been allowed to change their cause of action.

I cannot see that the appellant has changed his cause of action at all. The land was held by the respondents both before and after the period of the 8 years' lease. The tenancy was not initiated by that lease, so that after its termination it cannot be said that the respondents must necessarily be holding over. The appellant did not produce the lease as his cause of action but as showing that the period covered by it could not be included in the calculation of the period for the acquisition of occupancy rights under section 11 (a) of the Tenancy Act. When the period of the lease came to an end, the tenancy reverted to the conditions obtaining before the lease was granted, that is, it became a tenancy from year to year. In the present case the lease expired at the end of 1323 F. and the suit was not brought until the beginning of 1326 F. I cannot see that the appellant was in any way bound to base his cause of action on a lease which had expired more than two years previously, and no authority is cited in the support of this contention.

As regards the allegation of surprise the lease was filed on the date on which issues were fixed on 28th November 1918. The respondents objected on 10th January 1919. A fresh issue was struck on 14th February 1919. Evidence was taken on 4th March 1919 and the case was decided on 5th April 1919. It is clear that the respondents had very ample time within which to raise any defence they wished.

It is, however, contended that they have been deprived of the privilege given by section 67 of the Tenancy Act. They did not claim this in that Court. I cannot see that the claim was barred because the suit was one under section 58 (a) : section 58 (b) is not specified in section 67. It is, however, just possible that they have been misled on this point and I would give them an opportunity of substantiating the plea.

I would remand the suit to the Court of the Assistant Collector for a trial of the issue: "Are the defendants entitled to the benefit of section 67 of the Tenancy Act ?" The Commissioner should return the finding with his own opinion within two months. Ten days allowed for objections. A fresh date will not necessarily be fixed.

PORTER, J. M.—I agree to the order proposed.

Suit remanded.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 44 OF 1919.

May 10, 1920.

Present:—Sir Daniel Twomey, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Robinson.

AH CHOY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

TRADING COMPANY—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 79, 83, 86, 118—C. I. F. contract—Sale of goods—Property in goods, when passes—Buyer, right of, to reject goods—Remedy in case of shortage or deterioration.

Under a C. I. F. contract property in the goods sold passes at the time of shipment, but such passing is subject to the buyer's right to reject the goods if after inspection they are found to be not goods in accordance with the contract; this, however, refers to the goods at the time of shipment and not to any shortage or deterioration caused on the voyage for which the buyer's remedy lies in the policy of insurance. [p. 980, col. 1.]

Section 86 of the Contract Act does not preclude a buyer from agreeing to take the risk of loss or damage before the property in the goods passes to him. On tender of the effective shipping documents the property in the goods passes to the buyer, but even if this were not so, a contract, the terms of which imply that the goods are at the buyer's risk from the time of the shipment, is not invalid. [p. 980, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Court, Amherst, in Civil Suit No. 100 of 1915.

AH CHOY v. TRADING COMPANY.

Mr. Giles, for the Appellant.

Mr. Lentaigne, (Sr.) for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

TWOMEY, C. J.—The defendant-respondent Company contracted to supply the plaintiff Ah Choy with 750 tons Java hard molasses to be shipped C. I. F. from Java to Moulmein. It is alleged that the goods on arrival at Moulmein were found to be short in weight and in a liquified and otherwise damaged condition and that the plaintiff thereby suffered loss which he estimates at Rs. 14,708 7 0. It appears that the loss and the deterioration occurred when the molasses were lying on the wharf at Rangoon awaiting transhipment to Moulmein. The plaintiff took over the goods but brought this suit against defendant Company for damages.

The defendants pleaded that the goods as shipped at Java were of contract quality and weight and that according to the terms of the contract they are not responsible for loss or deterioration after shipment. The suit was dismissed by the District Court of Amherst, the learned Judge holding that according to the usual terms of a C. I. F. contract the risk is with the buyer from the time of shipment. The plaintiff-appellant admits that he is unable to prove that the goods as shipped at Java were not of contract quality and amount.

The only ground argued before us in the plaintiff's appeal is that under a C. I. F. contract the property in the goods does not pass to the buyer until he has had an opportunity of examining the goods on arrival. The right of the buyer to examine the goods on arrival and reject them if not in conformity with the contract is well settled law, vide Biddell Brothers v. E Clemens Horst Co. (1). And it is argued that the property in the goods cannot yet have passed to him, for how could he exercise a right of rejection with respect to his own goods? The judgments of the trial Court (Hamilton, J.), the Court of Appeal and the House of Lords in the case above cited show that this argument cannot prevail. Hamilton, J., pointed out that the terms of a C. I. F. contract constitute an agreement that the delivery of the goods, provided they are in conformity with the contract, shall be delivery at the port of shipment and the delivery is completed by the tender of the documents, i e, bill of lading, invoice and insurance policy, to the buyer. In the Court of Appeal, Farwell, L. J., said that the delivery commences on shipment and the property passes subject to certain qualifications when the goods are shipped. Kennedy, L. J., explained that by the shipment the goods are appropriated by the vendor to the fulfilment of the contract and the delivery of the goods to the carrier for transmission to the buyer is prima facie deemed to be a delivery of the goods to the purchaser under section 32, Sale of Goods Act (cf. section 91, Indian Contract Act). The goods are at the risk of the buyer and the property in the goods has passed to him either conditionally or unconditionally. In the case of goods afloat the bill of lading in law and fact represents the goods and possession of the bill of lading places the goods at the disposal of the purchaser. He cited L. J. Bowen's statement of the law in another case that the bill of lading is the symbol of physical delivery and the property in the goods passes by endorsement and delivery of the bill of lading, whenever it is the intention of the parties that the property should pass, just as under similar circumstances the property should pass by the actual delivery of the goods. The bill of lading carries full ownership of the goods. According to Kennedy, L. J., a purchaser could not be heard to say: "I will not pay because I cannot have delivery of and an examination of the goods." The House of Lords, approving of the exposition of the law by Hamilton, J., said:—"Delivery of the bill of lading when the goods are at sea can be treated as delivery of the goods themselves," this law being so old that they considered it quite unnecessary to refer to an authority for it. In Arnhold Karberg & Co. v. Blythe Green Jourdain & Co. (2) it was laid down by the Court of Appeal that in C. I. F. contracts the documents tendered by the sellers must be valid and effective documents at the date of tender, for instance a bill of lading is no longer an effective document if the contract of affreightment contained in it has been dissolved by the outbreak of war. But no such question arises in the present case in which the buyer actually took physical delivery of the goods on their arrival at Moulmein.

(1) (1911) 1 K. B. 214; 16 Com. Cas. 12, 13 on appeal (1911) 1 K. B. 934; 16 Com. Cas. 197, reversed in (1912) A. C. 18; 81 L. J. K. B. 42; 105 L. T. 563; 17 Com. Cas. 55; 12 Asp. M. C. 80; 56 S. J. 50; 28 T. L. R. 42.

(2) (1916) 21 Com. Cas. 174; 1 K. B. 495; 114 L. T. 152; 13 Asp. M. C. 235; 60 S. J. 156; 32 T. L. R. 186.

According to the English authorities it seems clear that under a C. I. F. contract the property in the goods passes at the time of shipment, the passing of the property being, however, subject to the buyer's right to reject the goods after inspection if they are found to be not goods in accordance with the contract. In the words of Kennedy, L. J., "no one suggests that the buyers, if they pay against documents, become thereby precluded from rejecting the goods if, on examination after their arrival, they are found to be not goods in accordance with the contract, or from recovering damages for breach of contract if they prefer that course." But this plainly refers to the condition of the goods at the time of shipment and not to any shortage or deterioration caused on the voyage, for which the buyer's remedy lies in his policy of insurance.

Mr. Giles contends that whatever the English Law may be, we are bound by the express terms of the Indian Contract Act, and he relies on section 79 under which transfer of ownership of unascertained goods cannot take place till the goods sold are ascertained, section 83 by which the appropriation of goods for the purpose of the agreement requires the assent of the buyer, section 86 under which the buyer has to bear the loss when the goods become his property and section 118 which provides the buyer's remedy on breach of warranty in respect of goods which were not ascertained at the time of the contract. As regards section 79 it is clear that the goods are ascertained by being appropriated to the buyer at the time of shipment, delivery to the shipping company being delivery to the buyer under section 91. With respect to section 86 it appears that by the ordinary terms of the C. I. F. contract property in the goods passes to the buyer by tender of the shipping documents, but it passes subject to the condition that the buyer has the right of examination and rejection on actual arrival of the goods if they are not in accordance with the contract. There was admittedly no breach of this condition in the present case.

I would hold, therefore, that on tender of effective shipping documents the property in the goods passes to the buyer under C. I. F. contracts. If we assume that the property in the goods did not pass till then, the terms of the contract imply that the goods are at the buyer's risk from the time of shipment and it does no appear to me such a contract is invalid. Section 85 of the Contract Act would not preclude a buyer from agreeing to take the risk of loss or damage before the property in the goods passes to him. It is plain that all risk is taken by the buyer in C. I. F. contracts from the time of shipment, the buyer relying for protection on the insurance policy.

ROBINSON, J.—I concur.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

SECOND APPEAL No. 26 OF 1919-20.

May 2, 1920.

Present :—Mr. Hopkins, S. M., and Mr. Porter, J. M.

Lala KISHORI SARAN—APPELLANT

versus

RAMESHWAR—RESPONDENT.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 34—Grove brought under cultivation—Grove-holder, status of—Landlord, right of, to eject.

When grove land is brought under cultivation, the holder thereof loses his rights and is liable to be treated by the land-holder as a tenant under section 34, Agra Tenancy Act, and to be ejected. [p. 981, col. 1]

Second appeal from the order of the Commissioner, Allahabad Division, dated the 19th of September 1919, in the case of ejectment.

JUDGMENT.

HOPKINS, S. M.—(April 21, 1920)—The appellant brought this suit to eject the respondent as a tenant from year to year without payment of rent. The respondent contested the suit on the ground that the land was grove, and this was the sole issue raised in the two lower Courts. The Commissioner has dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaint as it stands does not disclose any cause of action, that the appellant did not describe the respondent as holding without his permission and that a person holding land without payment of rent with the consent of the land-holder is a rent-free holding and can only be sued under Chapter X of the Tenancy Act.

The Commissioner is, in my opinion, wrong in setting up for the respondent a plea which he did not raise himself. He did not claim to be a rent free holder. When, as in this case, a grove-holder loses his right by the grove being brought under cultivation, the land holder is entitled to treat him as a tenant under section 34 and eject him by suit: Babu Raman Das v. Purshottam Singh (1). The plaint as worded is sufficient to cover a suit of this nature, and no objection has been raised to it on the ground which the Commissioner takes.

I would accept the appeal with costs and restore the order of the Assistant Collector. This order is passed ex parte, the respondent not having appeared.

PORTER, J. M.—I agree with the proposed order.

Appeal accepted.

(1) S. D. No. 14 of 1912.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 44 OF 1920.
March 1, 1920.
Present:—Mr. Justice Newbould.
AMBICA CHARN KHASKEL—AUCTION-PURCHASER—PETITIONER
versus
ESMAIL AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Execution of decree—Sale—Application to set aside sale, dismissal of—Application to set aside dismissal—Appeal, whether lies.

An order rejecting an application to set aside an order dismissing for default an application to set aside an auction sale, is not appealable.

Charu Chandra Ghosh v. Chandi Charan Roy Chowdhury, 27 Ind. Cas. 492; 19 C. W. N. 25, followed.

Rule against the order of the Sub Judge, 2nd Court, Backarganj, in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 127 of 1919.

Babu Suresh Chandra Talukdar, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—The opposite party applied to set aside an auction sale. That application was dismissed in default. He then applied to set aside the order of dismissal. The latter application was also rejected. He then appealed to the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Bakergunge. He decreed the appeal and ordered a re-hearing of the case arising out of the application to set aside the auction sale. It is clear that the decisions of this Court support the contention of the petitioner that no appeal lay. The case of Charu Chandra Ghosh v. Chandi Charan Roy Chowdhury (1), clearly supports this proposition. The learned Subordinate Judge relies on the case of Bhuban Behari Nag Mazumdar v. Dhirendra Nath Banerjee (2). But in that case to which I was party, although we expressed some doubt as to the correctness of the previous decisions, we held that the view that no appeal lay in such a case had been taken in a series of cases ending with the case which I have just cited. Sitting alone I am bound to follow the previous decisions of the Divisional Benches and could not, even if I would, make a reference to the Full Bench on this point.

I accordingly make this Rule absolute and set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge allowing the application of the opposite party and directing a re hearing of the case.

Rule made absolute.

(1) 27 Ind. Cas. 492; 19 C. W. N. 25.
(2) 33 Ind. Cas. 581; 20 C. W. N. 1203.

JANARDAN MISSIR v. BRIJNANDAN SINGH.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 82 OF 1920.

May 6, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das.

JANARDAN MISSIR—PETITIONER

versus

BRIJNANDAN SINGH—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Revision—Finding not based on evidence—Material irregularity.

It is the duty of a Court to found its decision upon a consideration of the evidence adduced before it, and where it omits to do so but founds its decision on a consideration that has no basis, it acts in the exercise of its jurisdiction with material irregularity, and its decision is liable to be set aside under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 983, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the 2nd Munsif, Darbhanga.

Messrs. P. C. Manuk, S. C. Mitter and J. N. Moitra, for the Petitioner.

Mr. B. N. Mitter, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This application is directed against an order passed by the learned Munsif, 2nd Court, of Darbhanga, under Order XXI, rule 98, of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the 16th of March 1920. It appears that the opposite party instituted a suit and recovered a decree against two persons of the names of Jieneh and Alik Missers in respect of Survey Khesra Plot No. 490. The petitioner, who claims to have an interest in Survey Plot No 496, was not made a party to the litigation. In that suit the defendants in the written statement specifically raised the point that the suit was bad for non-joinder of parties. On the pleadings of the parties the Court framed an issue as to whether the suit was bad for non-joinder of parties. The first witness examined on behalf of the defendants was Jiwachh Jha, who stated that the petitioner had an interest in the land that was in dispute in that litigation. That evidence was objected to by the plaintiff in that suit, with the result that the Court held that evidence as to the title of the petitioner was irrelevant and he ruled out all evidence relating to the interest possessed by the petitioner in the land in dispute.

As I have stated, the opposite party recovered a decree against the defendants in the action and thereupon they took out execution as against the defendants in the action, and in the execution case the Amin went to the locality to give delivery of possession to the decree-holder, when he was resisted by the petitioner. This took place on the 24th September 1919. It appears that another attempt was made by the decree-holder sometime in December to get actual delivery of possession of the properties. He was again resisted by the petitioner. Thereupon on the 8th December 1919 the opposite party presented their application under Order XXI, rule 97, before the learned Munsif.

Before the learned Munsif the parties went into evidence on the question of possession. The petitioner adduced evidence to show that he claimed in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account. Undoubtedly that was a matter which the learned Munsif was bound to inquire into. In his order, however, the learned Munsif does not discuss the evidence that was adduced at all. He decides in favour of the opposite party on one consideration and on one consideration alone. The grounds for his decision may be stated in his own words. They are as follows:—"When they", namely, the plaintiffs in the title suit, the opposite party in the matter before me, "brought the title suit for recovery of possession of the disputed land, the judgment-debtors did not raise that point that the applicant was also interested in it. The case was fought out tooth and nail with the care and attention engendered by bitterness of spirit between the parties. It is said that the omission of the judgment-debtors is not binding upon the opposite party. Certainly not. But it is a circumstance which induces the Court to accept the applicants' contention that the opposite party had never had any concern with the land and that he has been set up by the judgment debtors to prop a failing cause. I accordingly allow the application with costs." I have no doubt at all in my mind that he based his decision on one fact alone and that is that the judgment-debtors did not raise the point that the applicant was also interested in the property. Now, if there was any foundation for this contention in fact, then I would have no power to interfere with the order under section 115. But as I have stated already, the judgment-debtors did specifically raise the point in the written statement that the suit was bad for non-joinder of parties. The first witness called by them did say that the petitioner was interested in the property as a co-parcener or as a co-owner with them, and they were prepared to adduce further evidence on the point if only they were permitted to do so. If that be so, can it be said that the Court has acted with jurisdiction in deciding this case in favour of the opposite party on a ground that is wholly unsustainable? In my opinion in exercising his jurisdiction, he acted with material irregularity. He ought to have founded his decision on the evidence that was adduced before him and not on a consideration that had no basis at all. I accordingly allow this application and set aside the order passed by the learned Munsif on the 16th March 1920. The petitioner is entitled to his costs, which I assess at two gold mohurs. The Munsif will now dispose of the application on the materials before him.

Application accepted;
Case remanded.

COURT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE, UNITED PROVINCES.

SECOND APPEAL No. 95 OF 1918-19.
April 17, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Hopkins, S. M., and Mr. Porter, J. M.

Musammat ULFAT—APPELLANT
versus Musammat BARKAT-UN-NISA——RESPONDENT.

Res judicata—Law, wrong application of, whether arrests rule of res judicata.

The fact that in a previous suit the law was wrongly applied to a particular state of facts, does not prevent the operation of the rule of res judicata in a subsequent suit where these facts come into issue therein.

Second appeal from the order of the Commissioner, Agra Division, dated the 2nd of June 1919, in the case of ejectment.

JUDGMENT.

PORTER, J. M.—(April 2, 1920.)—I would accept without hesitation the finding now recorded that Najib Khan, whose occupancy holding this was, died before 1st January 1902, while Act XII of 1881 was in force. This being so, his holding devolved at the time of his death on his son, who died about 1903 at the age of nine, and on his wife and daughter, the defendant-appellants.

A suit was brought to eject them in 1909, and was dismissed on the ground that the wife was an occupancy tenant, although the daughter, her co-tenant, was a non-occupancy tenant.

The Commissioner refused to accept this decision as res judicata on the ground that it was bad in law. He apparently overlooked the fact that the tenancy devolved under Act XII.

Moreover, if the law has been applied to a particular state of facts, and these facts come to issue in another suit, the judgment on these facts, whether it rightly or wrongly applied the law, is res judicata [Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civil Procedure Code]. I would hold for the purpose of the present appeal that it is res judicata, that the wife is an occupancy tenant, and the suit to eject her and her daughter as non-occupancy tenants must, therefore, fail. I would decree the appeal with costs, restoring the order of the Assistant Collector dismissing the suit.

HOPKINS, S. M.—I agree.

Appeal decreed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 257 OF 1919.
March 12, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, KT., and Mr. Justice Sultan Ahmed.

GAYA SINGH AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS
versus
NAME SINGH AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. XLI, r. 27—Appellate Court, order by, directing evidence to be produced before it—Revision, whether competent.

If an Appellate Court makes a mistake in law in directing evidence to be tendered before it which it is not competent to receive in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, it commits an error of law, but that will not give the party aggrieved by the order the right to invoke the interference of the High Court under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge of Monghyr, dated 1st August 1919.

Mr. R. L. Dutt, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Ganesh Dutt Singh, for the Opposite Parties.

JUDGMENT.

MULLICK, J.—The plaintiffs sued the defendants for a money decree on the allegation that although the defendants had executed an usufructuary mortgage in respect of some property, the plaintiffs had been dispossessed from that property by the act of the defendants.

The first Court gave a decree against the defendants.

On appeal to the District Judge by the defendants the learned District Judge was of opinion that the mortgage bond should be proved by an attesting witness and though the plaintiffs had by inadvertence not called an attesting witness, he decided under Order XLI, rule 27, Civil Procedure Code, to take the evidence of such a witness himself.

The defendants thereupon came to this Court and obtained a Rule for the interference of the Court under section 115, Civil Procedure Code.

It is quite clear that there is no question of jurisdiction involved. Jurisdiction must be distinguished from power, and in this case the learned District Judge had full jurisdiction to hear the appeal. If he has made a mistake in law in directing evidence to be tendered before him which he was not competent to receive in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, he has committed an error of law, but that will not give the defendants the right to invoke the interference of this Court under section 115, Civil Procedure Code. The order is one which, in my opinion, cannot be revised under that section.

Whether the order itself is right or wrong, is a different matter. It does seem that prima facie the District Judge is not competent to call for evidence under Order XLI, rule 27, which the party, if he had been diligent, might have produced in the lower Court ; but we cannot express any opinion upon this point and the admissibility of the evidence, if and when taken, will have to be judged at the hearing of the appeal before the learned District Judge.

The defendants will be entitled to submit that the evidence, not being admissible under the provisions of the Code, should be expunged from the record in the hearing of the appeal.

The application is dismissed with costs. Hearing fee one gold mohur.

SULTAN AHMED, J.—I agree.

Application dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 30 OF 1919.

January 5, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Teunon and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

SADAK ALI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SAFAR ALI SUFANI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, rr. 23, 25, 27, 29—Case not decided on preliminary point—Remand, order of—Procedure.

Where a trial Court has decided a case not upon a preliminary point, but after taking all the evidence and trying all the issues, it is improper for an Appellate Court to remand the case for trial afresh under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In making an order under the rule, however, the Court cannot direct the omission of one of the essential issues in the case. If the Court is of opinion that a fresh local investigation should be made or that fresh evidence is necessary on any point, its order should be one under rules 25, 27 and 29, and not under rule 23, of Order XLI. [p. 985, col. 2; p 986, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court, Chittagong, dated the 2nd of October 1918, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Court, at Chittagong, dated the 25th of June 1917, and remanding the case to the first Court.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Roy (with him Babu Paresh Chandra Sen), for the Appellant.—The defendant is the appellant. The appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of possession on establishment of plaintiff's title thereto.

The first Court directed a local investigation and on the Commissioner's report dismissed the suit. On appeal the lower Appellate Court held that the report of the Commissiner being unsatisfactory, the case should be remanded and the whole case re-tried. Against that order of remand the present appeal is directed. The landlord settled with different tenants the same plot of land. In order to determine the identity of the plots claimed by the parties the first Court directed a local investigation. The learned Munsif duly considered the report of the Commissioner and dismissed the suit on the ground that the lands claimed by the plaintiff did not really belong to him at all. My submission is that the order of remand is wrong and not permissible in law. Refers to Bejoy Krishna Mukerjee v. Jibon Krishna Garguly (1). That case is exactly like the present one.

Babu Charu Chandra Sen (with him Babus Dhirendra Nath Bagchi and Monmohan Banerjee), for the Respondents.—My preliminary objection to the hearing of this appeal is that the case was not remanded under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code. The Appellate Court below did not set aside the finding of the first Court on the question of title. The first Court did not decide on a preliminary point. Hence no appeal lies to this Court. The Appellate Court has power to remand the case according to law. The lower Appellate Court sent back the case to have the lands located. It did not enter into the questions of limitation and estoppel. Under these circumstances I would ask your Lordships to dismiss the appeal for the ends of justice and uphold the order of remand.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Roy briefly replied.

JUDGMENT.

TEUNON, J.—This is an appeal against an order of remand made by the first Appellate Court. The suit out of which the appeal arises is one for recovery of possession on establishment of the plaintiff's title. The plaintiff's case was that of the lands in suit he had obtained a lease from the superior landlord in the year 1250 Maghi, the superior landlord being one Abdul Ali Malum. The case for the defence was, first, that the lands in dispute were not covered by the lease obtained by the plaintiff in 1250, and secondly that even if so included, that they have been previously leased out by the landlord to one Noor Ali and that, therefore, at the date of the plaintiff's lease the landlord had no right to lease out the lands in question. The first Court directed a local investigation, and after considering the report of the Commissioner thus appointed and the oral evidence adduced by the parties, came to the conclusion that the lands in suit were not included in the plaintiff's lease and further that they were included in the prior lease granted to Noor Ali. On these findings the first Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge apparently came to the conclusion that the local investigation made by the Commissioner and the report of the Commissioner were unsatisfactory. The main reason he gives for this conclusion appears to be that according to the report of the Commissioner the lands in dispute between the parties are to be located "in the middle of the sea." On his finding as to the nature of the Commissioner's investigation and report he set aside the decree made by the first Court and directed that a fresh local investigation should be held at the cost of the defendant-respondent. He further directed that the whole case should be re-tried. His order is thus one which purports to be made under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code. As such it is obviously an improper order for the first Court did not decide the case on any preliminary point, but having taken the whole of the evidence decided the case after trying all the issues. While directing a re-trial the learned Subordinate Judge further directed that the first portion of Issue No. 5, namely, whether the disputed lands were included in the plaintiff's lease, should be struck out. Having directed a de novo trial he was not competent at the same time to direct that one of the essential issues in the case should be omitted. If his order had been one under Order XLI, rule 25 or rules 27 and 28, it is true that when directing the trial of certain issues and the taking of additional evidence on certain points, he might himself come to the conclusion that the first part of Issue No. 5 was one to be decided in the plaintiff's favour. But any such finding we have been unable to trace in his judgment, which we regret to say we must characterise as extremely confused and indeed almost unintelligible.

(1) 46 Ind. Cas. 333; 27 C. L. J. 556.

On the whole we think the proper course to take in this matter is to set aside the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge and remand the appeal to be tried afresh by that learned Subordinate Judge's successor-in-office. If, when he hears the appeal, he comes to the conclusion that the local investigation made by the Commissioner and the Commissioner's report are unsatisfactory, it will be open to him in his discretion to direct a fresh local investigation, and if he thinks that further evidence on any point is necessary, it will be open to him also to direct the taking of such additional evidence. But if he finds any such order necessary, his order must be one drawn up in accordance with the provisions of Order XLI, rules 27, 28 and 29 and not in accordance with the provisions of Order XLI, rule 23.

Costs of this hearing will be costs in the case. The hearing fee is assessed at two gold mohurs.

BEACHCROFT, J.—I agree.

Case remanded.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FULL BENCH.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 82 OF 1919.

May 14, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir P. C. Banerji, KT., Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

ANUP SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

FATEH CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19—Mortgage—Redemption—Acknowledgment by mortgagee—Limitation—Burden of proof.

Where in a suit for the redemption of a mortgage the plaintiff relies upon an acknowledgment by the mortgagee to establish the subsistence of the mortgage, it is for him to prove that the acknowledgment was made before the expiry of the period of limitation and that he had a subsisting title at the date of the suit. [p. 987, col. 2; p. 992, col. 1; p. 990, col. 2.]

First appeal against the order of the Second Additional Subordinate Judge, Meerut, dated the 24th of April 1919.

Dr. Kailas Nath Katju, for the Appellant.

Mr. Peary Lal Banerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for redemption of a mortgage alleged to have been made some time between 1833 and 1839 by Albela and Lachhman in favour of Ganga Ram and Ram Dayal. It is stated that the property which is the subject matter of the suit was the subject of a mortgage, that the amount of the mortgage was Rs. 561-4 and that the mortgage was redeemable upon payment of the mortgage money in the month of Jeth of any year. The plaintiff is the purchaser of the equity of redemption from the successors-in-title of the original alleged mortgagors. The principal defendants, who are the representatives of the mortgagees, deny the fact of the mortgage and deny that the claim is within limitation. Undoubtedly it is for the plaintiff who comes into Court for possession of property by redemption of mortgage to prove two things, first, that a mortgage answering substantially to the description of the mortgage alleged in the plaint was created, and, secondly, that the mortgage was a subsisting mortgage when the suit was brought, i, e., that the plaintiff's claim was not time barred. The fact of the mortgage as alleged by the plaintiff has been found by the Court below, and there is ample evidence on the record to show that a mortgage of the property now in suit was made by the two alleged mortgagors in favour of Ganga Ram and Ram Dayal for a sum of Rs. 564 4 0. In the Khatauni which is to be found in the settlement record of 1833 and which is referred to by the Court below as the Khatauni of 1839, there is a specification of this particular mortgage. It is stated to be a mortgage made by Albela and Lachhman in favour of Ganga Ram and Ram Dayal. The property is mentioned, the amount of the mortgage is mentioned, and it is further mentioned that the mortgage is redeemable upon payment of the mortgage money in the month of Jeth of any year. A Settlement took place in 1863, and in that Settlement a wajib ul arz was prepared in which all mortgages in the village were specified. At the heading of the list of these mortgages it is stated in the wajib ul arz that these mortgages could be redeemed upon payment of the principal amount in the month of Jeth of any year. Among these mortgages is the mortgage now in question. The property mortgaged is specified. The names of the mortgagors and the mortgagees are also mentioned and the amount of the mortgage is mentioned also. This wajib-ul-arz was signed by Ganga Ram and by the successors-in-title of Ram Dayal, so that the entries in the Khatauni to be found in the Settlement Record of 1833 and in the wajib-ul-arz of 1863 clearly prove the existence of a mortgage of the disputed property with all the details alleged by the plaintiff in this case. The only thing that is wanting in both these documents is the initial date of the mortgage. In my opinion the fact of the plaintiff having been unable to prove the date of the mortgage is not sufficient to justify our holding that the mortgage has not been proved. The date of the mortgage was not material, except for the purpose of the question of limitation to which I shall have to refer later. In the Full Bench case of Parmanand Misir v. Sahib Ali (1) the learned Chief Justice at the conclusion of his judgment stated that what was necessary to be shown was "a definable or distinguishable mortgage." In the present case a definable or distinguishable mortgage has been fully proved and the mere inability of the plaintiff to prove the exact date of the mortgage is not a valid reason for holding that the fact of the mortgage sought to be redeemed has not been established. The learned Subordinate Judge has found that a mortgage of the property in dispute was made by the alleged mortgagors in favour of the alleged mortgagees for a sum of Rs. 561 4 0, and this finding, which is justified by the evidence to which I have referred, is binding on us in this appeal.

The next question is: "Has it been established that in 1863 when this mortgage was acknowledged by the mortgagees it was a subsisting mortgage?". It is true that in the acknowledgment itself there is no specific allegation that the mortgage was a subsisting mortgage, but it must also be remembered that in the wajib ul arz a specification was made of all the mortgages which existed in the village and which must be taken to have been deemed to be mortgages which were subsisting at the date of the preparation of the wajib-ul-arz. In that document, as I have already stated, a specification is given of a number of mortgages with the addition of a clause to the effect that the mortgages could be redeemed by payment of the amount of the mortgages in the month of Jeth of any year. Among these mortgages was the mortgage now in dispute, and this mortgage was acknowledged by the mortgagees to be a mortgage which was in existence. Of course it was for the plaintiff who came into Court to prove that that acknowledgment was one which had been made before the expiry of the period of limitation, otherwise the acknowledgment could not be availed of for the purpose of saving the operation of limitation. In my opinion the question is one of the amount of proof which has been given of the existence of a subsisting mortgage in 1863. I do not think that any hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what should be the quantity of evidence to be adduced in each case. But where in respect of a mortgage, the creation of which was established, the mortgagees acknowledged that the mortgage existed, that acknowledgment is, in my opinion, prima facie, evidence that it was a mortgage which subsisted at the time when the acknowledgment was made and was not a mortgage which had become extinct by lapse of time. As observed by Mr. Justice Pearson in his judgment in the Full Bench case of Daiu Ohand v. Sarfraz (2), "It is not reasonable to suppose that any one would allow himself to be described as the mortgagee of a property of which the mortgage had ceased to be redeemable at law and the names of the owners thereof had been lost to knowledge by lapse of time". In my opinion where a mortgagee has acknowledged a mortgage, that acknowledgment is prima facis evidence that there is a subsisting mortgage which he acknowledges. If the mortgage had become extinguished by reason of lapse of time, there was no occasion for him to acknowledge such a mortgage; the mortgage had to all intents and purposes, ceased to exist and there is nothing which had to be acknowledged. This case is very similar to that of Kamla Devi v. Gur Dayal (3). Before the enactment of Act XIV of 1859 there was no period of limitation for a suit for redemption of a mortgage. By that enactment a limitation of 60 years was prescribed for a suit for redemption and a grace of two years was given to all mortgagors who wished to redeem their mortgages after the passing of the Act. This period of grace expired in 1862, so that if a suit had been brought to redeem a mortgage whether the mortgage had been made in 1833 or at a much earlier period, the suit would not have been time-barred. It was after the passing of the Act that the Settlement of 1863 took place and it was at this time that in the present case the mortgagees admitted the existence of the mortgage. When they made that acknowledgment, they must have deemed the mortgage to have been in existence as a subsisting mortgage which could be redeemed by the mortgagor. Of course this acknowledgment cannot be more than prima facie evidence of the existence of a subsisting mortgage and is not conclusive. It may be rebutted by proving that the mortgage was made at a date from which, if limitation were computed, 60 years had elapsed before the acknowledgment was made. There is no such evidence in the present case; on the contrary in every subsequent Settlement this property has been recorded as the property of the mortgagor and as being in the possession of the mortgagees as such. In the year 1321 Fasli a partition took place at the instance of Anup Singh, defendant, and a separate Mahal was formed. This land was not included in Anup Singh's Mahal and Anup Singh did not claim that it should be made a part of his Mahal. It was included in the Mahal of the non applicants for partition, among whom were the successors in-title of the original mortgagors. All these circumstances raise a very strong presumption in favour of the existence of a subsisting mortgage. Reference was made to the ruling of the Privy Council in Fatimatulnissa Begum v. Sundar Das (4). In that case the date of the mortgage was known. It was also known that the acknowledgment which had been made was an acknowledgment after the expiry of 60 years from the date of the mortgage, so that that acknowledgment could not be relied upon as saving the operation of limitation and was not in fact so relied upon before their Lordships. What was contended before their Lordships was that by reason of the mortgagees having granted a lease to the mortgagors and described themselves as mortgagees they were estopped from denying the existence of the mortgage as a subsisting mortgage. This contention was repelled by their Lordships, and they proceeded to hold that the mere fact of the mortgagees regarding themselves as mortgagees, although the period of limitation for redemption of the mortgage had expired, could not affect their rights which had matured into the rights of absolute owners. Such is not the case here. In this case it is true we have no evidence as to the exact date on which the mortgage was made. It is quite possible that, in 1863, 60 years had not expired from the date of the original mortgage, and it seems to me to be improbable that had the mortgage been made sometime prior to 1803 it would have been treated in 1863 as an existing mortgage. We have, however, no evidence on the point. In that year, as I have said above, the mortgagees acknowledged the existence of a mortgage, and, in my opinion, that acknowledgment is prima facie evidence of the existence of a subsisting mortgage. This is the view which the Court below took, and I think that Court was fully justified in holding that view. I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

(1) 11 A. 433; A. W. N. (1889) 155; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 708.

(2) 1 A. 117; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 79.

PIGGOTT, J.—I have carefully considered the judgment which has just been delivered by Mr. Justice Banerji. I am in agreement with so much of it that it is only after considerable hesitation that I have arrived at the conclusion that I am bound to dissent from the order which he proposes to pass on this appeal. I may say at once that I agree with him that the plaintiff in this case had proved his mortgage sufficiently to satisfy all reasonable requirements on that point. There is, in any case, a finding of fact that the mortgage is proved and that finding undoubtedly rests upon the evidence. The entry made in what has sometimes been spoken of as the Settlement Record of 1833 and sometimes as the Settlement Record of 1839 (it must be remembered that in many of these old Settlement papers an entry to the effect that the paper in question appertains to "a settlement Record of 1833" means nothing more than that it was made in the course of a Settlement prepared under the Regulations of 1833) was made at a time when there was no period of limitation prescribed by law for the redemption of a mortgage. It is, therefore, evidence that certain specified land was held by certain named persons as the mortgagees of certain other named persons, and that the latter were entitled to reedeem the mortgage at any time on payment of a specified sum. Under these circumstances I do not think it was incumbent on the plaintiffs, except for purposes of limitation, to prove that this mortgage had been contracted in a particular year.

(3) 51 Ind. Cas. 283; 17 A. L. J. 330.
(4) 27 C. 1004; 27 I. A. 103; 4 C. W. N. 565; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 718; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 657.

We now come to the crucial question of the acknowledgment, to be found in the Settlement Record of 1863. There was undoubtedly an acknowledgment sufficient in law to save limitation, provided it was made at a time when the liability acknowledged was still subsisting. The question is then whether it has or has not been proved that the mortgage in suit, whatever its precise date, was at any rate contracted within 60 years of this acknowledgment of the year 1863. Admittedly there is no direct evidence on the point. The question is one of inferring one fact as presumably true because of certain other established facts. If the lower Appellate Court had looked at the matter, plainly and unmistakably, from this point of view and had recorded a clear finding that from such and such established facts it drew the inference that the mortgage must have been contracted within 60 years of its acknowledgment in the Settlement Record of 1863, I should have felt more difficulty about the case than I actually do. A clear finding of fact by a Court of first appeal can only be interfered with in second appeal on the ground that it proceeds upon some erroneous view of law, or that it rests upon no legal evidence. I should have felt considerable difficulty about holding that a clear finding of fact, such as that above suggested, would in this case have rested upon no legal evidence; obviously, in face of the judgment which has just been delivered, it would have been exceedingly difficult to say this. However, I am satisfied that the learned Subordinate Judge in this case has not looked at the matter from this point of view. He has assumed that, for practical purposes, it was sufficient for the plaintiff to prove that there was in existence in the year 1839 a mortgage which was at that date redeemable, and that an acknowledgment of liability has been proved, which acknowledgment was made within 60 years of the year 1839. That this is not a correct statement of the law is obvious enough from the mere terms of the Indian Limitation Act, XIV of 1859. The Legislature in that year, for the first time, imposed a sixty years' period of limitation for redemption suits. I did not proceed on the assumption that those sixty years would begin to run with the passing of the Statute, as it would have done if it had considered it sufficient to note that every mortgage then in existence was redeemable on the date on which the Statute came into force. All it did was to allow mortgagors, whose right of redemption would otherwise have been abruptly cut off the moment the Statute came into force, a short period of grace within which to make the necessary arrangements and to bring a suit for redemption if they were able to do so. The mere fact, therefore, that there was a redeemable mortgage in the year 1839 does not suffice to make out the plaintiff's case unless the Court is prepared to infer that the said mortgage must have been contracted some time within 60 years of its acknowledgment in the Settlement Record of 1863. It is here that, in my opinion, a question of principle is involved and I have felt driven to dissent from the judgment which has just been delivered because of the importance I attach to this question of principle. The inference that the mortgage must have been contracted within 60 years of the preparation of the Settlement Record of 1863 is sought to be based mainly on the terms of the acknowledgment itself. Something has been said about the subsequent conduct of the mortgagees, and to this I must refer briefly later on. In the main, however, the question is, and it has been very clearly stated by Mr. Justice Banerji in his judgment, whether or not the Settlement Record of the years 1863, read in connection with the fact that it was signed as a correct entry by the then mortgagees, justifies an inference that the mortgage was not at the date of that acknowledgment over 60 years old. We are really dealing with a question of circumstantial evidence inferring one fact from another, applying the principles laid down in section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act. My main reason for being unable to concur with the judgment delivered by the senior member of this Bench is that I dissent quite definitely from the dictum which he has quoted from the judgment of one of the members of the Full Bench which decided the case of Daia Chand v. Sarfraz (2) and am unable to accept as of general validity the proposition that it is not reasonable to suppose that a man would describe himself as mortgagee of a property under a mortgage which had ceased to be redeemable at law. I do not think that the proposition can be founded upon any wide experience of the ordinary principles of human nature and conduct as prevailing amongst the smaller landholders in this country. A glaring instance to the contrary is on record for all time in the Privy Council case to which reference has been made, that reported as Fatimatulnissa Begum v. Sundar Das (4). We there have a mortgagee continuing for years and years to describe himself as mortgagee of certain property, and even describing himself as such in a covenant of lease which he enters into with his mortgagor, many years after the right of redemption had become Statute-barred. In one sense it is possibly correct to say that a man does not ordinarily acknowledge a liability which he knows to have become Statute-barred; but the possibility of such an acknowledgment was clearly contemplated by the Legislature when drawing up the relevant clause of the Indian Limitation Act. It required to be laid down that in order to save limitation an acknowledgment must be made before the period of limitation in respect of the liability so acknowledged had expired; and in so doing the Legislature clearly contemplated the possibility of acknowledgments being made of Statute-barred debts. If the Courts are in a general way to act upon the sort of principle involved in the words which I have quoted from the judgment of Mr. Justice Pearson, the result will be that an acknowledgment made within 60 years of the limitation period prescribed for the institution of any suit will have to be treated as ordinarily sufficient to save limitation, unless and until the party bound by that acknowledgment is able to prove affirmatively that it was made beyond limitation. I do not think this is a sound principle, or was intended by the Legislature.

I now come to consider more definitely the particular acknowledgment in question in this case which is to be found in the Settlement Record. An entry in a Settlement Record is presumably in itself a correct statement of the facts therein recited. We have that in the present case, and we also have the acknowledgment of the correctness of the entry by the signatures of the then mortgagees. So far the case looks well for the plaintiff; but I do not think it is a strong case, when one comes to consider the terms of the entry in view of the circumstances under which it was made. In the year 1863 the Limitation Act of 1859 was a comparatively recent Statute. The special period of grace allowed thereby had only lately expired. The Settlement Officer in these circumstances set himself to enquire what lands in the village were in the possession of mortgagees and on what terms. If he had intended to prepare only a list of mortgages redeemable at the time when the list was drawn up, I think there would have been some enquiry into the dates of the various mortgages and the admissions of the parties on the point would have been recorded. I do not feel myself able to infer form those documents that the question whether or not any mortgage entered in this list was at that moment 60 years old was present at all to the mind of the Settlement Officer. What he drew up was a list of lands which had passed into the possession of the persons then holding them by way of a contract of mortgage, and he recorded the essential terms of that contract, i. e., the names of the mortgagors and the mortgagees, the amount of the mortgage, the terms of the agreement between the contracting parties as to the method of redemption. I do not believe that he intended to record an admission that each and every one of these mortgages was necessarily redeemable, in view of the recently passed Statute on the subject, on the date on which he drew up that list. His silence on the point, and the absence of any enquiry as to the date of any of the mortgages, seem to me almost conclusive. I am of opinion, therefore, that the admission of the mortgagees in this particular instance is no more than an admission that their possession in the year 1863 had its origin in a contract of mortgage, to which certain persons had been parties and of which the covenanted mortgage debt was a certain specified sum.

For these reasons I do not feel able to draw from the entry in question the inference which has commended itself to Mr. Justice Banerji.

As regards the subsequent conduct of the mortgagee it leaves me cold. Entries of this sort are ordinarily continued from Settlement to Settlement. The Settlement Officer sets himself to enquire who are the present holders of the mortgagee rights and on whom the proprietary rights, i. e., the equity of redemption, have since devolved. He would in all probability consider it entirely outside his function to enter upon an enquiry as to whether or not any one of these mortgages had become Statute-barred. The case already referred to as Fatimatulnissa Begum v. Sundar Das (4) may be mentioned once more as an instance in which such entries were continued for many years after the right of redemption had in fact become barred. So far as my experience goes, I know literally of no case in which a mortgagee has raised, either before the Settlement Officer at Settlement or before the Revenue Authorities by way of application for correction of records, the point that his mortgagee possession has now ripened into full proprietary possession for want of redemption within the prescribed period of 60 years. So far as the ordinary Revenue Courts are concerned, I am confident that they would refuse to entertain such an application or to make any kind of enquiry into it. They would refer the person making it to the Civil Court; and I cannot say that in my experience I have even come across a case in which a mortgagee, under the circumstances suggested, has taken the initiative and find a suit for a declaration to the effect that he has acquired full proprietary rights. In the partition to which reference has been made, the co-sharer who was also the principal mortgagee, or perhaps the sole mortgagee, of the lands in question in this case was seeking to have his rateable share in the proprietary rights of the Mahal separated from the rest and made into a separate Mahal. The mortgage which we are considering was not a mortgage of a fractional share in the Mahal. It was a mortgage of specified plots. I find it very difficult to conceive of an application for partition so drawn up as to ask the Partition Court to form into a separate Mahal lands representing the applicant's fractional share in the proprietary rights of the Mahal as a whole and at the same time to take out of the Mahal of the non-applicants for partition certain specified plots and add them to the Mahal of the applicant, on the ground (1) that they were in possession of the applicant, and (2) that he had become by virtue of prescription the owner of those specified plots, over and above his rateable share in the proprietary rights of the Mahal as a whole. I am not prepared to say that such an application would be impossible under the Local Revenue Act, although I conceive it would raise serious difficulties regarding the apportionment of revenue between the two Mahals, but it is sufficient for my present purpose to say that I think it very unlikely that the applicant for partition would have thought of coming before the Partition Court with such a claim and that his failure to do so does not seem to me a piece of conduct on his part which in any way suggests an admission that the mortgage in question was still redeemable.

For these reasons I must record my opinion that this appeal ought to be allowed, the order of remand set aside and the decree of the first Court dismissing the plaintiff's suit restored with costs throughout.

WALSH, J.—In my judgment this is a plain case. The question of law arises in an appeal from a remand order. The plaintiffs sued for redemption of a mortgage the date of which neither they nor anybody else knows. They alleged that it was made between the years 1833 and 1839. It was, therefore, prima facie Statute-barred. In order to overcome this difficulty they further alleged that the mortgagees had given an acknowledgment within section 19 of the Limitation Act which took the case out of the mischief of the Statute both in 1839 and in 1863. The case on the acknowledgment of 1839 broke down. An acknowledgment was given by the mortgagees in 1853. The question is whether there is any evidence that that acknowledgment was given within sixty years of the date of the mortgage or whether it was otherwise sufficient in law. The Munsif held that the plaintiffs had failed to prove the mortgage relied upon and had failed to prove a valid acknowledgment. The lower Appellate Court disagreed with him and remanded the case for other issues to be determined. The question is whether that order is right. The lower Court decided, to quote its own language, that "There is no oral or documentary evidence worth the name to prove the exact or approximate date of the mortgage. There is no doubt the mortgage was in existence in 1839, but there is no evidence that it was executed between the years 1833 and 1839. It has not found as a fact that the mortgage was executed within 60 years of 1863." It could hardly with propriety have done so, having held that there was no evidence to support such a finding. It merely held that the acknowledgment was given within 60 years of 1839 when the mortgage was subsisting and that such an acknowledgment was sufficient. This is a conclusion of law and, in my opinion, is untenable, and, therefore, the appeal ought to be allowed. All the evidence in the case is equally consistent with a mortgage which was 60 years old and also with a mortgage which was not 60 years old in 1863. The principle involved was settled in 1889 in Paramanand Misr v. Sahib Ali (1), when a Full Bench decided that in a case for redemption which pre-supposes the lawful possession of the defendant, the plaintiff must show in his plaint and prove at the trial that he had a subsisting title at the date of the suit. In that case the plaintiffs alleged a mortgage-deed which they did not produce and of which they were unable to give the date. It was held that there was no prima facie evidence that the mortgage had been made in 1826, which date alone would have brought it within 60 years of the suit. Similarly in this case there is no prima facie evidence that the mortgage alleged by the plaintiffs was made between 1833 and 1839 or within sixty years of the acknowledgment relied upon. That Full Bench case has been followed in several others, and, in my opinion, is binding upon this Court. It is at any rate too late to depart from it even if one were disposed to do so, which I am not. The same principle was applied to a case of an acknowledgment in Khiali Ram v. Taik Ram (5) by my brother Piggott and Mr. Justice Lindsay. I can find nothing in the cases cited to us on behalf of the respondents which is inconsistent with the principle thus affirmed.

If it is said that the Full Bench case reported as Paramanand Misr v. Sahib Ali (1) did not deal with the question of acknowledgment. The answer seems to me to be this. When the plaintiff sues for redemption, it does not matter for the purpose of limitation whether he relies upon the original mortgage contract or upon an acknowledgment which has given him a fresh lease of life. In either case he has to show that his claim is not barred by efluxion of time. The dicta in Dip Singh v. Girand Singh (6) also relied upon by the respondents merely stated on whom, in the special circumstances of that particular case, the burden of proof lay. The more recent case relied upon of Kamla Devi v. Gur Dayal (3), reported not in the authorised reports but in 17 Allahabad Law Journal, page 330, is in my opinion a finding of fact which lays down no principle. The lower Courts had held that the acknowledgments were not shown to have been made within 60 years of the date of the mortgage. The High Court by a two-Judges Bench consisting of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and my brother Banerji overruled the Courts below and said, to quote the exact terms of the judgment, "Under the circumstances...we ought to hold that the acknowledgments were given before the expiration of sixty years from the date of the mortgage". I agree with my brother Piggott that the express language of section 19 of the Limitation Act contemplates the possibility of an acknowledgment of liability given after the expiration of the statutory period and shows by its terms that a plaintiff, before he can succeed upon an acknowledgment at all, must establish that it was made before the expiration of the statutory period. In this case it is not suggested that he has established that fact by any direct evidence. In my opinion no inference can be drawn from the acknowledgment, however fully it may have admitted liability, so far as the actual date of the original mortgage is concerned. It ought not to be presumed that people of the agricultural class in 1863 could not have done otherwise than know the terms of the recent Statute of Limitation of 1859. As is pointed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in a somewhat similar case to this, reported as Fatimatulnissa Begum v. Sundar Das (4), people may admit liability even though a Statute has actually barred it, but such an admission is ineffectual in law by the express terms of the Statute which we have to apply. The only inference which I feel at liberty to draw from the argument of the case before us, and I have no hesitation myself in drawing it, is that so far from this mortgage having been made, as the plaintiff consistently alleged, between 1833 and 1339, it was almost certainly made, as appears from the Settement Records, anterior to 1833. I cannot resist the feeling that to uphold the decision of the Court below would be to introduce uncertainty and vacillation as to the evidence requisite for making an accurate guess of a date which is not proved in evidence and would leave the decision of these cases largely a matter of chance. I would further observe that inferences as to the probable conduct of people in matters of business in the year 1863 are not particularly easy to draw by those who are living under the conditions of 1920, and there is always a danger of inferring that the only probable and reasonable conduct of an individual is the course which you yourself would have taken. It is for this reason that I think my brother Piggott, certainly I, concurred in referring the discussion of this case to a larger Bench. In my judgment the appeal ought to be allowed and the suit dismissed with costs.

(5) 36 Ind. Cas. 452; 33 A. 540; 14 A. L. J. 834.
(6) 26 A. 313; 1 A. L. J. 1; A. W. N. (1904) 53.

BY THE COURT.—In accordance with the decision of the majority of the Bench the order of the Court is that this appeal be allowed, the order of the Court below be set aside and the decree of the Court of first instance be restored with costs in all Courts.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1331 OF 1918.

May 26, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das.

RAMYAD PANDE—PRINCIPAL DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GENDA TEWARI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND HARIHAR PROSAD TEWARI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), ss. 105A, 109—Decision under s. 105A, whether bars suit for ejectment against person not party to proceedings.

A decision in a proceeding under section 105A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, that certain persons are tenure-holders, does not bar a suit by those persons against certain other persons who were not parties to the proceeding under section 105A for ejectment of the latter on the ground that they are mere trespassers. [p. 993, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and N. N. Sen, for the Appellant.

Mr. Parmeswar Dyal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The defendants are the appellants before me and they were recorded as raiyats in the finally published Record of Rights, the plaintiffs having been recorded as tenure-holders. The Maharaja of Dumraon as the superior landlord brought a proceeding under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for settlement of rent against the plaintiffs in respect of the land of which they were recorded as tenure-holders. In that proceeding the plaintiffs complained under section 105A of the Bengal Tenancy Act that although they were in fact raiyats and not tenure-holders, they were wrongly shown in the Record of Rights as tenure-holders and invited the Revenue Officer to try and determine the issue as to which class of tenants they, the plaintiffs, belonged, RAMYAD PANDE v. GENDA TEWARI.

The Revenue Officer tried the issue as to the status of the plaintiffs under section 105A of the Act and came to the conclusion that the plaintiffs had been properly recorded as tenure holders. It is important to remember that the proceeding just mentioned was a proceeding between the Maharaja and the plaintiffs to which the defendants were not parties, and the only point decided in that proceeding under section 105A of the Act was that the plaintiffs were tenure-holders and not raiyats. The status of the defendants was not in issue in the proceeding before the Revenue Officer and was not adjudicated upon by him.

On the 13th January 1912 the plaintiffs instituted a suit against the defendants and also the Maharaja of Dumraon for the following reliefs:—

(1). That the Court may be pleased to hold that 10b. 13c. 13d. of land, as per numbers and boundaries given below, situated in Mauza Pandeypur Phek, Perganna Bhojepur, out of the guzashta land, forms the exclusive share of the plaintiffs, that they, the plaintiffs, are the kashtkars (cultivators) and guzashtadars of the said land and not tenure-holders, that the Settlement Officers have found the plaintiffs' tenure-holders contrary to law and custom and have improperly and contrary to the real state of things declared the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as raiyats and have fixed a nominal rent, that the plaintiffs are entitled to recover possession of the land and to have their names recorded as raiyats in the khata papers, etc., that the entry made by the Settlement Officers is wrong and that the khewat has been wrongly and improperly prepared.

(2). That on the adjudication of the above points a decree for recovery of possession of the land in suit and for expunction of the name of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 from the khanapuri papers and registration of the names of the plaintiffs as kashtkars and guzashtadars in the Record of Rights, by invalidating the khewat already prepared, may be passed in favour of the plaintiffs.

(3). That Rs. 176-10 6, the amount of produce for 1318 F. S. as per account given below, may be awarded against the defendants and that an order may be passed awarding future mesne profit up to the date of recovery of the possession, after ascertaining the same and realising Court-fees thereon.

That suit succeeded in the Court below, but was dismissed in this Court on the ground that section 109 of the Bengal Tenancy Act constituted a complete bar to the maintenance of that suit. The decision of Mr. Justice Atkinson, who delivered the judgment of this Court in the appeal arising out of the suit of the 13th January 1912, is reported as Ram Dayal Pandey v. Genda Tewari (1). It is quite clear that Mr. Justice Atkinson construed the plaint in that suit as a plaint for the rectification of the entry in the Record of Rights as regards the status of the plaintiffs, and in his view such a suit did not lie having regard to the clear provision of section 109 of the Act. It will be noticed that Mr. Pugh on behalf of the plaintiffs did put forward the argument that although he was not entitled to a declaration as to his status in opposition to the decision of the Revenue Officer in the proceeding under section 105A of the Act, still he was entitled to maintain an action in ejectment against the defendants on the ground that they were mere trespassers and had no title to the land. This argument was negatived by Mr. Justice Atkinson on the ground that every averment in the plaint was inconsistent with the relief, as, in his arguments, claimed by Mr. Pugh. Mr. Justice Atkinson took the view that the main relief sought in the plaint was declaration of the status of the plaintiffs as tenure holders, and he repudiated the suggestion of Mr. Pugh that the plaintiffs were entitled to let the plaint go by the board, and claim in the suit a relief which is after all a subsidiary relief. But the learned Judge did concede that if the plaint could be read as a plaint in an action in ejectment, section 109 of the Act would constitute no bar to such an action and the Court would be bound to try such a suit. In other words, the learned Judge left the question relating to the status of the defendants open as between the parties.

It is clear, therefore, that the question, whether the defendants have any title to the disputed land of which they are in possession or are mere trespassers and are liable to be ejected, has never yet been tried in any of the Courts. In the proceeding before the Revenue Officer the defendants were not parties and their status was not drawn into controversy between the parties. The question was undoubtedly raised in the suit of 1912, but Mr. Justice Atkinson, having regard to the frame of the suit, refused to adjudicate on it and left the matter expressly open between the parties.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 641, 1 P. L. J. 479; 3 P. L. W. 69.

On the 31st of July 1916 the plaintiffs commenced the present action claiming therein the following reliefs: —

1. That it may be adjudicated by the Court that the principal defendants are trespassers in respect of the said land. The plaintiffs never admitted the principal defendants Nos. 1 to 3 as raiyats.

2. That the entry in the survey papers that the defendants Nos. 1 to 3 are raiya's in respect of the said land may be declared as wrong.

3. That the possession of the plaintiffs over the said lands, which they have acquired under a writ of delivery of possession after the decision of the Sub Judge, may be confirmed. If in any way it is proved that the plaintiffs are out of possession, their possession with mesne profits may be awarded.

3 (a). That khas possession may be awarded to the plaintiffs over the lands in dispute and that mesne profits from the date of dispossession up to the date of possession may be awarded on ascertainment thereof in the miscellaneous department.

4. That having regard to the survey proceedings if the possession of the plaintiffs and the pro forma defendants be considered joint, then the joint possession of the plaintiffs and the pro forma defendants may be confirmed. If they be found to be out of possession, then joint possession may be awarded to them.

5. That an injunction may be issued against the principal defendants restraining them until the disposal of this suit from interfering with the possession of the plaintiffs, which they had acquired under a judgment of the Court.

This suit was contested mainly on the ground that the decision of this Court in the previous suit operated as res judicata and was a complete bar to the maintenance of the present suit. The learned Munsif who tried the suit gave effect to the plea of res judicata and dismissed the plaintiffs' action. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge has taken a different view on the question of res judicata and has remanded the suit to the Court of first instance for trial on merits. It is against this order of the learned Subordinate Judge remanding the case to the Court of first instance that this appeal is directed.

In this Court Mr. Susil Madhab Mullick on behalf of the appellants put forward two grounds as defeating the right of the plaintiffs to maintain the present suit. His first contention was that section 109 of the Act barred further inquiry into the subject and secondly, that the previous decision of Mr. Justice Atkinson operated as res judicata between the parties.

So far as the objection based on section 109 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is concerned, I am of opinion that it must be overruled. The present action is an action in trespass against the defendants. In such an action the status of the defendants is the relevant issue to be tried by the Courts. Now the defendants were not parties to the proceeding before the Revenue Officer, nor was the matter in controversy in this suit the subject of the proceeding before the Revenue Officer. I am of opinion, therefore, that section 109 does not constitute any bar to the maintenance of this suit. On the second question, the decision of Mr. Justice Atkinson may be relied upon either as an authoritative decision of this Court on a question af construction and therefore binding on me or as evidence in the case operating as res judicata. I have, however, to construe the plaint which has been filed in this action, and not the plaint which was filed in the suit of 1912. The plaint as filed in this action is clearly a plaint as in an action in ejectment. Mr. Susil Madhab Mullick asked me to compare the plaint filed in this suit with the plaint filed in the suit of 1912 and asked me pointedly where the difference between the two plaints was. The essential difference between the two plaints is that in the plaint of 1912 the plaintiffs asked for a declaration of their status as cultivators and guzashtadars of the said land and made a distinct attempt to get behind the decision of the Revenue Officer in the proceeding under section 105A of the Act. No doubt they asked for recovery of possession of the land from defendants Nos. 1 and 2, but they asked for this relief as necessarily following or flowing from the declaration they sought, namely, that they were cultivators and not tenure-holders. Rightly or wrongly Mr. Justice Atkinson held that if it was incompetent to the plaintiffs, having regard to the proceeding under section 105A of the Act, to ask for a declaration of their status as raiyats, it was impossible for the Court to give any relief at all to the plaintiffs in a suit framed on the cause of action that they were raiyats and not tenure-holders. In the plaint in this suit they ask for ejectment of the defendants on the ground that the defendants are not raiyats but are trespassers. They do not ask for a declaration of their status as tenure-holders, and that is the essential difference between the two plaints. It is because they asked for such a declaration in the plaint of 1912 that Mr. Justice Atkinson dismissed their suit. Here they do not ask for that declaration but they seek to eject the defendants on the ground, not that the plaintiffs are raiyats, but that the defendants are not raiyats but are trespassers. It is, to my mind, clear that this issue, not having been allowed to be raised in the previous suit, must now be tried. I hold that the decision of the Subordinate Judge on this point is entirely correct. I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 52 OF 1918.

March 1, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Mittra, A. J. C., and Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

GULABDAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat DHARMIN BAI AND ANOTHER —DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Succession—Mundit chela, right of, to succeed—Adoption—Mundit chela, whether adopted son—Joint family-Father or manager, power of, to make Will—Son, birth of, effect of—Girhast Bairagis—Son, position of.

There is no custom which authorises the succession of a mundit chela to the estate of the person making him a chela. [p. 998, col. 1.]

The fact that a person is made a mundit chela does not constitute that person an adopted son, and the mere fact that his father was present at the ceremony of his initiation as a chela does not convert the ceremony into one of adoption. [p. 998, col. 2.]

Where the head of a Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara Law makes a Will, the subsequent birth of a son, who thereupon becomes a co-parcener in the family estate, has the effect of rendering the Will inoperative and absolutely void and not merely voidable. [p. 998, col. 2.]

Among Girhast Bairagis a son acquires an interest by birth in the ancestral property of the father. [p. 1000, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Bilaspur, in Civil Suit No. 74 of 1916, decided on 31st March 1918.

The Hon'ble Sir B. K. Bose, Messrs. V. Bose and S. C. Fone, for the Appellant.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Mahant Ramkrishnadas of Morza Lormi, Tahsil Mungeli, a Girhast Bairagi, owned the 28 villages in suit. He died on the 1st September 1912. The plaintiff's case is that he was born the second son of one Mohandas, also a Girhast Bairagi. Ramkrishnadas had lost several sons and he, therefore, asked Mohandas to give his son, the plaintiff, to him to be affiliated as a son and a Mundit Chela according to the law and practice obtaining in the community to which the parties belong. Accordingly on the 31st August 1907 the plaintiff was given by his natural father and mother to Ramkrishnadas, who adopted him as his son and made him a Mundit Chela. All necessary religious and ceremonial rites were performed, plaintiff being given his present name Gulabdas. On the 13th November 1907 Ramkrishnadas executed a document in favour of the plaintiff, in which he stated that having in accordance with family custom and practice and usage made the plaintiff his Mundit Chela on 31st August 1907, he appointed him his successor and agreed that the plaintiff should have a right to his ilaka and all his moveable and immoveable property. The document states:—

"He will continue to hold such a right until I have children from my own wife and in case I have a son, by God's grace, from my own wife and he remains alive, he being my real son will have a right to the property mentioned above and the said Mundit Chela, namely, the said Gulabdas will not have a right to get the same. The said Gulabdas shall have a right of maintenance in this way: that Mouza Kudurtal in the aforesaid ilaka, which is this day in my possession, will be given to him in muafi on which he will maintain himself. That village will continue muafi among the children of Gulabdas also; Gulabdas and his children will have no right to any other thing but to the said village. * * * * If I am not alive and I do not leave any real son, my wife Musammat Rajkuarbai will be the owner of the villages in my possession and of the moveable and immoveable property. After her death the Mundit Chela, Gulabdas, will be the owner of it. This writing of my own will be lawful after my death. No one will have any right during my lifetime.

Signature of Mahand Ramkrishnadas

(He will be entitled to the muafi on my death. I will maintain him during my lifetime).

Signature of Ramkrishnadas."

A few months before Ramkrishnadas's death a son named Bhagwatdas was born to him by his wife Musammat Rajkuarbai. This Bhagwatdas died in or about December 1912 when only a few months old, and on his death his mother Musammat Rajkuarbai took possession of the estate as his heir, plaintiff continuing to live with her as a member of the family. She died on the 16th September 1913 and on her death the first defendant Musammat Dharminbai, another wife of Ramkrishnadas, a step mother of Bhagwatdas, took possession of the village in suit.

The plaintiff alleges that by virtue of his adoption the plaintiff became the brother of Bhagwatdas and on the mother's death was entitled to succeed to the property. The second defendant Musammat Falkuwar is the mother of the deceased Ramkrishnadas. As plaintiff is informed that defendant No. 2 had recently filed a suit against defendant No. 1 for the possession of the 23 villages on the ground that she is the nearest heir of the deceased Bhagwatdas, she is joined as a party here. Plaintiff asks for possession of the 28 villages: he in the alternative prays that if he is not entitled to this relief, he be awarded possession of Mouza Kudurtal.

The first defendant denied that the plaintiff had been adopted or taken as a Mundit Chela by Ramkrishnadas. It is admitted that Bhagwatdas was the heir-at-law of his father but defendant and her co-widow Musammat Rajkuar had been in joint possession of the property left by their husband on his death and continued to be in possession till Musammat Rajkuarbai's death, since when this defendant has been in sole possession. Ramkrishnadas was a Gharbari Bairagi and had long ceased to belong to the fraternity of Nihang or celebate Bairagis and consequently had no right to take a Chela and change the course of natural succession. Even supposing that Gulabdas had been taken as a Chela, he could not succeed to his Guru's property. Assuming that Ramkrishnadas had executed the document, Exhibit P-1, that document is a Will and as property was ancestral in Ramkrishnadas's hands, he had no authority to alter its legal and natural devolution. It was further contended that if the plaintiff had been adopted by Ramkrishnadas, then on the birth of Bhagwatdas his share in his adoptive father's property came to only 1/4th and he could claim nothing more than that.

For the second defendant the execution of Exhibit P-1 was denied and she adopted the statement of the first defendant with regard to the question of adoption and the making of a Mundit Chela. Bhagwatdas got the whole estate by survivorship on the death of his father and the second defendant succeeded to that estate on the death of Musammat Rajkuarbai. She had sued Musammat Dharminbai for possession of the estate

GULABDAS v. DHARMIN BAI.

Exhibit P-1 is the Will and, therefore, could not affect the ancestral property of the testator.

The lower Court finds that the plaintiff was not adopted as a son of Ramkrishnadas. The registered document of 13th November 1907 was held to be duly proved. Dealing with the contention that a Mundit Chela succeeds to the estate of the person making him such a Chela, the Court finds that this has not been established; the alleged custom was held not proved. The Judge considered that the case must be decided on the assumption that the parties are governed by the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law in respect of survivorship, and this rule prevented the document of the 13th November 1907 from operating on the death of Ramkrishnadas. Bhagwatdas got the entire estate by the right of survivorship; at his death it went to his mother Rajkuarbai and at her death to the paternal grandmother Fulkuwar. The plaintiff's case was dismissed.

We may note that the dispute between the defendants was decided in Suit No. 60 of 1916 on the file of the Additional District Judge, Bilaspur, Fulkuwar being held entitled to get the estate, and Musammat Dharminbai got Rs. 60 per mensem as maintenance therefrom. Musammat Dharminbai died during the pendency of this appeal which proceeded against Musammat Fulkuwarbai alone.

It is admitted in argument here that if the adoption is not proved, the plaintiff-appellant has no right to 27 villages but to only the village of Kudartal. It is not now disputed that Ramkrishnadas made the appellant his Mundit Chela, and it is argued that this fact is sufficient to constitute him an adopted son: the simple rites performed are sufficient to make him a son of Ramkrishnadas. We are not pressed by this argument. It rested on the appellant to show that the ceremonies of making him a Mundit Chela also made him an adopted son and his evidence certainly does not prove that.

The lower Court has in paragraphs 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 analysed the evidence produced to prove that the plaintiff was adopted by Ramkrishnadas. We have read that evidence. It is far from satisfactory and we agree with the lower Court that it does not prove the fact of adoption. The mere fact that appellant's father was present on the ceremony of initiation as a Chela does not convert the ceremony into one of adoption. Giving and taking as an adopted son is different from giving and taking as a Chela. It is clear from Exhibit P-1, the Will, that Ramkrishnadas never regarded the appellant as his adopted son but as a Chela. This finding concludes the appellant's case as regards the 27 out of 28 villages.

It is not here contended that the appellant's claim to the village of Kudartal rests on his position as a Mundit Chela. The claim is based on Exhibit P-1 dated 13th November 1907. We have no doubt that that document is a Will intended to take effect after the death of Ramkrishnadas. If the case is governed strictly by the Mitakshara Law applicable to a house holder and if Bhagwatdas by birth became a co parcener in the family estate, then the Will will cease to be operative; it was absolutely void and not merely voidable.

It is pressed upon us that even in a Hindu family governed by Mitakshara the head of a house can make provision for a pious object and can give away the co-parcenary property to a person having only a moral claim on the family. There are doubtless cases in which these gifts have been upheld: see Appan Patrachariar v. Srinivasachariar (1), Anivilla Sundaramayya v. Oherla Sitamma (2), Narayana Annavi v. Ramalinga Annavi (3), Pugalia Vettor-ammal v. Vettor Goundan (4), Bachoo v. Mankorebai (5). We concede that the father or manager of a joint family is competent to make a gift of a small portion of the property in favour of a male or female member of the family. But the principles enunciated in the cases above mentioned do not apply to a Will but only to a gift inter vivos.

(1) 40 Ind. Cas. 118; 40 M. 1125; 32 M. L. J. 364; 5 L. W. 544; (1917) M. W. N. 355; 21 M. L. T. 403.
(2) 10 Ind. Cas. 56; 21 M. L. J 695; 9 M. L. T. 469; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 422; 35 M. 628.
(3) 36 Ind. Cas. 48; 39 M. 587.
(4) 13 Ind. Cas. 475; 22 M. L. J. 321; (1912) M. W. N. 89; 11 M. L. T. 103.
(5) 29 B. 51; 6 Bom. L. R. 268.

GULABDAS v. DHARMIN BAI.

It is further contended that the infant Bhagwatdas was the only person who could contest the Will and that right of challenge died with him. Grandmother, not being a co-parcener nor a survivor but only an heir, cannot question the document. The answer to this is that if the strict Mitakshara Law applies, Bhagwatdas was a co-parcener with a right of survivorship and the Will, therefore, became inoperative on the testator's death. A member of an undivided family cannot bequeath his own share of the joint property, because on his death the right of survivorship is at conflict with the right of devise and the title of survivorship being prior title takes precedence to the exclusion of that of devise: Vitla Butten v. Yamenamma (6); and Hanmant Ramchandra v. Bhimacharya (7).

The difficult question remains whether a son of a Gharbari Gosain acquires an interest by birth in the property inherited by his father from the grandfather. If he does then the deceased had no right to make a Will giving one village to appellant and the suit must fail; if no such interest is acquired by the son, there is no reason why the effect should not be given to the wishes of the testator.

It is contended that it is very doubtful whether the doctrine of special accrual of right by birth applies to Bairagis. Ramkrishnadas's ancestors were admittedly Nihange, that is ascetics, and the question is if they take to marriage, do they accept the principles of ordinary Hindu Law?

It is argued that as a Bairagi can dispose of his property as he likes, no Chela having any right to such property and there being no acquired interest by right of Chelaship in the case of ascetic Bairagis, it would be unsafe to hold that a son acquires a vested right by birth. We think that a specific issue on this point should have been framed and, therefore, remit the following issue for trial:—

"Whether or not among Gharbari Gosains a son acquires an interest by birth in the ancestral property of the father?

The lower Court will take pleadings bearing on this issue and such evidence as the parties may adduce and then return the record with its finding. We decide no question as to the question of burden of proof at present as the matter has not been argued. Parties should be asked to give instances where right to partition has been enforced by a son in the lifetime of his father. The record will be returned by the 23rd December 1919; objections will be filed within 7 days from that date and the appeal will be heard on the 6th January 1920.

After the record was returned to the Judicial Commissioner's Court by the lower Court with a finding on the issue framed and submitted to it, the former Court delivered the following JUDGMENT.—The facts of the case are sufficiently given in our judgment dated 29th October 1919. The issue we framed, namely, whether or not among Gharbari Gosains a son acquires an interest by birth in the ancestral property of the father, has now been decided, the lower Court holding that on the evidence on record the issue must be decided in the negative. The parties to this suit are really Bairagis and not Gosains. These are two different sects, the former being the worshippers of Vishnu and the latter of Shiva. In the arguments before us the terms Bairagis and Gosains have been treated as synonymous. We should have framed an issue whether or not among Girhast Bairgis a son acquires an interest by birth in the ancestral property of the father, but the mistake has misled nobody. The parties knew exactly what had to be established and what evidence in favour of or against the point put in issue was wanted.

The first witness for the plaintiff after remand, Gokuldas, states that in the sect a son cannot take his share of his father's property during the father's lifetime. He mentions two instances where sons demanded their shares but had been refused. Witness seems to have no personal knowledge. He states that Bairagis follow all the ceremonies in marriages and other functions as the Brahmins. Mohandas (P. W. No. 14) knows of no such right appertaining to Bairagis' sons and no case of partition in the lifetime of the father. He refers to one Dhirandas who partitioned the ancestral property with his brother. The next witness is Rameharandas (P. W. No. 15). He gives much the same evidence, but he is a Nihang Bairagi and admittedly knows nothing about Girhast Bairagis. He is apparently not a resident of the Bilaspur District. Balbhadraban (P. W. No. 16) is a cousin. He states that among Gosains a son has no right to partition ancestral property in the father's lifetime. He speaks to a Gosain mortgaging his share with him and the witness got his share foreclosed. He says that 20 or 22 years ago there were two suits where sons had demanded a partition of the ancestral property in their fathers' lifetime and both these suits were dismissed.

(6) 8 M. H. C. R. 6.
(7) 12 B. 105; 12 Ind. Jur. 274; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 156.

For the defendant five witnesses were examined after remand. Laldas (D. W. No. 13) states that Govardhandas, Girhast Bairagi of Gidhua, divided his six ancestral villages with his brother Laludas. Govardhandas had two sons, Jagannathdas and Dayaramdas. These insisted on getting their shares of the ancestral property from the father and the father and two sons got a village. He says that there was one Dharamdas of Khairwa who had 5 sons and who gave a share of his village to each son. He does not know whether mutation had been effected in the cases referred to. The next witness Ram Ratandas (D. W. No. 14) is a Bairagai. He says that he has a field of 53 acres. He has also three sons who separated from him three years ago, and they insisted on having their shares in the property. He states that it is a custom of the family that when the members begin to fight among themselves a partition is effected. Sons have vested rights in the ancestral property. The man is an insolvent. Sitaramdas (D. W. No. 15), who is not a born Bairagi but has become a Girhast Bairagi, states that Girhast Bairagis follow the Hindu Shastras. He cannot quote chapter or verse in support of his statement, The next witness is one Ganeshprasad (D. W. No. 16), the Pleader's clerk whose father was in the service of the late Mr. S. C. Mittra, Pleader. He speaks to a copy of the plaint in Civil Suit No. 6 of 1901 in the Court of the Civil Judge, Bilaspur, which was signed by Ramkrishnadas. He sued for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the Lormi Taluq. In the plaint it is stated that the villages were undivided property. Ramkrishnadas's signature is also spoken to by Madho Babu (D. W. No. 17). Ganeshprasad also refers to a rejoinder in Civil Suit No. 82 of 1911, This rejoinder is dated the 12th October 1911 and is written by the witness and is signed by the agent of Ramkrishnadas and Mahant Gurubdas and by the Pleader Mr. Mitra. This rejoinder is on behalf of the plaintiff in that case and states inter alia in paragraph 7 that it is denied that Laxmidas by a Will dated the 18th November 1896 made the grant of the village absolute in favour of defendant No. 1 and as the Taluqa of Lormi was the ancestral property of Laxmidas and not his self-acquired property he had no power to make any disposition of the villages by a Will. Exhibit 2 D 10 is a copy of the Will dated the 9th April 1892, referred to in Exhibit 2 D 19, the plaint in Civil Suit No. 6 of 1901. The Will admitted in the plaint of 18th November 1896 and denied in the rejoinder is not on record.

We think the rejoinder amounts to an admission by Ramkrishnadas that because the Ilaqa was ancestral property Laxmidas could not will it away. Therefore, as far as the present case is concerned we start with an admission by the predecessor of the plaintiff that there is no power to will away ancestral property when there are sons in existence. Looking at the evidence in this light we find the plaintiff has failed to prove the custom relied upon, namely, that a son has no vested interest by birth in ancestral property, so far as this family is concerned. That being so, the claim as regards the village of Kudurtal also fails.

The result is that the appeal is dismissed. We consider that in the circumstances of the case the parties should bear their costs in both Courts.

Appeal dismissed.

JITENDRA KUMAR PAL v. MUKSHODA CHARAN DAS.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2808 OF 1916.

January 30, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir N. R. Chatterjea, Kt., and Mr. Justice Panton.

JITENDRA KUMAR PAL CHOWDHURI —DEFENDANT No. 14—APPELLANT

versus

MUKSHODA CHARAN DAS AND OTHERS —PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Appeal—Appellate Court, finding by, that transaction is not benami*—Remand—Same Court, finding by, that transaction is* benami*—Second finding, whether justified.*

Plaintiff sought to recover possession of certain lands on the strength of a Patni Settlement in his favour. His suit was dismissed on the ground that the Patni was a benami transaction. The Appellate Court, however, found for the plaintiff that the Patni was not a benami transaction. Defendant appealed to the High Court, which remanded the case for a finding whether the Patni fell within the class of tenures described in section 71 (b) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation. The lower Appellate Court found that the Patni was not bona fide and, therefore, did not come under the foregoing section. The plaintiff objected that that Court, having already found that the Patni was not benami, had no power to arrive at a contrary finding:

Held, that the finding was justified, inasmuch as in arriving at its previous finding the Court apparently had not taken all the facts into consideration. [p. 1003, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Officiating Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Sylhet, dated the 30th of August 1916, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Court at Habiganj, dated the 5th of July 1915.

FACTS appear from the judgment.

Babu Brojalal Chakrabarty (with him Babu Hemandra Kumar Das), for the Appellant—Defendant No. 14 is the appellant. The plaintiff sought to recover possession of the disputed land as putnidar, under a putni patta granted by the proprietors of the estate in Jaista 1320 B. S., corresponding to May 1913. The estate was sold for arrears of revenue in 1907 and was purchased free from incumbrances by one Garucharan and others. In 1909 the estate was again sold for arrears of revenue and the outgoing proprietors purchased it in the benami of one Prokash. In 1912 Prokash executed a conveyance in favour of the outgoing proprietors. In September 1913 the estate was sold for arrears of revenue for the third time and was purchased free of incumbrances by one Sham Sundar and two others.

These purchasers recognised the plaintiff's patni by receiving rents from him. The defendants were in adverse possession of the disputed land for more than 25 years. Neither the purchasers of the estate of 1907 nor those of 1913 chose to annul this incumbrance.

I submit that the plaintiff as putnidar has no right to annul the incumbrance of the defendants. The purchasers of 1909 had no right to annul incumbrances and, therefore, their lessee, the plaintiff, had no such right. The purchasers of 1913, by recognising the putni right of the plaintiff, did not confer any right on him to annul incumbrances.

[CHATTERJEA, J.—The plaintiff can now take a grant from Sham Sundar and drive you out.]

That might be so. But the title with which the plaintiff came to Court failed.

The putnidar (plaintiff) has not acquired the right of the auction-purchaser so as to be able to annul the incumbrances. The putni is simply allowed to stand. There is no fresh grant from the auction-purchaser to the putnidar. The auction-purchaser could have passed such an interest only by a registered instrument. Whatever interest the putnidar had was the interest which he acquired by the lease of Jaista 1320. The position of the putnidar is as good or as bad as mine. He has acquired no special advantage by the subsequent revenue sale. The purchasers at that sale have only accepted rent from him and thereby merely recognised his putni.

The defendants have acquired a good title by adverse possession which could not be defeated by the plaintiff.

Babu Ramchandra Mazumdar (with him Babu Gopal Chandra Das), for the Respondents.—Accepting for the sake of argument that Prokash was a benamdar of the outgoing proprietors, the right of the auction purchaser of 1907 continued in themselves and was not affected by the revenue sale of 1909 because the position of the original proprietors was not changed. And, therefore, the putnidar had the same right Recognition of the putni by the purchasers at the third revenue sale amounted to a recognition by the purchasers of the right of the putnidar to annul incumbrances.

JITENDRA KUMAR PAL v. MUKSHODA CHARAN DAS.

[CHATTERJEA, J.—By the revenue sale of 1913 only the purchasers had the right to annul incumbrances. How does this right of the purchasers pass to the putnidar?]

As soon as the right of the putnidar is confirmed by the purchasers, their right to annul incumbrances passes to the putnidar because the right to annul incumbrances is a right conferred on the putnidar by the putni grant itself.

The adverse possession set up by my learned friend is an incumbrance which is voidable and not void. Had it not been voidable but void, a fresh grant from the purchasers of 1913 would have been necessary to enable the putnidar to exercise the right to annul incumbrances. The right to annul incumbrances is a part of the putni right and not a separate right.

[CHATTERJEA, J.—A grants a putni to B by which he gives B the right to annul incumbrances which he himself had. If the right of A if sold at a revenue sale, does the right of B to avoid incumbrances continue?]

That would depend, I submit, upon the terms of the putni grant.

[CHATTERJEA, J.—Does the right to annul incumbrances subsist in the proprietor after a revenue sale?]

I submit, not.

[CHATTERJEA, J.—If then the right of the proprietor does not subsist, how can the right subsist in the putnidar?]

That would depend, as I have already submitted, upon the will of the auction-purchaser.

[CHATTERJEA, J.—The effect of your argument would be that the new purchaser at the revenue sale would have no such right?]

I submit that would not be so, because the new purchaser could have avoided the putni itself and along with it the right of the putnidar to avoid incumbrances.

Refers to Mohim Chandra Deb v. Pyari Lal Das (1). Limitation would run from the date of the sale of 1913 and Article 142 of the Limitation Act would apply.

As regards the finding by the Court below after remand, I submit that the Court below had no power to arrive at the finding that the putni settlement was not a bona fide one, in the face of the finding by the lower Appellate Court (before remand) that the putni was not benami. Moreover the defendant cannot question my putni patta and say that it was without consideration.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 218; 21 C. W. N. 537; 44 C. 412; 25 C. L. J. 99.

Babu Hemandra Kumar Das briefly replied.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff-respondent sought to recover possession of the disputed land as putnidar under the putni patta, dated the 23rd May 1913, granted by the then proprietor of the estate. It appears that one Prokash Saha purchased the estate at a sale for arrears of revenue in 1909 and sold the same to one Diwanat Ram and others. The plaintiff obtained the patni from the latter, and brought the suit out of which this appeal arises, to recover possession of the disputed land from the defendants who were in adverse possession thereof for about 25 years, alleging that Prokash Saha had purchased the estate free from incumbrances. The suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance on the ground that Prokash Saha was benamdar for the outgoing proprietors, and that the plaintiff's patni was also a benami transaction. On appeal the lower Appellate Court, not dissenting from the finding of the Court of first instance on the first point, was of opinion that the defendants' incumbrance had been annulled by a previous sale which took place in 1907 which was within 12 years of the suit, and as there was no reliable evidence to show that the plaintiff was benamdar for Diwanat Ram and others, decreed the suit.

It appears that subsequent to the revenue sale held in 1909 and the Patni settlement under which the plaintiff claims, there was another revenue sale held on the 24th September 1913 at which certain other persons were the purchasers and they had recognized the plaintiff's patni by receiving rent from him. In second appeal by the defendant No. 14, it was contended that even if the purchaser at the sale held in 1913 could have avoided the incumbrance of the defendants, the mere receipt of rent from the patnidar did not confer any rights upon the plaintiff which would entitle him to question the rights of the defendants, whatever they may be. On behalf of the plaintiff respondent it was contended that he derived his rights under the Patni settlement from the assignee of the purchaser at the previous sale (held in 1909) and that the patni was a tenure which could not be avoided under section 71 (b) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation. The case was, therefore, remanded for a finding whether the patni of the plaintiff falls within the class of tenures described in section 71 (c) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation.

The Court below has arrived at the finding that the Patni settlement was not bona fide, and, therefore, does not come under section 71 (c) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation. It is contended on behalf of the respondent that the Court below had no power to arrive at the finding that the Patni settlement was not a bona fide one, in the face of the finding of the lower Appellate Court (before remand) that the patni was not benami. It is true that the lower Appellate Court before remand did find that the patni was not benami, but that Court (before remand) does not appear to have taken into its consideration all the facts upon which the Court of first instance found that the transaction was not bona fide. On remand the learned Subordinate Judge, in deciding the question whether the patni falls within the class of tenures described in section 71 (c) of the Regulation, took all the facts into his consideration. It is further contended on behalf of the respondent that it is not for the defendant to impeach the Patni settlement merely on the ground that there was no consideration for it. But the learned Subordinate Judge has found that the "Creation of the patni p tta was merely a contrivance to secure the land in suit, so that any subsequent auction purchaser of the estate may not venture to stretch his hands on the same, it being valuable property in the heart of a town and yielding an income from the several Casha holders."

But apart from that, we think the decision of the lower Appellate Court is erroneous. It holds (differing from the finding of the Court below on the point) that the purchasers at the sale of 1907 were not benamdars for the outgoing proprietors, and that the incumbrance of the defendants came to an end in 1907; so that the suit having been brought within 12 years of the auction-sale was not barred. But incumbrances are not ipso facto annulled by a sale, and the purchasers at the sale held in 1907 did not annul the incumbrance. So far as the defaulters (i. e., the purchasers at the sale held in 1907) were concerned, their right came to an end by the sale of 1909, and along with it the power to annul incumbrances. If the purchasers at the sale held in 1909 had not purchased the estate free from incumbrances, we do not see how they could exercise the right of annulling incumbrances which the purchasers at the previous sale (held in 1907) had, and which, as stated above, came to an end by the sale held in 1909. And if they could not exercise such rights, the plaintiff cannot have such right by virtue of a Patni settlement obtained from their assignees. The plaintiff can only claim the right if their lessors who derived title under the purchase of 1909 had purchased the estate free from incumbrances.

It is true the purchasers at the last sale (of 1913) acquired the estate free of incumbrances, but they merely recognised the plaintiff's patni by receiving rent from him. They themselves did not exercise the right to annul incumbrances, nor confer such right on the plaintiff. The plaintiff's patni was confirmed by receipt of the rent, but he acquired no right to annul incumbrances.

We are accordingly of opinion that the decree of the lower Appellate Court must be set aside, and that of the Court of first instance restored with costs.

Appeal accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 264 OF 1920.

May 25, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Shadi Lal, Chief Justice.

NUR MOHAMMAD—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GAURI SHANKAR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 23, Sch. I, Art. 120—Injunction, suit for—Continuing wrong—Limitation—Terminus a quo.

Article 120 of the Limitation Act, being the residuary Article, prescribes the period of limitation for a suit for injunction, but the terminus a quo is the date when the right to sue accrues. [p. 1004, col. 1.]

AMJAD HUSSAIN v. SHYAM LAL.

Plaintiffs sued for the issue of a perpetual injunction restraining defendant from discharging rain water on to the roof of the plaintiffs' shop through a parnala:

Held, that the plaintiffs had a fresh cause of action on each occasion when the defendant discharged water through the parnala on the plaintiffs' roof and that they were entitled to rely upon the last occasion when this was done as the starting point of limitation.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 25th August 1919, affirming that of the Honorary Munsif, 1st Class, Ludhiana, dated the 22nd April 1919.

Syad Mohsin Shah for the Appellant.

Mr. Jai Gopal Sethi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The District Judge, concurring with the Munsif, has granted the plaintiffs a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from discharging the water of his chobara through a parnala on the roof of the plaintiffs' shop. The District Judge finds that the parnala was constructed probably before 1903, but that the defendant had failed to establish that it existed more than 20 years prior to the institution of the suit, or that he has acquired a prescriptive right of easement by user.

The defendant has preferred a second appeal to this Court, and the crucial point for consideration is whether on the findings set out above the suit brought by the plaintiffs was barred by time. Mr. Mohsin Shah for the appellants contends that the suit is governed by the provisions of Article 120, and that as it was brought after the expiry of six years from the date when the parnala was first used by the appellant for discharging the water, it was barred by time. Now it is true that Article 120, being the residuary Article, prescribes the period of limitation for a suit for injunction; but the terminus a quo is the date when the right to sue accrues. Now, section 23 of the Limitation Act provides that in the case of a continuing wrong a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment of the time during which the wrong continues. It seems to me that the plaintiffs had a fresh cause of action on each occasion when the defendant discharged water through the parnala on to the plaintiffs' roof, and that they are entitled to rely upon the last occasion when this was done as the starting point of limitation, unless the defendant has acquired an indefeasible right of easement by 20 years' enjoyment. A case very similar to the present one is to be found in Ramphul Sahoo v. Misree Lall (1), where a suit brought to have a drain closed on the ground that it passed through the plaintiffs' land was held to be within time, because each trespass on the plaintiffs' land was found to constitute a fresh cause of action. To the same effect is a judgment of the Allahabad High Court in Sheo Prasad Sonar v. Mangar Manhar (2). Accordingly I hold that the suit is within time.

Mr. Mohsin Shah further urges that as the plaintiffs have not suffered any substantial injury, they should have been granted, not a mandatory injunction, but a monetary compensation. This point was not raised in either of the Courts below, the reason probably being that an injunction was the proper remedy in a case of this kind; and it cannot be raised for the first time in the Court of Second Appeal. It is to be observed that the contention does not find any express mention even in the memorandum of appeal preferred to this Court.

For the aforesaid reasons, I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 24 W. R. 97.
(2) 25 Ind. Cas 185; 12 A. L. J. 1150.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER No. 274 OF 1919.

May 4, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das.

Syed AMJAD HUSSAIN AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHYAM LAL AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 181—Execution of decree—Sale set aside—Fresh application for execution—Limitation—Appeal, pendency of, whether bar to applying for execution.

Where a sale held in execution of a decree is set aside, the decree-holder has a period of three years from the date of the order setting aside the sale to again apply for execution. The fact that the order forms the subject of an appeal is no bar to the making of an application for execution during the pendency of the appeal within the aforesaid period of three years [p. 1005, col. 2; p. 1006, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the District Judge, Gaya.

Mr. Nawal Kishore Prasad II, for the Appellants.

Mr. L. N. Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order of the District Judge of Gaya allowing execution to proceed and disallowing an objection of the judgment-debtors that execution was barred by limitation. It appears that on the 14th July 1909 the decree-holders presented their second application for execution. On the 14th December the properties were sold in execution of the decree which had been obtained by the decree-holders on the 24th May 1904. On the 13th January 1910 the judgment-debtors applied for setting aside the sale and on the 12th February 1910 the sale was actually set aside and the execution case was dismissed. On the 10th December 1912 the decree-holder presented his third application for execution by a sale of the identical properties which had once been sold. On the 14th December 1909 the judgment debtors objected to this execution proceeding on the ground that it was barred by limitation under section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure. While that objection was actually being discussed in the Courts, the execution proceeded and the properties were actually sold in execution of the decree. It was ultimately decided by the High Court on the 21st December 1916 that the decree-holder's application for execution presented on the 10th of December 1912 was not barred by limitation inasmuch as that application was to be regarded as a continuation of the second application for execution. The late Chief Justice of this Court delivering the judgment said as follows: "It may often happen that proceedings taken upon an application for execution remain pending in an original Court or Court of Appeal for several years and may result in an order setting aside a sale of immoveable property many years after the application for execution was presented and many years after any of the dates indicated in the third column of Article 182 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act. This has often been pointed out by the Courts and in order to get over the difficulty, some Courts have held that a subsequent application should be treated as an application made in continuation of the application made before the sale and other Courts have held that such an application is governed by Article 181 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act and that the decree-holder is entitled to three years from the date on which the sale is set aside within which to make a further application. It seems certain that the Legislature could not have intended that further execution of a decree should be prevented by the fact that execution proceedings remained pending in the Courts for many years." It seems to me that that decision is based on the fact that the third application for execution was regarded as a continuation of the second application for execution and as it was filed within three years from the date when the sale was set aside, the Court properly regarded the application as within time.

Although the question of limitation was discussed from Court to Court until it was finally decided by this Court on the 21st of December 1916, the execution, as I have said before, proceeded with the result that the properties were sold in pursuance of the petition presented by the decree-holder. That sale was again set aside on the 5th August 1913, that is to say, long before the question of limitation was actually decided by this Court. The present application for execution was filed on the 19th December 1918.

It seems to me that this application is clearly barred by limitation. The sale was set aside on the 5th August 1913 and under Article 181 of the Limitation Act the next application for execution should have been filed within three years from the 5th August 1913 It was urged, however, on behalf of the decree holder that as the question of limitation was not finally decided until the 21st of December 1916, it would have been of no use to the decree-holder to present an application for execution until that question was finally set at rest. In my view, this argument is not a sound one. The fact that the question of limitation had not been decided by this Court constituted no bar to the decree holders' proceeding with their application for execution. It was no bar in law and it could not be a bar in fact. There was nothing to prevent the decree-holders from presenting their application for execution asking the Court not to actually deal with it until the question was decided by the High Court. As a matter of fact the question of limitation had been raised by the judgment-debtor as soon as the decree-holders presented their third application for execution on the 10th of December 1912. But notwithstanding the objection raised by the judgment debtor, the decree-holders did proceed with the execution with the result that the properties were actually sold in execution of the decree, a sale which was ultimately set aside on the application of the judgment-debtor. In my view as there was no bar at all to the decree holders' proceeding with their execution at any time within three years from the 5th August 1913, it must be held that their application presented on the 13th of December 1918 was barred by limitation. I would set aside the judgment pronounced by the learned District Judge and dismiss the application for execution. The appellants are entitled to their costs, which I assess at two gold mohurs.

Application dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 295 OF 1919.

May 5, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

BALWANT SINGH—DECREE HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

BUDH SINGH AND OTHERS—OBJECTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 181—Execution of decree—Interposition of bar to execution—Fresh application, when to be made—Limtiation.

Where a bar is interposed which prevents the holder of a decree from carrying on execution, as for instance, where execution is restrained by injunction, he must, to save execution being barred by limitation, come into Court within three years of the removal of the bar under Article 181 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. [p. 1007, col. 1.]

Execution first appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Meerut, dated the 5th May 1919.

Dr. S. N. Sen and Mr. N. Upadhya, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, and Dr. P. N. Katju, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of an application in execution proceedings. The appellant obtained a decree No. 38 of 1912 for sale of the hypothecated property on the 8th of July 1912. This was made absolute on the 29th August 1913. The first application for execution was made on the 18th of April 1914. While this application was pending, the objectors instituted a suit No. 523 of 1914 on the 8th of December 1914 for a declaration that the decree in Suit No. 38 of 1912 had been obtained by fraud. On the 9th of December 1914 they applied for and obtained an injunction restraining the opposite party from executing the decree in Suit No. 33 of 1912. This suit was dismissed on the 26th of April 1915, and with that dismissal the bar of the injunction came to an end. An appeal was filed in the High Court on the 30th of November 1915. It was finally dismissed on the 19th of April 1917. The present application for execution, which may be taken as an application in continuation of the former application (which was struck off pending the decision of the Suit No. 523 of 1914), was made on the 11th of June 1918. Objection was taken that the application was barred by time. The lower Court upheld this objection and dismissed the application. It has relied upon a long series of decisions of both this and the Bombay and Calcutta High Courts. The last decision is that in Ruddar Singh v. Dhanpal Singh (1). If we compare this last case with the case which is now before us, it is impossible to distinguish the one from the other. The decision referred to exactly covers the present case. Our attention was called to the decisions reported as Moinuddin Khan v. Ohajju Singh (2) and Shaikh Kamar-ud-din v.

(1) 26 A. 156; A. W. N. (1903) 221.
(2) 2 A. L. J. 276.

Jawahir Lal (3), but a careful examination of both these decisions will show that they are not on all fours with the facts of the present case and do not help us. If we assume (and we think that it may fairly be assumed) that the present application is one in continuation of the former, even then Article 181 of the Limitation Act must apply and it was necessary for the appellant to come into Court within three years of the removal of the bar which prevented his carrying on the execution of his decree. That bar was removed by the decision of the first Court on the 26th of April 1915. We are asked to give the appellant a further extension of time and to calculate the three years from the 19th of April 1917, the date on which the High Court dismissed the appeal. We cannot see how this can possibly be done. The learned Counsel for the appellant admits that on the 27th of April 1917 his client could legally have applied for execution as he has now applied and that there was nothing to prevent him carrying on the execution from that date onwards. It is, therefore, clear that time began to run against him after the decision of the 26th of April 1915. We would point out that he is not entitled to much sympathy, for though the High Court had dismissed the appeal on the 19th of April 1917, he still waited till the 11th of June 1918 before he came to Court. He has been negligent of his rights and the law does not look with favour on persons or litigants of that description. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed. We direct that each party pay its own costs in this matter in view of the circumstances of this case and the dishonest conduct of the opposite party.

Appeal dismissed.

(3) 2 A. L. J. 397; 1 C. L. J. 381; 9 C. W. N. 601; 15 M. L. J. 258; 27 A. 334; 32 I. A. 102; 7 Bom. L. R. 433; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 810 (P. C.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 185 OF 1918.

August 26, 1919.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Chaudhuri, KT., and Mr. Justice Cuming.

BEJOY KUMAR ADDYA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SATISH CHANDRA GHOSE AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Mortgage—Interest, high rate of—Court, power of, to reduce rate of interest—Undue influence—Hard and unconscionable bargain.

In the absence of any thing to show that undue advantage was taken of a mortgagor, or that his will was dominated or that the terms of the mortgage were extorted from him in any way, the mortgagee is entitled to interest at the contract rate, and the Court ought not to come to the conclusion that the stipulation in the mortgage-deed as to interest is hard and unconscionable. [p. 1008, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, 24-Pergunnas, dated the 26th of February 1918.

Babus Ram Chandra Majumdar, Ramendra Mohan Majumdar and Promotha Nath Bandopadhya, for the Appellants.

Babus Brojolal Chakraberty, Anilendra N. Roy Chowdhuri and Gour Mohon Dutt, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHAUDHURI, J.—The only question raised in this appeal is that of interest.

The learned Subordinate Judge, relying on the authority of Abdul Majid v. Ksherode Chandra Pal (1) and Chhallaphroo v. Banga Behary (2) has reduced the rate from 15 per cent. with quarterly rests to 12 per cent. simple interest upto the date of suit. He disallowed interest after that date. He says: "The security seems to be quite sufficient. Regard being had to the cases above mentioned and other rulings, the circumstances above noted, namely, that the suit had been delayed and interest had accumulated would go to show that the stipulation as to interest is hard and unconscionable."

So far as those two cases are concerned, they have not always been accepted by

(1) 29 Ind. Cas. 843; 19 C. W. N. 809; 42 C. 690.
(2) 31 Ind. Cas. 394; 20 C. W. N. 408; 22 C. L. J. 311.

this Court as correct. The recent Privy Council decision in Aziz Khan v. Duni Chand (3) lays down that unless it can be shown that undue advantage had been taken, the Court ought not to come to the conclusion that the transaction is hard and unconscionable.

These matters are matters of contract between the parties. The learned Vakil appearing for the respondent urged that there was undue influence and that the onus was upon the mortgagee to show that there was none. But one of the requisites for that contention is that the person in whose favour the document stands was in a position to dominate the will of the executant. There is nothing to show that the money-lender dominated the will of the debtor in this case. No issue was raised on that point, no evidence was given; there is no evidence on the record that any advantage was taken of the lady, or that she did not borrow at the ordinary rate of interest prevailing at that time. In fact, there is evidence that the executor of her husband's Will borrowed at the same rate of interest on his personal account. He was a man of business and he had to pay the same rate of interest.

Then we have the evidence of Girish Chandra Ghose, witness No. 2, for the defendant, that at that time the usual rate of interest was Re. 1 or Re. 1-4-0 per cent. per month, that rarely it was Re. 1 annas 8 and that it was usual to enter compound interest with quarterly rests.

It must not be overlooked that this was a transaction with a Mitakshara lady and that the security, which the learned Subordinate Judge thought was sufficient, may not have been so considered when the money was advanced. However that may be, there is nothing to show that undue advantage was taken of this lady, that her will was dominated or that the terms were extorted from her in any way.

It has also been urged that in respect of mortgages executed by Hindu widows, where the Court has found that there was no necessity to borrow at a high rate of interest, such rate has been reduced. The cases in Kameswar Pershad v. Run Bahadur Singh (4), Hurro Nath Rai Chowdhri v. Randhir Singh (5) and Nawab Nasir Begam v. Rao Baghunath Singh (6) have been relied upon. But in this case, the title of this lady is the title of an owner and, therefore, those cases do not appear to have anything to do with the matter.

The learned Subordinate Judge has relied upon the delay. It appears, however, from the Kabala of defendant No. 2 that at the time when that Kabala was executed, the debt which was due by this lady to the plaintiff was calculated at Rs. 2,800. This sum the defendant undertook to pay but he kept the money with him and did not pay. He waited for 9 years and kept the money in hand. He is responsible for the delay; he knew the rate of interest which was charged when he took the Kabala and kept the money with him, and yet he took no steps to pay the debt. For him to say that since he has purchased both the widow's interest and the interest of the reversioners, he ought to be relieved from paying at such a high rate of interest, seems to us to be absurd. It is not correct that he has purchased from the reversioners.

The appeal is, therefore, allowed with costs in both Courts. We assess the hearing fee at five gold mohurs. The plaintiff would be entitled to interest at the contract rate up to the date fixed for payment, namely, three months from this date. After that there will be interest at 6 per cent. If there is no contest as regards the amount, the decree may be drawn up here.

CUMING, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

(3) 48 Ind. Cas. 933; 23 C. W. N. 130; 101 P. R. 1918; 165 P. W. R. 1918 (P. C.).

(4) 6 C. 842; 8 C. L. R. 361; 8 I. A. 8; 4 Shome L. R. 81; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 210; 5 Ind. Jur. 157; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 545.

(5) 18 C. 311; 18 I. A. 1; 15 Ind. Jur. 34; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 642; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 207.

(6) 50 Ind. Cas. 434; 46 I. A. 145; 36 M. L. J. 521; 17 A. L. J. 591; 23 C. W. N. 709; 21 Bom. L. R. 484; 26 M. L. T. 40; 30 C. L. J. 66; (1919) M. W. N. 498; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 49; 41 A. 571; 11 L. W. 188 (P. C.).

END OF VOLUME LVI.

GENERAL INDEX.

VOLUME LVI—1920.

—— :·o:· O :o·: ——

Abadi—Mortgage of house by non-proprietor—Presumption See CUSTOM 11

Account.books, withholding of—Presumption

Where a party persistently omits to produce his books of account, there is a justifiable presumption that they are not produced because they do not support him N PADAMRAJ v GOPIKISAN 129

Accounts, settled, when can be re-opened.

A settled account cannot be re opened without specifically charging at least one definite and important error and supporting that error with evidence confirming it N PADAMRAJ v. GOPIKISAN 129

——, suit for, against lambardar—Parties, necessary—Co-sharers, whether must be joined

A suit against a lambardar for accounts in respect of one item of village property by one of the persons jointly interested in a portion of the village is not maintainable, unless all the other persons jointly interested are joined either as plaintiffs or as defendants.

As between a lambardar and a person who is jointly interested with others in a patti, there is no such privity of contract as would entitle the latter to treat the former as his agent in respect of the item owned by him N HARIDAS CHATTERJI v GAHENABAI 71

——, suit for—Books in possession of plaintiff—Failure to produce books, effect of—Presumption—Evidence, secondary, admissibility of.

In a suit for accounts every presumption should be made against a party who withholds the accounts

A plaintiff who has the accounts with him cannot ask a Court to take accounts whilst he withholds the evidence in his power

Plaintiffs sued defendants for an account and for Rs. [illegible], 0 alleged to be due to them out of the partnership funds It was proved that the books of account were in the plaintiffs' possession:

Held, (1) that the loss of the books not having been proved, secondary evidence of the accounts was not admissible;

(2) that the books of account being in the plaintiffs' possession, the defendants could not be called upon to give any account. L THAKUR DAS v. GOWARDHAN 940

——, suit for, by minor against agent appointed by guardian, maintainability of—Arbitrators, settlement by, when liable to be re-opened Fraud, proof of.

An agent appointed by the guardian of a minor is not liable to account to the minor for his acts as an agent on the principle applicable to trustees or persons intermeddling with the trust estate. The rule laid down with respect to trustees de son tort cannot be extended to persons in the position of agents of the guardian of a minor

A settlement made by arbitrators cannot be re-opened except on the ground of fraud. M RAMANATHAN CHETTIAR v MUTHIAH CHETTY, 38 M. L. J. 247; 11 L W. 405; 43 M. 429; 1920 M. W. N. 270 358

Acknowledgment of debt, effect of—Suit, whether can be based on acknowledgment—Account stated, what is

An acknowledgment of a debt only enures to the benefit of the creditor for the purpose of saving limitation if it is made before the original debt is time-barred but the basis of a suit is always the original debt. No suit can be maintained upon a mere acknowledgment of a debt.

"An account stated" is one where several cross-items are set off one against the other and the balance is struck off in favour of one of the parties In such a case the law implies a new promise by the other party to pay the balance in consideration not merely of past debts but also of the extinguishment of the old debts on each side, and hence it is not necessary that a statement of account should be made within the period of limitation for the recovery of several cross-items P [illegible] SURAJ PRASAD PANDEY v BROUCKE, P. L. T. [illegible]; P L J [illegible] U P L R Pat 65 379

ct of ourt—Party, whether can be prejudiced by act of Court See IVIL PROCEDURE ODE, s [illegible] 4

Acts—General.

Act 18 8—XXXIV. See LUNACY ACT.
—— 1859—XIII. See WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT.
—— 1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.
—— 8 1—V. See POLICE ACT.
—— 1865—X See SUCCESSION ACT.
—— 1867—III See PUBLIC GAMBLING ACT.
—— 187 —VII. See COURT FEES ACT.
—— 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
—— 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
—— 1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
—— 1878—I. See OPIUM ACT.
—— 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.

Acts—General—concld.

Act 1881—V. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT.
—— 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.
—— 1882—II. See TRUSTS ACT.
—— 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
—— 1882—VI. See COMPANIES ACT.
—— 1882—XIV. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1887—VII. See SUITS VALUATION ACT.
—— 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
—— 1889—VII. See SUCCESSION CERTIFICATE ACT.
—— 1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT.
—— 1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT
—— 1894—I. See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
—— 1897—IX. See PROVIDENT FUNDS ACT.
—— 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1899—II. See STAMP ACT.
—— 1899—VIII. See PETROLEUM ACT.
—— 1899—IX. See ARBITRATION ACT.
—— 1907—III. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
—— 1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
—— 1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.
—— 1909—III. See PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT.
—— 1910—II. See PAPER CURRENCY ACT.
—— 1911—III. See CRIMINAL TRIBES ACT.
—— 1913—III. See ADMINISTRATOR GENERALS ACT.
—— 1915—XVI. See BENARES HINDU UNIVERSITY ACT.
—— 1919—X. See EXCESS PROFITS DUTY ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bengal.

—— 1865—VIII. See BENGAL RENT RECOVERY ACT.
—— 1884—III. See BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1885—VIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
—— 1897—V. See BENGAL ESTATES PARTITION ACT.
—— 1899—III. See CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1911—V. See CALCUTTA IMPROVEMENT ACT.
—— 1917—I. See BENGAL GHEE ADULTERATION ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bihar and Orissa.

—— 1904—IV. See BIHAR AND ORISSA PUBLIC DEMANDS RECOVERY ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Bombay.

—— 1874—III. See BOMBAY HEREDITARY OFFICES ACT.
—— 1896—XX. See SIND ENCUMBERED ESTATES ACT.
—— 1901—III. See BOMBAY DISTRICT MUNICIPAL ACT.

Acts (Local)—Burma.

—— 1917—V. See BURMA EXCISE ACT.

Acts—(Local)—C. P.

—— 1898—XI. See C. P TENANCY ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Madras.

—— 1908—I. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT.

Acts—(Local)—Punjab.

—— 1887—XVI. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.
—— 1905—II. See PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT.

Acts—(Local)—U. P.

Act 1911—III. See PUNJAB MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1914—III. See PUNJAB COURTS ACT.
—— 1919—IX. See PUNJAB COURTS ACT.
—— 1886—XXII See OUDH RENT ACT.
—— 1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.
—— 1901—III. See U. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1917—I. See U. P. PUBLIC GAMBLING (AMENDMENT) ACT.

Ordinances.

Ord. 1915—II. See INDIAN SOLDIERS (LITIGATION) ORDINANCE.
—— 1919—IV. See MARTIAL LAW ORDINANCE.

Regulations.

Reg. 1819—VIII. See BENGAL PATNI REGULATION.
—— 1825—XI. See BENGAL ALLUVION AND DILUVION REGULATION.
—— 1892—III. See SIND FRONTIER REGULATION.

Statutes.

1915—(5 & 6, GEO. V, C. 61). See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT.
1916—(6 & 7, GEO V, C. 37). See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA (AMENDMENT) ACT.

Administrator Generals Act (III of 1913), s. 11, applicability of, where Administrator-General appointed executor.

The fact that the Administrator-General is appointed to be the executor of a Will, is no bar to his obtaining, under section 11 of the Administrator-General's Act, an order to take possession of the assets before applying for Probate of the Will. C PASUPATI MUKHERJEE, In the goods of, 24 C. W. N. 326 431

Admission, effect of.

What a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, and, until the presumption is rebutted, the fact admitted must be taken to be established. L VIR SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH, 1 L. 137 191

Adverse possession between co-sharers—Sole possession and non-payment of rent, whether enough, effect of—Burden of proof.

In order to establish adverse possession as between co-sharers, there must be evidence of an open assertion of a hostile act on the part of the co-sharers setting up adverse possession with notice to the others, and mere non-participation in the profits by one party and exclusive occupation by the other party is insufficient.

Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that certain land belonged to them and that the entry in the revenue records showing defendants as owners of 1/3rd of this land was wrong. It appeared that the plaintiffs had been long in possession of the land in suit and had paid no rent:

Held, that the fact that the plaintiffs had held sole possession and had paid no rent was not sufficient to prove that defendants were not co-sharers, nor was it sufficient to establish the plaintiffs' adverse possession. L BALAK RAM v. KAURA, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 94 169 ——— ——— between tenants-in-common—Non-participation in rents and profits, effect of.

In order to establish adverse possession by on Adverse possession—concld.

tenant-in-common against his co-tenants, there must be exclusion or ouster of the co-tenants and the possession subsequent to that must be for the statutory period. What is sufficient evidence of exclusion must depend upon the circumstances of each case. Mere non-participation in rents and profits would not necessarily of itself amount to adverse possession but such non-participation or non-possession may, in the circumstances of a particular case, amount to adverse possession Regard must be had to all the circumstances, the most important element being the length of time. C GOVINDA CHANDRA v DINA NATH, 23 C. W. N. 977: 30 C. L. J. 512; 47 C. 274 141 ———Person in continuous possession without title for over 12 years, status of—Under-proprietary rights, acquisition of.

Where a person who has lost all his rights in certain land retains possession thereof, to the knowledge of the superior proprietor, without any title whatever, and is continuously recorded for more than 12 years as under-proprietor, he acquires the status of under-proprietor by adverse possession. O NADIR SINGH v. ANPURNA KUNWAR, 7. O. L. J. 282; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 113 759

———Trespasser, position of—Surface working, whether gives title to sub-soil rights.

A wrong-doer's rights by adverse possession must be confined to the land of which he is in actual possession.

Where an owner of land sells it reserving to himself the minerals, he retains possession of the minerals in the same way as if he had not sold the surface. Non-user is not an abandonment of possession. Consequently, no matter how long mines remain unworked by the owner, his right is not barred so long as they are not worked by some one else.

There may be cases in which a title by adverse possession can be made out in respect to minerals, but it does not follow that by working a part of the minerals or opening up particular quarries possession over a continuous field of minerals or of quarries of which the portion worked forms part can be obtained.

A mere surface working cannot give any claim by adverse possession to the whole of the coal seam or to any portion of it beyond that which is actually extracted. Pat KUMAR PREMATHA NATH MALIA v. MEIK, (1920) Pat. 146; 5 P. L. J. 273; 1 P. L. T. 360 184

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 10 (1)—Transfer of proprietary right—Sir land, lease of, validity of.

Proprietors, when selling or about to sell their property, cannot be allowed to deprive themselves by any trickery or subterfuge of the rights which section 10 (1) of the Agra Tenancy Act was framed to give them.

Therefore, a collusive lease of sir land intended to defeat the law is entirely void. U P B R HEM KUAR v. SEWA RAM, 2 U. P L. R. (B R) 15 645

——— s. 14—Hindu joint family, holding let to member of—Ejectment—Holding let to other members of family—Tenancy, whether continuous.

A member of a Hindu joint family taking land on lease from a landholder in his individual capacity is the sole tenant of that landholder to the exclusion of the other members of the joint family and when he is ejected from the holding, and the holding is immediately let to his brothers, the latter are not entitled to count the period of cultivation when their brother was recorded as tenant towards the period necessary for acquiring occupancy rights. U P B R WIDHYA RAM v. SOBHA RAM, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 43 764

Agra Tenancy Act—contd.

——— s. 34—Grove brought under cultivation—Grove-holder, status of—Landlord, right of, to eject

When grove land is brought under cultivation, the holder thereof loses his rights and is liable to be treated by the land-holder as a tenant under section 34, Agra Tenancy Act, and to be ejected. U P B R KISHORI SARAN v RAMESHWAR, 2 U P L R (B. R.) 67 980

——— s. 47—Enhancement of rent provided for in lease, whether enlarges period of tenancy.

A lease for a term of years which provides for a rise in the rent in the last year of the lease confers no right on the tenant to continue in possession after the termination of the period of the lease. To such a case section 47 of the Agra Tenancy Act does not apply. U P B R HANIF-UN-NISA v. RAM DAYAL, 2. U P. L. R. (B. R.) 36 46

——— s. 58—Ejectment suit—Proprietary title, question of—Appeal, forum of.

In an ejectment suit in which the defendant pleads that he is not holding the land as tenant of the plaintiff but as his own khudkasht without liability to pay rent to anybody, a question of proprietary title is raised and an appeal lies to the District Judge, and not to the Commissioner. U P B R CHANDAN SINGH v. BHORA LAL, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 53 549

——— s. 79—Suit to recover possession of holding—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Revision—High Court, interference by.

Where a person seeks to recover possession of his holding the suit should be brought under section 79 of the Agra Tenancy Act and over such a suit the Revenue Court alone has jurisdiction

The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere in revision where a Civil Court has wrongly entertained a suit cognizable by a Revenue Court. A TAJAMAL HUSSAIN v. ALI BAHADUR KHAN 946

——— s. 177 (e)—"Question f proprietary title"—Defendant holding as proprietor—Appeal, forum of.

The question whether a defendant is holding as a sub-tenant or is cultivating the land as khudkasht with no obligations to pay rent to anybody is a real question of proprietary title within the meaning of section 177 (e) of the Agra Tenancy Act, and in such a case an appeal lies to the District Judge and not to the Commissioner. U P B R BADAMI v. KARORI, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 46 601

——— s. 185—Material irregularity, what amounts to—Burden of proof, wrong allocation of.

The failure to consider a finding on remand and basing an order upon a wrong allocation of the burden of proof are material irregularities within the meaning of section 187 of the Agra Tenancy Act. U P B R CHAKARPAN v. NATHUA, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 22 287

Agra Tenancy Act—concld.

——— s. 194 (1)—Lambardari mahal—Lambardar, duty of, to realise arrears of rent, extent of.

In a lambardari mahal the lambardar is, from the date of his appointment, the agent appointed to act on behalf of the co-sharers and he is the only person who has a right to institute a suit against a defaulting tenant for the recovery of any arrears of rent not statute-barred, whether of his time or prior to his appointment as such. A MOJIZ FATIMA v. ALI AKBAR, 18 A. L. J. 435; 42 A 414 112

Appeal (Civil)—Appellate Court, finding by, that transaction is not benami—Remand—Same Court, finding by, that transaction is benami—Second finding, whether justified.

Plaintiff sought to recover possession of certain lands on the strength of a Patni Settlement in his favour. His suit was dismissed on the ground that the Patni was a benami transaction The Appellate Court, however, found for the plaintiff that the Patni was not a benami transaction. Defendant appealed to the High Court, which remanded the case for a finding whether the Patni fell within the class of tenures described in section 71 (b of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation. The lower Appellate Court found that the Patni was not bona fide and, therefore, did not come under the foregoing section. The plaintiff objected that that Court having already found that the Patni was not benami had no power to arrive at a contrary finding:

Held, that the finding was justified, inasmuch as in arriving at its previous finding the Court apparently had not taken all the facts into consideration. C JATINDRA KUMAR PAL v. MUKSHODA CHARAN DAS 1001

——— Connected suits—Appeal in one—Appellate Court, whether can arrive at conflicting findings. See JURISDICTION 282

——— Costs, question of—Judgment not involving question of principle.

An appeal which raises a question of costs only and in which no question of principle is involved is not competent. C UMESH CHANDRA DUTT v. BHIBUTI BHUSAN PAL, 47 C. 67 334

——— Finding of first Court not concurred in by Appellate Court—Duty of Appellate Court.

Where an Appellate Court does not find itself in agreement with the finding of the trial Court, it should come to an independent finding of its own upon the evidence on the record. C MAJARADDIN KABIRAJ v. MAJIBAR RAHMAN 248

——— Further investigation necessary—Appellate Court, duty of. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XLI, R. 23 516

——— Gift, validity of, not questioned in trial Court, whether can be questioned in Court of Appeal—Procedure. See PLEADINGS 179

——— New point, whether can be raised at hearing.

A point not taken in the trial Court, nor raised in the memorandum of appeal, may be urged at the hearing of an appeal if it goes to the root of the matter and raises the question of the competency of the Court to grant the relief claimed. C RAM KISSEN JOYDOYAL v. POORAN MULL, 51 C. J. 259 571

Appeal (Civil)—concld.

——— to his Majesty in Council—Practice of Privy Council—Point, fresh, whether can be raised.

It is not in consonance with the practice of the Privy Council upon the hearing of an appeal to entertain a point not raised in either of the Courts below nor presented upon the appeal. P C IDRIS v. MRS. JANE SKINNER, 82 P. R. 1919; 45 P. W. R. 1919 723

——— to Privy Council—Death of respondent—Appeal heard in ignorance—Decree, whether can be ignored.

Where, pending the hearing of an appeal before the Privy Council, one of the respondents dies and his legal representatives are not brought upon the record and the appeal is heard in ignorance of the fact of death, the decree pronounced by the Privy Council cannot be ignored by the Courts in India. Pat DEONANDAN PRASAD SINGH v. JANKI SINGH, 5 P. L. J. 314; 1 P. L. T. 325; 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 108; (1920) Pat 266 322 ——— (Criminal)—Pleader appearing for accused without vakalatnama—Procedure.

Where an accused person is represented by a Pleader in an appeal, but the latter has no vakalatnama, the proper course is to adjourn the hearing of the appeal until one is forthcoming, and thus afford the accused an opportunity of being represented. C JASIR KHAN v EMPEROR, 21 Cr. L. J. 413 61

——— (Second)—Document, admissibility of—Objection, whether can be taken in second appeal—Finding by trial Court—Appellate Court, difference by—Reasons for finding

An objection to the admissibility of a document cannot be taken for the first time in second appeal where an answer to the objection involves an enquiry into facts.

An Appellate Court, in arriving at a conclusion different from that of the Court of first instance, should state its reasons for the same in order to enable a Court of second appeal to see whether the conclusion has been legally drawn C RAJ MOHON DHUPI v. HARENDRA CHANDRA 816

——— Finding of fact based on no evidence, whether binding

Where a finding of fact is arrived at by a wrong construction of the pleadings, and upon no evidence, the finding is liable to be set aside in second appeal. Pat RAGHUNATH CHATTERJI v. JUTHU CHATTAR, 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 97 466

——— ———Finding of fact, when can be questioned in.

A finding of fact is binding on a Court of second appeal, but when no reasons are given for such finding and no reference is made to the evidence on which it is based, the finding can be questioned in second appeal. U P B K SHEIKH MOHAMMAD v. JANKI, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 55 529 ——— ——— Point involving question of fact not raised at trial, whether can be taken in second appeal.

A point which ought to be, but is not, taken in the trial Court and in respect of which no direct evidence is given cannot be taken in second appeal, especially if it involves a question of fact. C ANWAR BEWA v. SURENDRA NATH 844

Appellate Court, duty of—Failure to consider weight of evidence.

The failure by an Appellate Court to determine the critical question between the parties to a suit and to consider the oral evidence adduced on behalf of the defendant amounts to a substantial error of procedure. Pat BHIKHAN v. MARDAN ALI 40

——— , power of, to remand case for further inquiry —Inherent powe of ourt to make inquiry. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 195 (6) 511

Appropriation, doctrine of, applicability of, to contribution. See CO-SHARERS 49

Approver—Statement made at end of trial, value of—Corroboration—Statements extorted by Police under threat of implication, value of.

An approver's evidence is in itself tainted evidence though in some cases it may be worthy of belief for various reasons, but the uncorroborated statement of an approver taken at the end of the trial is of no value whatever.

Statements of witnesses extorted by the Police under threats of implication in the crime cannot fail to detract from the value of their evidence especially where they had no reason for refraining from deposing against the culprits. L SUNDAR SINGH v. EMPEROR, 105 P L. R. 1920; 21 Cr. L. J. 507 667

Arbitration—Award embodying agreement between parties, validity of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings, when should be allowed.

The fact that an award embodies an agreement arrived at between the parties does not prevent it being a valid and binding award

An award when delivered is binding upon the parties

The law relating to the amendment of pleadings, as contained in Order VI, rule 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, confers a plenary authority upon the Court to allow a party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and upon such terms as may be just, and the amendment may be allowed at any stage of the proceedings

An amendment should always be allowed if thereby the real substantial question can be raised between the parties and multiplicity of legal proceedings avoided.

Plaintiffs sued their quondam partner for rendition of accounts of the partnership and for recovery of money due to them. It appeared that the dispute had been referred to the arbitration of one L. who had given an award on 30th September 1914, which award was accepted by the parties and signed by them in token of their assent. The suit was instituted on 1st October 1914:

Held, (1) that the award was binding on the parties and the suit could not be maintained;

(2) that the plaint could be amended so as to embody a prayer for a decree in accordance with the award and that such decree could be passed. L DARBARI LAL v. WASU MALIK 115

——— Award - Minor not properly represented—Guardian, negligence of—Award, whether binding on minor—Agreement between parties, award based on, validity of - Guardian, whether can bind ward's reversionary interest.

Where a reference to arbitration is made on behalf of a minor but the latter is not properly represented in the arbitration proceedings and his guardian fails grossly and fraudulently in his duty to protect his interests, the award passed by the arbitrators is not binding on the minor.

The rule that an award is not open to objection on the sole ground that it merely reproduces an agreement come to between the parties, applies only where the consent of the parties is regarded by the arbitrators as evidence that the settlement proposed is fair to all.

A guardian is incompetent to bind his ward's reversionary interest by a reference to arbitration. M KANATALA VENKATA KRISHNAMA CHARLU v. KANDALA PERUNDEVAMMA 593 ——— clause, construction of—Disputes, several—Awards, successive, whether permissible.

Where in a commercial contract there is a clause with the words "any dispute whatsoever arising on or out of this contract shall be referred to arbitration," it means that each and every dispute as it arises, on or out of the contract, shall be referred to arbitration. The fact that one of the parties to the contract has obtained an award as regards a portion of his claim does not prevent him from proceeding with arbitration in respect of matters arising out of subsequent breaches of the contract.

Where there are several and separate contracts, the right conferred by the arbitration clause is not fully exhausted as soon as a complete award is made upon the first reference.

There may be successive awards even in the same matter. C BALMUKAND KINA v. GOPIRAM BHOTICA, 31 C. L. J. 391 828

——— Contract, clause in, providing for arbitration—Cross-contract in precisely similar terms, effect of, on contract—Arbitration, whether may be claimed

Where there is a contract and a subsequent cross-contract on the same printed form, containing the same clauses, for the same quantity of goods of the same kind and for the same delivery, the obligations under the earlier contract are extinguished, being cancelled by the latter cross-contract, which has the effect of fixing the difference to be paid by one party to the other, and it is not open to either of the parties to the earlier contract to claim arbitration, there being no difference which is referable to arbitration, mere non-payment not amounting to such a difference. S FIRM OF POKERDAS KISHINDAS v. FIRM OF VISHINJI GORDHANDAS, 14 S L. R. 18. 514

——— Notice to parties, whether essential—Arbitrator, proceeding ex parte, duty of—Award against firm, validity of—Award, how to be enforced.

When arbitrators assume the burden of their duty, their first duty is to see that the parties have had notice, and sufficient notice, to enable them to appear before the tribunal and put their case. If they do not appear before them, it is the duty of the arbitrators to make sure that they have no sort of excuse for not appearing. When the arbitrators have failed to discharge this duty, their award must be set aside

An award of arbitrators is not bad because it is made against a firm. Under the Arbitration Act an award is not a decree, but it is to be enforced as though it were a decree. The provisions which relate to the execution of a decree against a firm apply in the case of an award which has been filed, the award having been made against the firm.

Arbitration—concld.

C PURUSOTTUM DAS NARAIN DAS v. LOUIS DREYFUS & Co. 47 C. 29 325

——— Withdrawal of one arbitrator, effect of, on arbitration—Court, duty of—Procedure.

Where two arbitrators are appointed to decide a case and one of them withdraws before the arbitration is completed, the remaining arbitrator cannot proceed with the case and file an award. It is the duty of the Court in such a case to appoint another arbitrator in place of the arbitrator who has withdrawn or to supersede the arbitration and decide the case on the merits. L THAKAR DAS v. NARAIN 644

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 14—Award, suit to impeach, maintainability of.

When an award has been made and filed, and has become enforceable as a decree of Court, a party affected thereby can maintain a suit to impeach it on grounds not included within the scope of section 14 of the Arbitration Act, and to investigate and determine the controversy according to the procedure prescribed by law, especially where the ground of the attack goes to the root of the matter. C RADHA KISSEN KHETRY v. LUKHMI CHAND JHAWAR, 31 C. L. J. 243; 24 C. W. N. 454 541

——— s. 19—Agreement to refer dispute to arbitration—Suit, institution of—Stay of suit—Duty of Court—Onus—Questions of law and fact, competency of arbitrators to decide—"Merchant," meaning of—Broker, whether merchant.

Where there is an agreement to refer matters in dispute to arbitration, and one of the parties institutes a suit relating to those matters, it is the prima facie duty of the Court, on receiving an application under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, to stay the suit, the onus being on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by his agreement to refer to arbitration.

Arbitrators are competent to decide questions of law and fact; the fact that a difficult question of law is involved is not ordinarily a good ground for refusing to stay a suit.

The term "merchant" according to Karachi mercantile usage is synonymous with a member of the mercantile community of Karachi and covers the case of brokers as well as those dealing in the actual sale and purchase of goods. S ABDULLAH HAROON v. SASSOON & Co., 13 S. L. R. 201 76

——— s. 19—Agreement to refer suit filed after reference, maintainability of——Award after institution of suit—Reference and award, whether bar suit—Stay of suit.

Where the parties to a dispute agree to refer matters in dispute to arbitration, the fact that arbitration proceedings are pending is no bar to the entertainment of a suit relating to the matters referred to arbitration. The defendant's remedy in such a case is to apply for a stay of the suit, and if he fails to do so, the Court can proceed to adjudicate upon the matters covered by the reference and its jurisdiction is not taken away because the arbitrators proceed to make an award after the filing of the suit, even though such award may not have been made before any written statement is filed. S RAMCHAND GURDASMALL v. GOBIND-RAM, 13 S. L. R. 193 150

Arbitrators, settlement by, when liable to be re-opened—Fraud, proof of.

A settlement made by arbitrators cannot be re-opened except on the ground of fraud. M RAMANATHAN CHETTIAR v. MUTHIAH CHETTY, 38 M. L. J. 247; 21 L. W. 405; 43 M. 423; (1920) M. W. N. 270 358

Association—Membership, expulsion from—Procedure—Duty of association.

Where an association, which is empowered to expel members for misconduct, decides to expel a member after making a fair inquiry into the truth of the facts alleged against him and after notice to him that his conduct is about to be inquired into and giving him an opportunity of stating his case, and its decision is arrived at in good faith with a view to the common interest of the association, its decision cannot be successfully challenged in a Court.

Tribunals which exercise a punitive jurisdiction on an alleged charge of misconduct, whereby a man may be deprived of his property, must act in accordance with the ordinary rules of justice and fairplay and fairly listen to both sides. In order to determine whether a tribunal of this character in the exercise of quasi-judicial powers has given a decision which cannot be successfully challenged, the Court has to investigate whether they have observed the rules of natural justice and also the particular statutory or other rules, if any, prescribed for their guidance.

The rules of natural justice demand that a man is not to be removed from office or membership or otherwise dealt with to his disadvantage, without having a fair and sufficient notice of what is alleged against him and an opportunity of making his defence, and that the decision, whatever it is, must be arrived at in good faith with a view to the common interest of the society or institution concerned. If these conditions are satisfied, a Court of justice will not interfere with the decision C MOHAMED KALIMUDDIN v. STEWART, 31 C. L. J. 247; 47 C. 623 556

Attachment before judgment—Release of property on security being furnished—Execution against property given as security—Preferential right, whether exists. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XXXIX, r. 6 267

Batwara map prepared in partition proceedings between proprietors, admissibility of, as evidence against tenants—Objection as to admissibility, time for taking

A batwara map prepared in a partition proceeding between the proprietors of an estate is no evidence against tenants of the estate, if it was prepared after their tenancy was created. But where a Commissioner is appointed to make an inquiry with reference to the map and no objection is taken to its admissibility, it is too late to object after he has made his report. C BANAMALI PAUL v. SATIS CHANDRA DUTT 138

Benami transaction—Bond taken by creditor in name of concubine's mother, whether enforceable—Immoral consideration.

Where a bond executed for repayment of a loan is taken by the creditor in the name of his concubine's mother, the debtor is not entitled to plead that the consideration for the bond is tainted with immorality and that the bond is, therefore, unenforceable.

Benami—concld.

Where the bond has been taken benami in the name of the creditor's concubine's mother, the latter or her assignee is entitled to sue as such benamidar and in that view it cannot be treated as involving the enforcement of an immoral contract between the executant and his creditor. M PONNAMBALA MUDALI v. VASUDEVA PILLAI 616

Benares Hindu University (Act XVI of 1915), s. 20 335

Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation (XI of 1825), s. 4 (1)—Gradual accession, what is—"Gained," meaning of—Common Law of England, applicability of, to India—Possession and dispossession—Land in condition unfit for actual enjoyment.

The word "gained" in clause (1) of section 4 of the Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation does not mean land washed away and afterwards identified as having reformed on its old site.

A case under clause (1) of section 4 of the Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation is not made out where the land in dispute is shown to have reformed on its old identifiable site.

The rules of the Common Law of England have no application to the Mofassil towns of India, except as rules of justice, equity and good conscience.

Where land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes at such a time, and under such circumstances that the state naturally would, and probably did, continue till within twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue, and that the plaintiff's possession continued also, until the contrary is shown. Pat BRAHMANAND SINGH v. DUND BAHADUR SINGH, 1 P. L. T. 229; (1920) PAT 245; 2 U. P. L. R (Pat) 111 344

Bengal Estates Partition Act (V B. C. of 1897), ss. 65, 119—Partition—Deputy Collector, power of, to make order under s. 65—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to disturb.

A Deputy Collector can only pass an order under section 65 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act, during the making of a partition and before he has submitted the same for the sanction of the Collector.

Where a partition has been effected, the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to disturb the same. Pat KESARI SAHAI SINGH v. HITNARAYAN SINGH, 1 P. L. T. 607 149

Bengal Ghee Adulteration Act (I B. C. of 1917), s. 2 (2)—Calcutta Municipal Act (III B C. of 1899) s. 495 A (1)—Standard of genuineness—Statutory provision, absence of—"Commercial Ghee," adulteration of.

As the Bengal Ghee Adulteration Act does not lay down a standard raising a presumption that Ghee alleged to be adulterated is not genuine, and no standard having been fixed for the purpose by any board of experts similar to the Butter Commission in England, Courts of law have to decide questions of adulteration upon such evidence as is available in each individual case. As there is no statutory provision, every case must depend upon its own evidence.

Bengal Ghee Adulteration Act—concld.

Where a certain sample of "Commercial Ghee" or buffalo Ghee was found to contain some foreign fat substituted in part for genuine Ghee:

Held, that the Ghee was adulterated within the meaning of section (2), sub-clause (2), of the Bengal Ghee Adulteration Act. C GRANDE VENKATTA v. CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA, 24 C. W. N. 388; 47 C 633; 21 Cr. L. J. 490 586

Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884), s. 85—Tax—Assessment, liability to—Criterion for determining liability—"Within", meaning of.

In order to enforce the liability of a person to be assessed with tax under section 85 of the Bengal Municipal Act, the Municipality must show that he not only has a holding within the limits of the Municipality, but that he has circumstances or property within those limits. The fact that he is in receipt of an income from property situate outside the limits of the Municipality and spends that income within those limits would not satisfy the requirements of the section. The word "within" in section 85 of the Bengal Municipal Act refers not only to property but also to circumstances. Pat MUHAMMAD ALI v CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPALITY OF BEHAR, 1 P. L. T. 561 821

Bengal Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819), s. 11 (3)—Bengal Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865), s 1[6]—Sales under Acts—Purchaser, right of—Khudkasht raiyats, whether can be ejected—Khas possession, suit for—Alternative relief claimed—Procedure—Court, duty of.

In sales under the Bengal Patni Regulation and the Bengal Rent Recovery Act, the purchaser acquires the property free from incumbrances but he is not entitled to eject khudkasht raiyats or resident and hereditary cultivators.

Where in a suit to recover khas possession or in the alternative for the assessment of fair and equitable rent, the Court finds that the plaintiff is not entitled to khas possession, it ought to determine fair and equitable rent payable in respect of the lands in suit. Pat BRAJA SUNDAR DAS v. JAGANNATH DHAL, 1 P. L. T. 258, (1920) Pat. 181 678

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 22 (3), 178—Thikadar, purchase of occupancy right by, effect of—Purchase made before 1907, validity of—Purchase made after expiry of thika—Agreement in lease not to set up occupancy rights, validity of.

Prior to the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment) Act of 1907 the acquisition by a thikadar of an occupancy right by purchase was not barred by section 22 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the amendment of the Act in 1907 did not take away rights of occupancy which had already vested in a thikadar.

Section 22 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act relates only to acquisitions of occupancy rights made by a ijaradar while still holding the ijara. It has no application to purchases of such rights made after expiry of the ijara.

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

A thikadar who purchases an occupancy holding acquires it as a non-occupancy holding

Any agreement in a lease not to set up rights of occupancy in lands in which such rights have accrued is void under section 178 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Pat PIERPONT MORGAN v. RAMJEE RAM, (19 0) Pat. 168; 5 P. L. J. 30 ; 1 P. L. T. 310 366

——— s. 23—Tenant, right of, to cut trees—Landlord, right of, to timber

Although under section 23 of the Bengal Tenancy Act a tenant has the right to cut trees growing on his holding, the landlord is entitled to the timber of the trees when cut, unless the tenant can establish a custom to the contrary. Pat RAHMIT SAHU v. MAHADEO CHAUDHURI, 1 P. L. T. 14?; 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 4 ; (92?) Pat. 129 126

——— s. 40—Commutation of rent—Compromise by some landlords, whether binding on others

Commutation of rent under section 40 of the Bengal Tenancy Act on the basis of a compromise between the tenants and some of the landlords is not binding on those landlords who were not parties to the compromise. Pat SCRAT MARAIN SINGH v. NATHUNI RAI 538

——— s. 49—Notice to quit - Mode of service—Tenants-in-common – Duty of Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. V, r. 15.

A notice to quit under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act should be served in the manner prescribed in the Civil Procedure Code for the service of a summons. Where such a notice is issued to tenants-in-common, and one of the tenants receives the notice for all, the Court should, in deciding whether service has been properly effected on all, consider the facts with reference to Order V, rule 15, of the Civil Procedure Code, or with reference to the rule that service upon one joint tenant is prima facie evidence that it reached all C HARICHARN MANDAL v. BIGHORE GAIN 127

——— ss. 50, 115—Enhancement of rent, suit for, after publication of Record of Rights—Tenant, whether entitled to presumption under s 50—S. 115, effect of, on s 50.

Where after the publication of a Record of Rights a landlord brings a suit for enhancement of rent against an occupancy raiyat, the latter is precluded from relying upon the presumption raised in section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, because the provisions of that section are controlled by section 115 of the Act Pat ABDUL BAQI v KUNJA BEHARI 818

——— ss. 50, 52 (6)—Landlord and tenant—Additional rent for additional area, suit for—Burden of proof Standard of measurement

In a suit for additional rent for additional area, the landlord must, under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, prove that there has been an increase in the area for which rent was previously paid and in order to do so, he must show that the land was measured at the time of the inception of the tenancy by a particular standard of measurement, and that there has been an increase in the area on measurement by the same standard.

The words "at the time the measurement on which the claim is based was made' in sub-section (6) of section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act refer to the measurement made at the time of the original settlement, and not to the measurement upon which the excess area is found out before the institution of the suit for additional rent. C UMED ALI v. HABIBULLAH, 31 C. L. J. 68; 47 C 268 38

Bengal Tenancy Act—concld.

——— s. 103B—Record of Rights, entry in, value of—Presumption of correctness, rebuttal of—Evidence prior to publication, whether admissible.

Evidence of a date prior to that of the publication of a Record of Rights is admissible in evidence and ought to be taken into consideration by a Court and weighed in determining whether the presumption created by an entry in the Record of Rights has been rebutted. Pat BHIKHAN v. MARDAN ALI 40

——— ss. 105A, 109—Decision under s. 105A, whether bars suit for ejectment against person not party to proceedings

A decision in a proceeding under section 105 A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, that certain persons are tenure-holders, does not bar a suit by those persons against certain other persons who were not parties to the proceeding under section 105A for ejectment of the latter on the ground that they are mere trespassers. Pat RAMYAD PANDE v GENDA TEWARI 993

——— ss. 161, 170 (3)—Rent decree—Occupancy holding, sale of—Usufructuary mortgagee, whether entitled to deposit decretal amount to prevent sale.

A usufructuary mortgagee in possession of a non-transferable occupancy holding, which has been advertised for sale in execution of a rent decree obtained against the mortgagor, has an encumbrance which is an interest voidable on the sale of the holding, and is entitled to deposit the decretal amount under section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act and prevent the sale. Pat SHEIKH AZMAT v. BIBI TAMZAN, 1 P. L. J. 3; 1 P. L. T 10?; (1920) (Pat) 49; U. P. L. R Pat) 9 490

Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act (IV of 1904), s. 26

—Arrears in respect of whole holding—Certificate in respect of part holding against one of several tenants—Purchaser, position of—Priority over purchaser under money decree

If a decree-holder in execution of a rent decree chooses to sell part of a holding, although the decree is against the whole, the decree loses the character of a rent decree

If all the tenants of a holding are not made parties to a rent suit, the decree obtained will not be a rent decree, but will be a money decree

Where in respect of the arrears of rent of a holding which stood in the name of several tenants, a certificate under the Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act was issued against only one of the tenants and only a portion of the holding was sold in execution of the certificate:

Held, that the purchaser was in the position of a purchaser in execution of a money decree and had no priority over a previous purchaser of the holding under a money decree. Pat RAMNANDAN RAM KANDU v. HARNANDAN PRASAD 463

Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), s. 167—"For anything done or purporting to have been done," meaning of—Injunction, suit for—Notice, when not necessary.

The expression "for anything done or purporting to be done" in section 167 of the Bombay District Municipal Act means that the section applies where something has been done, and not where there is an apprehension only that something will be done. A suit, therefore, against a Municipality to restrain an apprehended injury is not bad merely because the notice required by the section was not given: in such a case no notice is necessary. S VIRJI v. KARACHI MUNICIPALITY, 14 S. L. R. 46 527

Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (III of 1874), s. 15—*Settlement of village—Survey number, exclusion of—Burden of proof—*Inams and saranjams, grant of—Presumption—Grant of royal share of revenue or of soil.

Where a sanad evidencing a settlement under section 15 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act mentions a whole village, a party who alleges that a particular survey number of that village is outside the scope of the settlement must prove his allegation.

In the case of inams and saranjams in the Bombay Presidency the ordinary presumption in respect of such a settlement as the foregoing is in favour of the grant being limited to the royal share of the revenue, in the absence of any words to indicate a grant of the soil, but the absence of such words would not necessarily establish that the grant is of the royal share of the revenue only. B AMRIT VAMAN v HARI GOVIND, 22 Bom. L. R. 275, 44 B 237 411

Bond, suit on, against representative of deceased executant—Decree, form of

Where, in a suit upon a bond against the representative of the executant, the Court finds the bond to be genuine, it ought not to dismiss the suit on the ground that the deceased has left no assets, but should pass a decree against the assets of the deceased, if any, in the hands of the defendant A BASTI RAM v. RUSTAM SINGH, 2 U. P. L. R. A 146 518

Buddhist Ecclesiastical Law—Ayanzoungs, who are - Ayanzoung, right of, to sue to recover property of kyaung.

"Ayanzoungs" are persons who are in charge of a Kyaung and its precincts, and are entitled to sue to recover possession of land alleged to form part of a Kyaung. L B UPYINNYA THIHA v. PO THIN, 12 Bur. L. T. 264 939

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Adoption—Giving and taking, evidence of - Presumption—Proof necessary.

Under Burmese Buddhist Law it is not essential in adoption cases that direct evidence should be given of the actual giving and taking in adoption. No documentary evidence is necessary and no particular ceremony or formality is required Where it is clearly proved that the child was brought up with a view to inherit, the actual giving and taking may be presumed; but where the giving and taking is not actually proved, it is incumbent on the adopted child to prove his case by clear and unambiguous evidence as to the publicity and notoriety of his status as kittima child. L B MAUNG SEIN v. U Po Ko, 12 Bur. L. T. 236 954

Buddhist Law—concld.

———, Burmese - Inheritance—Daughter taken away by divorced mother, right of, to inherit as member of natural father's family.

It is a well-established rule of Buddhist Law in both Upper and Lower Burma that a daughter taken away by her mother on divorce loses her right of inheritance as a member of her natural father's family. L B LE MAUNG v. MA KWE, 10 L. B. R. 107; 13 Bur. L. T. 3 681

———, *Burmese—Joint and separate property—Obligation incurred during marriage but discharged after death of husband, whether can be debited to joint account—Gift of separate property by one party during marriage—Property inherited during marriage—Profits, division of, rule of—*Nissayo and nissito, rule of, applicability of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXVI, r. 14 (2)—Commissioner, report of— Objection not taken before trial Court, whether can be taken in appeal.

In deciding what is joint property under Burmese Buddhist Law, all payments of money the obligation for which was undertaken during coverture must be debited to the joint account, even though the actual payment was made by the survivor after the death of the other party to the marriage.

A gift of the separate property of one of the parties to a marriage, even though the name of the other party is joined as donor, must be held to be made out of the separate property of the party to whom the property belongs.

Profits of property inherited by either of the parties to a marriage during coverture are to be divided equally between the parties, and the same rule applies to the profits of the separate property brought by either party to the marriage.

The rule of nissayo and nissito does not apply to the profits during coverture of the separate property of either of the parties.

The proper time for an aggrieved party to object to the findings of a Commissioner is when the parties are called upon to state their objections for the consideration of the trial Court, and if either party fails without sufficient cause to state his objections, he cannot be heard on those points in the Appellate Court. L B MA DWE v. MA TIN LUN, 12 Bur. L. T. 228 972

Burden of proof, question of, when not pertinent.

Where in a controversy the relevant facts are before the Court, and all that remains for decision is, what inference should be drawn from them, the question of the burden of proof is not pertinent. P C SETURATNAM AIYAR v. VENKATACHALA GOUNDEN, (92) M W. N 6 : 27 M L T. 102; 11 L. W 399; 38 M. L. J 476; 22 Bom L. R 578; 18 A L. J. 707; 43 M 567 117

———, wrong allocation of. See AGRA TENANCY ACT, s. 185 287

Burma Excise Act (V of 1917) ss. 41 (c), 63 (1) (a) - Offence under s. 41 (c)—Sanction for prosecution by Collector, form of.

A mere order by the Collector sanctioning the prosecution of a person under section 41 (c) of the Burma Excise Act on the report of the District Superintendent of Police is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of section 63 (1) (a) of the Act. The Collector must authorise some particular Excise Officer to make the report or complaint. U B KAUNG KI v. EMPEROR, 3 U. B. R. (1919) 197; 21 CR L. J. 452 436

Burma Excise Act—concld.

Calcutta Improvement Act (V of 1911), ss. 41, 42, 69, 81—Improvement scheme—Land acquisition—Recoupment principle—Land affected by execution of scheme. what is.

Under section 41 of the Calcutta Improvement Act, 1911, an improvement scheme may provide for the acquisition, by the Board of Trustees appointed under the Act, of any land comprised in the scheme which will in their opinion be affected by the execution of the scheme.

It is not necessary that the land should be physically affected by the operation of the scheme, or that it should be injuriously affected by severance or otherwise.

Land is affected by the execution of a scheme whenever its value is thereby enhanced or diminished

Even though the land is only taken for the purposes of recoupment, the Board has the same powers of compulsory acquisition and the assessment of the value is regulated by the same principles, as if the land were required for the actual working of the scheme. If it is required for any of the purposes of the Act, whereof recoupment is one, the provisions for compulsory acquisition apply. P C TRUSTEES FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CALCUTTA v. CHANDRA KANTA GHOSH, 11 L. W. 566; 38 M. L. J. 511; 18 A. L. J. 521; 22 Bom. L. R. 586; 47 C 500; 32 C. L. J. 75; 24 C. W. N. 881; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 98 32

Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1899), ss. 299, 575, proceedings under—Stay of proceedings—Proceedings, revival of, after long delay, effect of.

Criminal proceedings under section 575 of the Calcutta Municipal Act were initiated against the petitioner on the 15th August 1916, but at his request the proceedings were stayed pending negotiations between himself and the Municipal Corporation. Nothing came of these negotiations, and on the 28th February 1919 application was made to revive the proceedings and on the 20th November 1919, the petitioner was sentenced to pay a daily fine for 0 days from the 16th May 1916:

Held, that, in view of the special circumstances of the case and the very great delay that had occurred, it must be taken that the proceedings had been abandoned, and that the conviction for an offence from the 16th May 1916, made on 20th November 1919, was invalid. S NANDO LAL GUHA v. CO-PORATION OF CALCUTTA, 24 C. W N. 487; 31 C. L. J. 342; 21 CR. L. J. 568 862

Cantonment, land in—Permanent tenancy, whether can be acquired—Burden of proof—Consideration which do not create presumption of permanency—Denial of title—Estoppel - Landlord and tenant—Tenant building on land—Ejectment—Compensation, whether can be awarded.

Where in a case of eviction from lands which formed a Cantonment the defendants allege that they have acquired a permanent tenancy, the burden of proving such tenancy lies upon them; the facts that they and their predecessors held the lands without a lease for a very long time, that the rent was never altered, that succession to the lands by transfer and inheritance has been established, and that buildings have been erected on the lands, do not by themselves establish a permanent tenancy, nor do such circumstances raise any presumption of ownership in favour of the defendants or their predecessors-in title.

The fact that permanent structures are constructed on such lands to the knowledge of the plaintiff would not estop him from denying the permanent character of the tenancy of the defendants.

Where a person with full knowledge of the limited interest which he possesses in land constructs permanent structures upon the same, he is not entitled upon eviction to any compensation. Pat ONKAR MAL MARWARI v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 124 813

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 56 (2), applicability of. See KOTWAR 749

——— s. 81, decree under—Appeal—Valuation—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2 (2), 102, O. IX, r. 8—Suit for rent of malik makbuza field—Amount less than Rs. 500—Appeal, second, whether lies—Decree passed on "admission", meaning of—Appeal, whether lies - Jurisdiction—Court, whether can pass decree against party against whom plaintiff does not seek decree.

The criterion for determining whether an appeal lies from a decree under section 81 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act is the nature of the suit as originally framed, and not the form it may subsequently assume.

Although a suit for rent due by a tenant of malik makbuza fields is not triable by a Small Cause Court, it is nonetheless one of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and unless the subject-matter involved in the suit exceeds Rs. 500 in value, there is no second appeal from a decree in such a suit.

The word "decree" in Order IX, rule 8 of the Civil Procedure ode, is governed by the definition thereof given in section 2 (2) of the Code; a decree, therefore, passed upon the admission of the defendant is appealable by the person aggrieved thereby.

A Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree against a person against whom the plaintiff does not seek one, and who is joined as a defendant on his own application.

The position of a person who is made a defendant on his own application and that of a person who is so made without any such application are very different, in that the former has to make out a prima facie case before the plaintiff can be asked to meet it N RAMKRISHNA v. NARAIN 845

Champerty—Champertous agreement, validity of—Agreement to share property obtained by litigation in consideration of promisee providing funds, whether can be enforced. See CONTRACT ACT, s. 23 272

Chose-in-action, mortgage of—Mortgagee, right of, to sue - Mortgagor, whether necessary party --Liability of mortgagee—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 134.

The mortgagee of a chose-in-action is entitled to institute in his own name a suit to recover the amount due, and he is bound in such suit to implead the mortgagor as a party defendant. If the mortgagee, owing to his default, fails to recover the money, he will be liable to the mortgagor to account for his failure. M ARUNACHELLAM CHETTIAR v. MADASWAMI, 1 L. W. 238 146

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of of 1882), s. 244—Execution of decree—Sale of share of co-parcener in joint Hindu family—Purchaser, position of—Suit for partition and allotment of share, maintainability of.

A suit by the auction-purchaser of the share of a Hindu co-parcener in joint family property for partition of the joint property and delivery to him of what might be allotted to the share of the judgment-debtor would not be barred by the provisions of section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882. The mere fact that the decree-holder himself is the purchaser would make no difference. L BRIJ LAL v. DURGA, 1 L 134 254

——— s. 443—Minor—Mother, as guardian of minor, consenting to arbitration and decree—Omission by Court to appoint guardian, effect of—Decree, whether binding on minor.

An arbitration can be entered into on behalf of a minor by his natural guardian, provided it is for his benefit, or reasonable and proper for the protection of his property, but the award would not be binding if that were not the case.

Where a mother, as the natural guardian of her minor son, consented to a reference to arbitration and accepted the award on behalf of the minor and raised no objection to the passing of a decree in terms of the award, but no appointment of the mother as guardian of the minor had been made, as required by section 443 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and the subsequent result of the decree was a sale of the property in dispute for an undervalue:

Held, that the minor's interests had not been duly protected; that the omission to appoint a guardian was not a mere irregularity which could be condoned, and that the decree based on the award and the sale of the property were null and void. B SADASHIV RAM CHANDRA DATAR v. TRIMBAK KESHAV VAZE; 22 BOM L. R. 266; 44 B. 202 399

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 2 (2), 47—"Decree"—Sale proclamation—Order rejecting application as to valuation, whether decree—Decision under s. 47, when amounts to "decree."

An order made in execution proceedings rejecting a petition objecting to the valuation given by a decree-holder for the purposes of a sale proclamation is not a "decree" within the meaning of section 2 (2), Civil Procedure Code, and is, therefore, not appealable.

In order that a decision under section 47 of the Code may be included within the definition of "decree" and be appealable, it must in some way determine the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit. Pat SAURENDRA NATH MITRA v. MRITUNJAY BANARJI, 5 P. L. J. 270; (1920) Pat. 227; 1 P.L. T. 645 452

——— ss. 2 (2), 47—Execution of decree—Order made in execution proceedings, whether decree—Order negativing decree-holder's right to proceed against certain property, nature of—Appeal, whether lies.

It is not every order made in execution proceedings which is a decree.

An order granting or refusing a process for the examination of witnesses or an order merely determining a point of law arising incidentally or otherwise in the course of execution proceedings and not refusing or granting relief is not a decree and is, therefore, not appealable.

An order finally negativing the right of the decree-holder to proceed against the land of the judgment-debtor comes within the purview of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and is appealable. L DATAR KAUR v. RAM RATTAN, 2 U. P. L. R. (I.) 96; 115 P. L. R. 1920 173

——— s. 9—Right of worship, nature of—Suit to enforce rights of worship and carrying processions, whether of civil nature.

The ordinary right of a citizen to worship, according to his own belief, any deity and in such manner as his belief requires him to do so long as he does not prevent others from carrying on similar worship according to their own belief, is a right of a civil nature and any interference with that right is a matter in respect of which relief would, in a proper case, be granted by a Civil Court.

The right to conduct religious processions in the public streets is a right inherent in every person, provided he does not thereby invade the rights of property enjoyed by others or cause a public nuisance or interfere with the ordinary use of the streets by the public and subject to such directions or prohibitions as may be issued by the Magistrate to prevent obstructions to the thoroughfare or breaches of the public peace. The right to carry on the worship of any deity in any manner that a person pleases, subject to similar conditions, is also a right inherent in every person. B WAMAN BALVANT KASHIKAR v. HARSHET SHETE, 22 Bom. L. R. 307; 44 B 410 419

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Appeal, disposal of, on points independent of those decided by trial Court, effect of.

When an appeal is filed and admitted, the matters decided by the lower Court cease to be res judicata and are left open between the parties for argument before, and decision by, the Appellate Court. If the Appellate Court disposes of the appeal on points independently of those on which the lower Court rested its decision or in terms of a compromise between the parties, the findings of the lower Court do not operate as res judicata in regard to the matters dealt with by it. M VENGANAT RAJA VASUDEVA v. NAITHILATH MATATHIL, 27 M. L. T. 54 199

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Revenue sale—Purchaser, position of—Decree obtained by ex-proprietor, whether can be taken, advantage of—Tenants, position of.

The purchaser of an estate at a revenue sale is not bound by the act of the ex-proprietor. He gets the estate as it stood at the time of the permanent settlement. But it is open to the purchaser, if he wishes, to accept a previous decision between the ex-proprietor and his tenants as binding on himself and take advantage of it. If he does so, the tenants cannot object, because the purchaser is not in any worse position than the ex-proprietor and may elect to take advantage of the decree obtained by the latter, although the decree is not res judicata as between the purchaser and the tenants. C NAKUL CHANDRA BARUA v. SASTI CHARAN BISWAS, 24 C. W. N. 899 390

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 11 Expl. IV, applicability of—Failure to raise a point in previous suit—Res judicata.

Explanation IV to section 11, Civil Procedure Code, applies even where the matter in dispute was not heard and finally decided in the former suit

The determination of the question whether a person ought to have raised a point in a suit so that his failure to raise it should preclude him from raising it in a subsequent suit, must depend on the particular facts of the case. N PYARELAL v. PANNALAL 193

——— s. 11, O. IX, r. 9—Landlord and tenant—Suit for possession by tenant, dismissal of, for default—Abatement of rent on ground of dispossession, claim for, whether barred in subsequent suit for rent—Res judicata—Munsif's decision, whether operates as res judicata, in subsequent suit brought in Subordinate Judge's Court.

The dismissal for default of a suit against his landlord for recovery of possession of certain property comprised in the plaintiff's dar-mourashi tenure does not preclude him, in a subsequent suit for rent brought by the landlord, from claiming abatement of rent owing to dispossession by the landlord

The decision on a question in the Court of a Munsif does not operate as res judicata on the same question in a subsequent suit between the same parties brought in the Court of a Subordinate Judge. C PROMOTHA BHUSAN DEB ROY v. NARENDRA BHUSAN ROY 932

——— s. 20 (c)—Place of suing—Goods, purchase of, at one place to be delivered at another—Cause of action, accrual of, at place of delivery.

Where upon the purchase of goods, it is agreed between the parties that payment for, and delivery of, the goods would be made and taken at a place other than the place where the purchase is effected, a suit arising out of the transaction on account of non-delivery of a portion of the goods may be brought in a Court exercising jurisdiction in the place where delivery and payment were to be made.

A purchased certain goods from B at Bombay, who agreed to deliver and receive payment at Cawnpore: after taking delivery A sued B. at Cawnpore for the price of certain of the goods not received by him:

Held, that the cause of action accrued at Cawnpore, and the Cawnpore Courts had jurisdiction to try the suit. A ABDUL RASHID v. SIZING MATERIAL CO., LTD, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 126; 18 A. L. J. 516, 42 A 480 192

——— s. 20 (c)—Place of suing—Sale of goods—Payment to be made where goods purchased—Cause of action, accrual of, place of.

The cause of action in a suit to recover the price of goods sold arises where the purchaser stipulates to make payment. Thus, where a person at N. sells goods to a firm at P., it being agreed that payment is to be made at N, the cause of action for recovery of the price of the goods accrues at N. and the Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Court at N has jurisdiction to entertain the suit. M NAINA MARAKAYER v. SOMASUNDARAM CHETTIAR, 11 L. W. 593 604

——— s. 22—Transfer of case, application for—Jurisdiction of Court, whether can be questioned—High Court, power of, to determine, whether suit shall be tried by Court subordinate to another High Court—Order, whether final.

A defendant cannot raise an issue as to the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is pending and at the same time apply for transfer of the case under section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code, which contemplates that the suit may be properly instituted in the Court in which it is pending as well as in some other Court.

Under section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code a High Court has power to determine whether a suit shall proceed in a Court subordinate to itself or in some Court subordinate to another High Court, and an order by a High Court that a suit shall proceed in a ourt subordinate to another High Court will be final and it will not be open to the latter Court to refuse the suit being tried in the Court subordinate to it having jurisdiction to try it. Pat RAM KUMAR SHEO CHAND v TULA RAM NATHU RAM, 1 P. L. T. 277, (1920) Pat 235 920

——— s. 47—Execution of decree—Property attached in execution—Purchaser from discharged defendant, whether party.

A person who, prior to the passing of a simple money decree, purchases from a discharged defendant property against which the decree is sought to be executed but which is not affected by the decree itself, is not a representative of that defendant within the meaning of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. N KASHI RAO v. MOHAMMAD ALI 809

——— ss. 47, 66, O. II, r. 2, O. XXI, rr. 69, 96—Mortgage decree—Execution of decree—Purchase by benamidar for decree-holder, validity of—Benamidar, suit by, to recover possession, maintainability of—Mortgagee, whether necessary party—Leave to bid not obtained by mortgagee, effect of—Suits against different persons in respect of distinct properties at different times, maintainability of.

Where in execution of a mortgage decree the property is purchased by a benamidar for the mortgagee, the former is entitled to sue in his own name to recover the property vested in him as a benamidar, and the original mortgagee for whom he is alleged to have purchased the property at the Court sale is not a necessary party to the suit.

Such a suit is not barred by the provisions of section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the plaintiff-purchaser is not the decree-holder himself but a third person. For purposes of procedure the auction-purchaser, even though a benamidar for the decree-holder, is a third party.

Where in such a case it appears that the mortgagee did not obtain any leave to bid for or purchase the property, the omission would not render the purchase by the benamidar void. The purchase is merely liable to be set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor in proceedings properly framed for that purpose and until so set aside, holds good.

An auction-purchaser brought a suit to recover possession of certain property included in his purchase and obtained a decree. Subsequently he brought another suit against a different set of defendants to recover possession of certain other property which was also included in his purchase:

Held, that the suit was not barred by the provisions of Order II, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code. B RAMCHANDRA VITHAL BHAT v. GAJANAND NARAYAN DESHMUKH, 22 Bom. L. R. 296; 44 B. 352 349

——— ss. 47, 104 (2), O. XXI, r. 89, O. XLIII, r. 1 (j)—Execution of decree—Application to set aside sale, dismissal of—Appeal, second, whether lies.

No second appeal lies from an appellate order dismissing an application under Order XXI, rule 89, of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside an execution sale. The accident of the auction-purchaser being the decree-holder makes no difference B KACHU RAVJI MINDHE VANJARI v. TRIMBAK KHEM HAND GUJRATHI, 22 Bom. L. R. 383; 44 B. 472 597

——— s. 47, O. XXI, rr. 16, 22, nature of—Failure to comply with directions of rule 16, effect of—Separate suit for declaring execution proceedings void, whether maintainable.

The provisions of Order XXI, rule 16, that notice shall be given to the judgment-debtor of the transfer of a decree are of a mandatory nature and the failure to comply with the directions of the rule makes all subsequent proceedings void.

On 6th July 1914 one B. obtained a decree for Rs. 250 against three brothers F, and G. majors and A. minor under the guardianship of F. Execution was taken out on the 16th December 1914 and a house belonging to the three brothers was attached. It was mortgaged at the time and the rights of redemption were sold in April 1915 to the son of J. The purchase money not having been paid, the sale was not confirmed. The decree-holder then transferred his rights in the decree to J. and the house was again brought to auction and bought by J. in November 1915. Notice of the transfer of the decree to J. was served on F. for himself and as guardian of G and A. G. having been misdescribed as a minor. On the 2nd December 1915 G. and A. sued for a declaration that the execution proceedings were not binding against them owing to the misdescription of G. and the failure of F. to effectively represent A:

Held, (1) that execution having been taken out within a year, no notice was necessary to the judgment-debtors;

(2) that inasmuch as G. knew of the transfer of the decree to J. he could not equitably raise an objection on account of want of personal service on him under rule 16;

(3) that the question of the irregularity or illegality of the notice issued under rule 16 and its effect was one arising between the parties to the suit and could have only been properly determined under section 47, Civil Procedure Code;

(4) that under the circumstances the suit was not maintainable. L GUL MUHAMMAD v BANDU 461

——— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 90—Application to set aside sale—Appeal, second, whether competent—Non-transferable occupancy holding—Objection to sale of holding, when to be taken—Mortgagee, objection by, subject to equities against judgment-debtor.

There is no second appeal against an order passed on an application under Order XXI, rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Although a tenant is entitled to get a sale of his holding in execution of a decree set aside on the ground that the holding is non-transferable, he, nevertheless, is bound to take the objection at the earliest possible moment; such an objection cannot be entertained in second appeal after the sale has taken place.

A mortgagee from a judgment-debtor is a representative of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of an application under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and he cannot raise an objection which the judgment-debtor is incompetent to raise, as he is bound by all the equities enforceable against the judgment-debtor. Pat SRI-KISHNA RAI v. RAM SARAN RAI, 1 P. L. T. 267 646

——— s. 48, O. XXXIV, r. 5. See LIMITATION ACT, SCH. I, ART. 181 563

——— s. 60—Attachment of debt—Security deposit for carrying out contract, whether debt and liable to attachment.

An attaching creditor can attach a debt although the debt is not then payable, but it must be an existing debt.

Money deposited as security for the due performance and completion of a contract, as well as monies deducted from sums already earned and retained till completion of the work, although liable to forfeiture, are debts due to the contractor until they became liable to be forfeited, and are attachable in execution of a decree against him. L B S. B. DAS v MUTHIA CHETTY, 12 Bur. L. T. 247 948

——— s. 60 (b)—Execution of decree—Attachment—Agriculturist—Cattle, whether can be attached.

The question whether cattle belonging to an agriculturist are necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood, arising out of an attachment in execution, is one for the executing Court to decide. S GUL MAHOMED v FAIZ MAHOMED, 13 S. L. R. 210 69

——— s. 66, object of—Court sale—Agreement by purchaser to convey property purchased, whether enforceable.

The object of section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to put an end to purchases at Court auctions by one person in the name of another.

An agreement by an auction-purchaser subsequent to the purchase to convey a portion of the property to another is not affected by section 66 of the Civil Procedure Code and is enforceable. P RAMATHAI VADIVELU MUDALIAR v PERIA MANICKA MUDALIAR, 24 C. W. N 699; 18 A. L. J 584; 28 M. L. T. 13; 39 M. L. J. 11; 12 L. W. 1; (1920) M. W. N. 389; 2 U. P. L. R (P. C.) 90; 43 M. 613 395

——— s. 92, suit under—Plaintiff not having interest—Joinder of other plaintiffs with requisite interest—Suit, whether maintainable

A suit under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code was instituted by a person who was found to have no interest such as that required by the section. Two other persons who had the requisite interest obtained the sanction of the Collector and were added as plaintiffs. It was objected that the suit laid was not maintainable:

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that the suit had been properly instituted and was maintainable. M JAKKAMREDDI SESHADRI REDDY v. SUBRAMANIA IYER, 11 L. W. 536; (920) M. W. N. 337; 38 M. L. J. 504; 43 M. 720 450

——— s. 103, O. XLI, r. 25—Appeal—Finding on particular issue, absence of—High Court, power of, to remit issues for trial and to determine questions of fact.

Where a Court from whose decree an appeal is before the High Court omits to determine a question of fact essential to the right decision of the suit on the merits, the High Court has jurisdiction, under Order XLI, rule 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, to frame issues and refer them for trial by that Court.

Where a lower Appellate Court fails to determine an issue of fact, the High Court in second appeal has power to deal with it under section 103 of the Civil Procedure Code. P C SETURATNAM AIYAR v VENKATACHALA GOUNDEN, (1920) M W. N. 61; 27 M. L. T. 102; 11 L. W. 399; 38 M. L. J. 476; 22 Bom L. R 578; 18 A. L. J 707; 43 M 567 117

——— s. 107 (2), O. VII, r. 10,—Order returning memorandum of appeal for presentation to proper Court—Appeal, whether lies.

No appeal lies against an order returning a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court. A revision is, however, competent against such an order. L KARM ILAHI v. HAKIM SHAH 865

——— ss. 109, 110—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19—Appeal to Privy Council—Final order, what is - Order refusing to stay suit, whether final.

An order is "final" within the meaning of section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code only if it finally disposes of the rights of the parties

An order refusing to stay a suit under section 19 of the Arbitration Act does not finally dispose of the rights of the parties, but leaves them to be determined by the Courts in the ordinary way. It is not, therefore, a "final order" within the meaning of section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code P C FIRM OF RAMCHAND MANJIMAL v. FIRM OF GOVERDHANDAS VISHINDAS RATANCHAND, 24 C. W N. 721 18 A. L. J. 591; 22 Bom L. R 606; 29 M. L. J 27; 12 L. W. 15; 2 U. P L. R. (P. C) 94; (1 20) M. W. N. 407; 28 M. L. T. 87 302

——— s. 109 (c), O. XLV, r. 3 Decree obtained by perjured evidence - Suit to set aside decree, maintainability of—Case, whether fit one for appeal to Privy Council.

The mere fact that an appeal involves questions of law does not bring it within the scope of section 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code.

The question whether a suit is maintainable to set aside a decree obtained by perjured evidence is not one of such public importance as to bring a case in which it arises within the scope of section 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code Pat KRIPA SINDHU PANIGRAHI v. NANDA CHARAN PANIPATU, (1920) Pat 209 615

——— s. 110—Appeal to Privy Council - Question of general importance, what is

Where there is a conflict of opinion as to what was intended to be laid down in a decision of the Privy Council, and what was the effect of the observations in that case, the question is one of general importance to justify the grant of a certificate under section 110 of the Civil Procedure Code for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council. A BRIJ NARAIN RAI v. MANGLA PRASAD RAI, 2 U. P L. R (A) 149 526

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 115—Interlocutory order deciding preliminary issues—Revision, whether entertainable.

An application for revision is not entertainable from an order deciding preliminary issues in a suit, where such order would be appealable when the suit is finally decided A AIDAL SINGH v. PEARY LAL, 2 U. P. L R (A) 157 248

——— s. 115—Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), ss. 36, 39—Proceedings under Legal Practitioners Act—Revision—High Court, interference by—Enquiry, nature of.

A High Court has no power under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, to interfere with an order under section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act

The enquiry under section 39 of the Legal Practitioners Act is of the nature of a departmental enquiry, and it is enough if it is conducted in such a way that the officer enquiring acts with substantial justice and gives the person against whom proceedings are being taken an opportunity to show cause. S MULCHAND, In re, 13 S. L. R. 212: 21 CR. L J. 449 433

——— s. 115 Revision—Finding not based on evidence - Material irregularity.

It is the duty of a Court to found its decision upon a consideration of the evidence adduced before it, and where it omits to do so but founds its decision on a consideration that has no basis, it acts in the exercise of its jurisdiction with material irregularity, and its decision is liable to be set aside under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. Pat JANARDAN MISSIR v BRIJNANDAN SINGH 982

——— s. 115—Revision—High Court, power of, to interfere with interlocutory orders.

The High Court will not interfere under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, with an interlocutory order when there is another remedy open to the applicant and no irreparable harm will be suffered by the interlocutory order. Pat LACHMIBATI KUMARI v NANDKUMAR SINGH, 1 P. L. T 268; 5 P. L. J 400 649

——— s. 115, O. XLI, r. 27—Appellate Court, order by, directing evidence to be produced before it—Revision, whether competent.

If an Appellate Court makes a mistake in law in directing evidence to be tendered before it which it is not competent to receive in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, it commits an error of law but that will not give the party aggrieved by the order the right to invoke the interference of the High Court under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Pat GAYA SINGH v. NAME SINGH, 5 P. L. J. 263 983

——— s. 141, O. IX, r. 13—Application for setting aside ex parte decree—Dismissal for default—Application for restoration, whether entertainable—Limitation Act IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art 181.

Plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree on the 15th January 19 9. On the 4th July the defendant applied to have it set aside, but the application was dismissed for default on the 16th October. On the 25th November the defendant made a fresh application

Held, that the application of the 27th November should be treated as one for the restoration of the application of the 4th July and as such was entertainable, the procedure laid down in Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, being applicable to it by the operation of section 141 of the Code;

(2) that the application was governed by Article 181 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act and was within time. L MAULA BAKHSH v. RAM DAS 25

——— s. 148, applicability of, to Provincial Small Cause Court.

The provisions of section 148 of the Civil Procedure Code cannot be applied to extend the time for doing an act prescribed by the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. Pat RAM CHARITAR RAM v. HASHIM KHAN, (1920) Pat 203; 1 P. L. T. 313 810

——— s. 149, applicability of—Revision converted into appeal—Court-fee made up after expiry of limitation—Appeal, whether barred—Order in Chambers allowing Court-fee to be made up, effect of.

An appeal must be taken to be filed on the date on which the memorandum of appeal is properly stamped.

An appeal was decided by a District Judge on 3rd March 1915. A petition for revision against that decision was filed on 4th June 1915. On 7th February 1916, after hearing both parties, the Judge in Chambers held that an appeal lay in the case and gave time to the appellants to make up the deficiency in Court-fees on the memorandum of appeal. The deficiency was made up on 11th February 1916. On the appeal coming on for hearing before a Division Bench, the respondent objected that the appeal was barred by time:

Held, (1) that the order of the Judge in Chambers must be taken to have been made subject to all just exceptions;

(2) that the memorandum of appeal must be taken to have been filed on the date on which the deficiency in Court-fees was made up, and was, consequently, barred by time;

(3) that section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable to the case. L UMED ALI v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, JHANG-MAGHIANA 143

——— s. 149—Time for paying Court-fees, extension of—Appeal—Order, whether can be interfered with—High Court, power of interference of.

An Appellate Court cannot question the propriety of an order under section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code for the payment of deficit Court-fees. If the order is not objected to when it is made, or in the Court which made it, it cannot be objected to in second appeal Pat SURAJ PAL v. UTIM PANDEY, 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 45 47

——— s. 151—Act of Court—Party, whether can be prejudiced by act of Court—Judge, duty of—Inherent power of Court to make order required by justice.

On an appeal coming before the High Court that Court suggested that the matters in dispute should be investigated in a separate suit; this was accepted by both parties, with the result that the appeal was not heard on the merits. It transpired, however, that the matters could not be so investigated, and the parties were thus relegated to the position of not having the matters in controversy between them decided by the High Court. In these circumstances an application was made to the High Court for restoration of the appeal so that it might be heard on the merits:

Held, that the Court had inherent power to make the restoration in order to enable it to discharge the duty cast upon it as a Court of Justice to determine the controversy between the parties, and that applying the maxim actus curiæ neminem gravabit (an act of the Court shall prejudice no man), the failure of the Court to decide a case after submission could not be permitted to defeat the substantial rights of the litigants. C KALYAN SINGH v. RAMGOLAM SINGH, 31 C. L. J. 48 4

——— s. 151—Inherent power of Court, when to be exercised—Appeal—Remand, order of, when to be made.

An order under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code must show on the face of it that it is necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court.

An Appellate Court has inherent power to remand a case, but it is a power which can only be exercised for the ends of justice.

The mere fact that there has not been a proper trial of the case, apart from other circumstances in the case, is not sufficient to vest the Appellate Court with jurisdiction to remand the case in the exercise of its inherent power.

The rule is that if the trial has not been proper owing to some neglect on the part of the Court, the Appellate Court has power to remand the case, bw nthere the neglect or default is on the part of a party to the litigation, the Appellate Court has no such power. Pat BISHUN DUTT v. RAMJI PROSAD, 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 136 834

——— s. 151—Inherent power—Misapprehension as to result of suit—Substitution of parties—Appellate Court, power of.

A Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court, under a misapprehension as to the result of a suit, disallowed an application for substitution of parties On appeal:

Held, that as under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code the Court had inherent power to make such order as may be necessary for the ends of justice, the application for substitution should be allowed. C NILKANTA GHOSE v. SWARNAMOYEE DASSI, 31 C. L. J. 120 726

——— s. 151, O. XXI, r. 19—Decree entitling two persons to recover unequal sums from each other—Party entitled to execution—Method of executing decree.

Where under a decree two persons are entitled to recover two unequal sums from each other, execution can only be taken out, under Order XXI, rule 19, of the Civil Procedure Code by the person entitled to the larger sum, and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum. If execution is taken out without making this deduction, the Court has power, under section 151 of the Code, to compel a refund of the sum taken in excess. C ANNADA MOHAN ROY v. ATUL CHANDRA CHAKRABARTI 24 C. W. N. 465 753

——— s. 151, O. XLI, r. 23—Ex parte decree—Appellate Court, power of, to remand case—Inherent power, when to be exercised.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

An Appellate Court has inherent power not only to reverse a decree passed on evidence given by the plaintiff only, the defendant being ex parte, but also to direct a re-trial of the case.

The question whether it is necessary for the ends of justice to exercise such power of remand must depend upon the circumstances of the particular case and in exercising such jurisdiction, the Court must be careful to see that its decision is based on general legal principles and subject to the rule that if the Code does contain specific provisions which would meet the necessities of the case in question, such provisions should be followed and the inherent jurisdiction should not be invoked. U B MA ON ME v. MA PYA GYI, 3 U. B. R. (1919) 198 255

——— O. II, r. 2, conditions of applicability of —Identity of causes of action—Plaitiff, whether bound, to sue for relief—Joint property—Partition, right to sue for, nature of.

The cardinal condition of the applicability of Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, is that the cause of action in both cases shall be identical. Moreover, it is essential that the plaintiff should have been bound to sue in the earlier case for the relief for which he prays in the subsequent suit.

The right of an owner in joint property to sue for partition at any time so long as the property shall remain undivided is a continually recurring right and once the immoveable property in suit has been declared to be common property the plaintiff has a right to come in at any time and ask for partition.

On the 17th February 1912 plaintiff sued defendant for rendition of account and dissolution of partnership alleging a partnership of long standing and purchase of certain immoveable property out of the profits of the partnership. The suit was valued at Rs. 130 only and on the defendant's objection as to valuation the plaintiff's Pleader stated that the suit was not in respect of immoveable property but only in respect of the profits arising out of it. The matter was referred to arbitration and the award declared the property to be partnership property and the plaintiff to be entitled to one-half share in it. A decree was eventually passed in accordance with this award.

On the 11th June 1914 the plaintiff instituted the present suit for rendition of accounts of the property decreed in the former suit and for its partition. The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for possession of one-half of the property in suit and directed that accounts be taken of the mesne profits. The defendant appealed to the High Court and contended that the suit was barred by Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code:

Held, (1) that though in the first case the plaintiff was bound to sue for partition of the immoveable property, he was not bound to sue for its partition by metes and bounds;

(2) that the award and the decree passed in accordance therewith did in fact deal with the right of the parties in the immoveable property by declaring it as their property in common tenancy in equal shares;

(3) that the present suit was not one between partners for dissolution of partnership and for rendition of partnership accounts, but was one between tenants-in-common for mesne profits and partition of the common property;

(4) that under the circumstances the first suit was no bar to the present suit because there was no identity of causes of action in the two suits. L ZIA-UL-HAQ v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM 701

——— O. II, r. 2—Contract—Separate covenants, breach of, whether constitutes one cause of action —Suit in respect of one breach—Subsequent suit in respect of other breach, whether maintainable.

Where in a contract there are two covenants to be performed at different times, but both secured in the same manner, a breach of both the covenants constitutes one cause of action, and if a suit is brought in respect of one breach only, a subsequent suit in respect of the other breach is barred under rule 2 of Order II of the Civil Procedure Code. L B SHWE HMAN v. MA E MYA, 10 L. B. R. 111; 12 Bur. L T. 251 653

——— O. II, r. 2, scope of—Mortgage—Suit for possession of mortgaged land—Subsequent suit for return of mortgage money, whether barred.

Order II, rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code is directed against two evils, the splitting of claims and the splitting of remedies. If a man omits from his suit a portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of it: if he omits one of his remedies, he cannot afterwards pursue it.

Plaintiffs sued defendants for recovery of mortgage money with interest, alleging that the land of B, defendant No 1, was originally mortgaged with possession to C., defendant No 2, by three deeds, but that these mortgages were transferred to their father I. by C. They also alleged that B. orally mortgaged this land to I. for Rs. 1,000 and that mutation of this mortgage was effected but was set aside on appeal. It appeared that I had sued B for possession of the land alleged to have been orally mortgaged to him, but his suit was dismissed on the ground that the mortgage was not proved:

Held, (1) that the plaintiffs ought to have sued for both the remedies—the possession of the land or the return of the mortgage money—in the alternative in one suit.

(2) that having omitted to sue for the mortgage money in the first suit, they were precluded from suing for it now by Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code L HARNAM SINGH v. BHOLA SINGH, 2 U. P. L R (L) 108 966

——— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings, when should be allowed. See ARBITRATION 115

——— O. VII, r. 14, O. XI, r. 15—Documents on which plaintiff relies—Defendant, right of, to inspect documents.

A defendant is not entitled, as of right, to inspect documents relied on by the plaintiff and of which a list under rule 14 of Order VII of the Civil Procedure Code is annexed to the plaint, as such documents are not documents referred to in Order XI, rule 15, of the Code. C CHANDMULL GONESHMULL v. DHANRAJ GANPATROY, 24 C. W N. 302 457

——— O. IX, rr. 3, 4—Dismissal for default —Application to set aside order—Forum, proper.

An order of dismissal for default can, under rule 4 of Order IX of the Civil Procedure Code, be set aside only by the Court which passed the order. L LUCHHMAN DAS v. DEVI DIAL, 19 P. W. R. 1920; 100 P. L. R. 1920 884

——— O. IX, rr. 3, 8, 9, O. XVII, r. 2, O. XXXII, r. 3—Suit against several defendants—Minor defendant—Dismissal for default, effect of—Minor not represented by guardian—Subsequent suit against minor, whether barred.

Where there are several defendants to a suit, the consequences of an order of dismissal for default need not necessarily be the same against all. If the suit is dismissed as against some under rule 8 of Order IX of the Civil Procedure Code and as against the rest under rule 3 of the same Order, a subsequent suit on the same cause of action would be barred as against the former but not against the latter.

The provisions of Order XXXII, rule 3, of the Civil Procedure Code are imperative and without complying with those provisions the Court cannot make any decree between the plaintiff and a minor defendant.

Where a suit was dismissed for plaintiff's default in the presence of the major defendants and there was no appearance on behalf of the minor defendant, no guardian ad litem of the minor having been appointed:

Held, that a subsequent suit against the minor on the same cause of action was not barred, inasmuch as, (a) the order of dismissal as against the minor must be taken to have been made under Order IX, rule 4, of the Civil Procedure Code and not under rule 8 and (b) the minor not being properly represented in the suit, no binding order could be made as between him and the plaintiff. B DAMU DIGA v. VAKRYA NATHU, 22 Bom. L. R. 328; 44 B. 767 455

——— O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte decree—Suit to set aside decree, whether competent Remedy, proper—Minor—Compromise sanctioned by Court under material misapprehension—Decree, whether binding on minor.

In order to impeach an ex parte decree not tainted with fraud, the proper remedy is by an appropriate proceeding taken in the suit in which the decree was passed, e. g., an application under Order IX, rule 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, to set aside the decree, or an application for review, or an appeal to a superior Court. A separate suit to set aside the decree will not lie.

Where the sanction of the Court is obtained to a compromise on behalf of a minor under a misapprehension of a material fact as to the true position of the minor, a decree based on such compromise is not binding on the minor L JHANDA SINGH v. LACHHMI, 22 P. W. R. 1920; 68 P. L. R. 1920; 1 L. 344 878

——— O. XXI, r. 2—Applicability of rule to cases of decrees other than those for payment of money—Adjustment relating to partition of immoveable property, whether within rule.

An adjustment relating to partition of immoveable property provided for by a decree of Court falls within Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. The rule is not restricted in its application to provisions for payment of money. M RAMAKRISHNA RAO v. BALAKRISHNA RAO, (1920) M. W. N. 261; 43 M. 476 289

——— O. XXI, rr. 54, 90—Execution sale—Publication of sale—Sale, whether vitiated because drum not beaten—Proclamation of sale—Irregularity, whether sufficient to set aside sale—Damage, proof of.

Under rule 54, Order XXI, of the Civil Procedure Code, it is sufficient if a proclamation of sale is announced by beat of drum. A drum need not be beaten at the time of the sale.

Unless the judgment-debtor is able to prove that an irregularity in a proclamation of sale has resulted in material loss to himself, the Court will not set aside the sale on the ground of such irregularity. A BHAGWATI PRASAD v. MUKAND SARUP, 2 U P L R. (A.) 147 523

——— O. XXI, rr. 62, 63—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch I, Art. 11—Sale in execution—Application to have encumbrance recognised, dismissal of, effect of—Suit to contest order—Limitation.

The effect of an order dismissing an application to have it recognised that property about to be sold is subject to an encumbrance in favour of the applicant, is that the property is free of the encumbrance, and such order becomes final against both the applicant and the judgment-debtor, unless a suit is brought within one year to contest it. M VELU PADAYACHI v. ARUMUGAM PILLAI, 11 L. W. 343; 38 M. L. J. 397 481

——— O. XXII, rr. 4, 9—Failure to bring legal representatives of deceased respondent on record within time prescribed by law—Ignorance of law whether sufficient cause—Joint interest of several respondents—Abatement of appeal in toto.

Mere ignorance of law is not a sufficient cause for not applying within time to bring the legal representatives of a deceased respondent on the record.

Where the interests of defendants-respondents are joint and a decree cannot be reversed without the representatives of a deceased respondent being brought on the record, the whole appeal must abate. L FATTA v SIKANDAR, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 112 927

——— O. XXIII, r. 1 Application to withdraw suit with leave to bring fresh suit—Procedure—Court, duty of.

Where an application is made to withdraw a suit with leave to bring a fresh suit and the Court thinks that permission to file a fresh suit should not be granted, it should dismiss the application and hear the suit on the merits, or dismiss it for want of prosecution if the plaintiff refuses to proceed. Pat SHAMANANDAN PRASAD v. MULCHAND RAM, 1 P. L. T. 292 286

——— O. XXIII, r. 1—Application to withdraw with leave to bring fresh suit—Procedure—Permission to withdraw granted without leave to bring fresh suit, effect of.

Where a plaintiff applies for permission to withdraw his suit with leave to bring a fresh suit, the proper order to pass, if the Court does not grant leave to bring a fresh suit, is to dismiss the application.

Ordinarily, an application to withdraw with permission to bring a fresh suit does not mean an application to withdraw if such permission is not granted Where, therefore, on such application permission to withdraw is granted without leave to bring a fresh suits, this amounts to a refusal of the application. Pat SUGGI LAL DURJI v MOHAMMAD WALI ULLAH, 1 P. L T. 259 756

——— O. XXIII, r. 1—Permission to withdraw suit with liberty to bring fresh suit—Jurisdiction, want of, effect of—Res judicata.

A Court has no jurisdiction to permit a suit to be withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit except under Order XXIII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code.

Where an Appellate Court allows a suit to be withdrawn without jurisdiction, the decision of the trial Court operates as res judicata. Pat RAMA SINGH v. JANAK SINGH, 1 P. L. T. 30; (1920) Pat 232; 2 U. P. L. R (Pat) 121 697

——— O. XXIII, r. 3—Arrangement between parties before decree to treat decree as in part inexecutable, enforceability of.

An arrangement between the parties to a suit made before decree to treat the decree as in part inexecutable cannot be given effect to by Courts. M ARUMUGAM PILLAI v. KRISHNASWAMI NAIDU, 12 L. W. 41; 39 M L. J. 22; 3 M. 725 976

——— O. XXIII, r. 3—Compromise—Agreement between parties, when amounts to completed compromise.

The question when a contract becomes complete depends on the facts of each particular case. If a consensus ad idem has been reached between the parties on all the proposed or disputed terms, there is a contract. If, however, two persons agree in writing that, up to a certain point, the terms shall be the terms of the contract, but that the minor terms shall be subjected to a mediator and shall be as are approved by him, or if they are otherwise left unsettled, there is no contract. But if all the terms are agreed to, any stipulation to embody these terms in a formal document will not affect the contract, except when there is a further stipulation, express or implied, that the contract shall not be treated as complete till the formal document is drawn up and signed M KAMALAMBAL v DORASAMI CHETTIAR, 14 L. W. 179 26

——— O. XXXII, r. 3—Guardian ad litem, appointment of, provision as to, object of - Court, duty of—Notices to minor and his guardian, whether necessary preliminaries to appointment of guardian ad litem—Failure to issue required notices, effect of —Guardian ad litem, appointment of, effect of—Irregularity or defect in procedure—Minor, whether bound by decree passed in suit—Decree, when can be avoided by minor—Guardian ad litem, powers of, extent of.

The object of the provision contained in Order XXXII, rule 3 (4), Civil Procedure Code, is that the Court should be able to satisfy itself that the person described as a minor is really a minor and that the proposed guardian is a fit and proper person to represent him and to put in a proper defence and generally to act in the interests of the minor.

Where a lawful guardian ad litem has been appointed, any defect or irregularity in the procedure leading up to such appointment cannot operate to render a decree passed in a suit in which the minor is represented by such a guardian invalid, unless the defect or irregularity has had the effect of prejudicing the interest of the minor or has affected the merits of the case.

Thus, where no notice was issued to the minor or to his mother, but a notice was issued to his proposed guardian who was also his brother and the manager of the joint family of which the minor was a member, and this proposed guardian was appointed his guardian ad litem, and the suit having been compromised a decree was passed in terms of the compromise:

Held, that unless there was anything to show that in spite of the appointment of the guardian ad litem the interests of the minor had not been duly protected or that the guardian ad litem had colluded with the plaintiff or had otherwise acted fraudulently or with gross negligence, the decree passed against the minor, in accordance with the compromise entered into by his guardian ad litem with the sanction of the Court, could not be set aside.

The powers of a person who has been appointed guardian ad litem are controlled by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and what he could have done as manager of the joint family, of which the minor is a member, irrespective of the suit, he cannot do when appointed as such guardian. O SRIPAL SINGH v. JAGDISH NARAYAN, 7 O. L. J. 219; 2 U. P. L. R. J C.) 77 313

——— O. XXXII, rr. 4, 7—Next friend of minor having interest in conflict with that of minor, effect of—Compromise, when binding upon minor—Fraud and collusion, effect of—Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Adoption—Infant, whether can be adopted.

If in a suit the personal interest of the next friend of a minor conflicts with his duty towards the minor, then, unless the next friend shows uberrima fides, he is not competent to act as the minor's next friend In such a case the minor is not properly represented and the decree in the suit would not binding upon him.

It is no dereliction of duty on the part of a guardian to refuse to litigate on his ward's behalf a claim which he knows to be false and unfounded in fact.

In giving permission to compromise a suit on behalf of a minor, it is usual and desirable that the Court should record an order stating that it considers the compromise to be for the benefit of the minor, but such an order is not essential to the validity of the compromise. The addition of the words "expressly recorded in the proceedings" in Order XXXII, rule 7, of the Code of Civil Procedure has not changed the pre-existing practice under section 462 of the Code of 1882.

Under the Mitakshara the order of performing sradh ceremony has no necessary relation to the order of succession to property.

It is not illegal to adopt an infant in arms, but it is very unusual for a child to be formally taken in adoption at the early age of thirteen days.

Apart from fraud or collusion or any vitiating circumstance, a question settled by a compromise cannot afterwards be revived in Court for judicial determination.

The family to which the plaintiff belonged was governed by the Benares School of Mitakshara Law.

One or other of its members acquired considerable properties in the Chittagong District which devolved on three brothers, Kamala Prasad, Kanta Prasad and Bhagirath. The only living representatives of Kamala Prasad's branch were defendants Nos. 4 and 5 who were the widows of his two sons. Ramdin and defendant No. 2 were two sons of Bhagirath. Ramdin was taken in adoption by Kanta Prasad. Defendants Nos. 1 and 3 were the widows of Ramdin and Kanta Prasad respectively and the plaintiff was the son of defendant No. 2. In 1919 defendant No. 2 on behalf of himself and as next friend of his minor son, the present plaintiff, instituted a suit as members of a joint undivided Mitakshara family and prayed for a declaration of their title as such to the Chittagong properties and as against defendant No. 1 for recovery of possession. In this suit a compromise was arrived at by which the defendant No. 2 and his son, the present plaintiff, got a moiety of the properties in dispute, and the other moiety went to defendant No. 1. After attaining majority the present suit was brought by the plaintiff for a declaration that as the adopted son of Ramdin he was entitled to an 8-annas share of the Chittagong properties and that the consent decree in the previous suit was not binding on him:

Held, (1) that in order to determine whether the plaintiff was bound by the compromise, it was necessary first to ascertain whether he was or was not adopted in fact;

(2) that if the plaintiff was adopted by Ramdin and the adoption was sedulously kept from the knowledge of the Court, then the leave or consent of the Court to the previous suit being compromised would be no true consent and the minor would not be bound by the compromise;

(3) that if the plaintiff was not adopted by Ramdin, he was bound by the compromise decree. C BEJOY SINGH v. MATHURIYA DEBYA. 97

——— O. XXXIII, rr. 2, 5, 15—Application for leave to sue as pauper not accompanied by schedule of property, dismissal of—Application, subsequent, whether barred.

Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is rejected on the ground that it is not accompanied by a schedule of the property belonging to the applicant, a subsequent application is not barred under rule 15 of Order XXXIII of the Civil Procedure Code. L BAL KAUR v. SHIB DAS, 1 L. 151 207

——— O. XXXIV, r. 5—Mortgage suit—Final decree—Sale not held—Mortgagor, right of, to redeem, whether extinguished.

The mere passing of a final decree in a mortgage suit does not extinguish the mortgagor's right to redeem, until a sale has actually taken place in pursuance of the decree. A SHAH MAHDI HASAN v. ISMAIL HASAN, 18 A. L. J. 622, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 213; 42 A. 517 172

——— O. XXXIV, r. 6—Mortgage suit—Decree for sale unexecuted—Mortgagee, whether entitled to obtain decree over.

A mortgagee who obtains a decree for sale, but fails to execute it, is not entitled to come into Court under rule 6 of Order XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code, to obtain a decree over, as that rule contemplates that the property should be put to sale in execution of the decree before an application under its provisions can be made. A DARBARI MAL v. MOOLA SINGH, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 160; 18 A. L. J. 628; 42 A. 519 139

——— O. XXXIX, rr. 6, 7, 8—Attachment before judgment—Release of property on security being furnished—Execution against property given as security—Preferential right, whether exists.

Where property is attached before judgment, but is released on the defendant giving security, the security comprising certain items of the attached property, the plaintiff on obtaining a decree is entitled to a preferential right, and can execute the decree against the property given as security M JANKI NAGASAWMI IYER v. T. S RAMASWAMI AIYANGAR, 11 L. W. 6; (1920) M. W. N. 264 267

——— O. XLI, r. 17 (2)—Failure of respondent to appear—Duty of Court—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 219—Revision—Material irregularity.

The absence of the respondent on the date fixed for hearing an appeal is no justification for decreeing the appeal. Under rule 17 (2) of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code the Court is bound to hear the appeal and record a judgment, and its failure to do so amounts to a material irregularity within the meaning of section 219 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act, involving interference by the Board of Revenue. U P B R RAJ RANI v. RAM KISHORE, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 26 386

——— O. XLI, rr. 20, 22—Respondent, right of, to file cross-objections against co-respondent—Addition of party for purpose of cross-objections—Power of Court.

A respondent in an appeal has the right to proceed against a co-respondent by memo. of cross-objections and for this purpose is entitled to apply to make the latter a party, whether, at the time of the presentation of the appeal, he was an interested party or not. M PONNUSWAMI ASARI v. PALANIANDI MUDALI, 11 L. W. 602 612

——— O. XLI, r. 22—Cross-objections against non-appealing party, whether can be urged.

As a general rule cross-objections can be urged only against the appellant and not against a co-respondent.

No cross-objections can be urged against a defendant who has not filed any appeal from the decree passed against him. L SANT RAM v. KIDAR NATH 469

——— O. XLI, rr. 22, 33—Cross-objections against co-respondent when can be entertained—Object of r. 22.

Order XLI, rule 22 (1), of the Civil Procedure Code, in so far as it relates to a cross-objection, was provided to meet the case where a respondent, although the decree is not entirely in his favour, is content to let matters rest provided his opponent does not appeal, but who may not be willing to run the risk of having the findings in his favour varied or reversed without an opportunity of appealing against the findings which are adverse to him.

This rule should ordinarily be confined to cases of cross-objections urged against the appellant, but rule 33 of Order XLI gives the Court a very wide discretion and cases may arise where justice requires that cross-objections against a co-respondent should be heard, e. g., where the appeal reopens the whole matter in controversy between the respondents inter se. Where, however, one of several defendants against whom a decree is passed has allowed the period for appealing to elapse without questioning the decree, rule 22 of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code cannot be construed so as to revive his right of appeal merely because a co-defendant has instituted an appeal against the plaintiff on entirely different grounds. Pat OFFICIAL TRUSTEES OF BENGAL v. SMITH, (1920) Pat 161; 5 P. L. J. 328; 1 P. L. T. 434 262

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— O. XLI, rr. 23, 25, 27, 29—Case not decided on preliminary point—Remand, order of—Procedure.

Where a trial Court has decided a case not upon a preliminary point, but after taking all the evidence and trying all the issues, it is improper for an Appellate Court to remand the case for trial, afresh under Order XLI, rule 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In making an order under the rule however, the Court cannot direct the omission of one of the essential issues in the case. If the Court is of opinion that a fresh local investigation should be made or that fresh evidence is necessary on any point, its order should be one under rules 25, 27 and 29, and not under rule 23, of Order XLI. C SADAK ALI v. SAFAR ALI 984

——— O. XLI, r. 23, O. XLIII, r. 1 (u)—Remand—Order purporting to be under rule, but which ought not to have been made—Appeal, whether competent—Case not decided on preliminary point—Appeal—Further investigation necessary—Appellate Court, duty of

An order which purports to be, and is in form and substance, an order under rule 23 of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code is appealable, although the order ought not to have been made under that rule.

Where a case is not decided on a preliminary point, it is the duty of the Appellate Court to itself decide the appeal; if it considers that further investigation is necessary or that additional evidence should be taken, it may make an order directing his to be done, but it ought not to remand the case or re-decision under Order XLI, rule 23, of the Code. C PROSUNNA CHANDRA v BOIDYA NATH, 31 C. L J. 360, 24 C. W. N. 708 516

——— O. XLIII, r. (1) (a)—"Plaint" whether includes memorandum of appeal—Revision, maintainability of.

The word "plaint" in Order XLIII, rule (1) (a) of the Civil Procedure Code does not include a memorandum of appeal. L KARM ILAHI v. HAKIM SHAH 865

——— O. XLVII, rr. 1, 4, 7—Review—Discovery of new evidence—Order granting review—Appeal, when maintainable.

Where in granting an application for review on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, the Court does not come to any finding whether there was a discovery of new evidence, or that the evidence was of such an important nature that a review ought to be granted, nor does it come to any finding whether due diligence was exercised with regard to the production of such evidence at the trial, the order granting review contravenes rule 4 of Order XLVII of the Code of Civil Procedure and is appealable and liable to be set aside C CHIRANJILAL RAMLAL v. TULSIRAM JANKIDASS, 31 C. L. J. 134, 47 C 568 734

Civil Procedure Code—1908—concld.

——— Sch. II, para. 12—Arbitration—Dissolution of partnership—Arbitrator, power of, to award interest on sums due.

Where in a suit for dissolution of partnership and for accounts, the plaintiff claims interest which the defendant says he is not liable to pay and the matter in dispute is referred to arbitration, one of the points referred being whether the defendant is liable for any money and, if so, the amount due, it is not an error on the part of the arbitrator to include in his award the sum payable by the defendant as interest both on sums advanced to the firm, and on those advanced to the defendant for his personal use, and also for the period before and after the suit and up to the date of the award. C JAHARMAL-DEBI DUTTA v BIRINCHI BHUSAN 941

——— Sch. II, para. 16—Award—Parties dissatisfied—Remedy proper—Suit to set aside award, whether maintainable

Where an arbitrator is appointed under the Second Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code a suit to set aside the award is not maintainable as being contrary to the plain intention of the law. The proper remedy in such a case is an application submitted to the Court to set aside the award. L B SHWE HPAN v MA CHIT NYEIN, 10 L. B. R. 106; 13 Bur. L. T. 34 677

——— Sch III—Decree for joint possession—Revenue paying estate—Allotment of share and delivery of possession—Collector, duty of—Reference to Civil Court, validity of—Rights of parties after partition.

Where a decree for joint possession of an estate assessed to revenue is passed by a Civil Court, it is for the Collector not only to make allotment but to complete the partition by delivery of possession, and where he refers the parties to the Civil Court for this purpose he fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law.

After the allotment has been made, the parties cannot claim to be joint owners of the property even though the partition proceedings have not been completed according to law. N MUNAWAR ALI v. TAIYABALI 806

Common Law of England, applicability of, to India.

The rules of the Common Law of England have no application to the Mofassil towns of India, except as rules of justice, equity and good conscience. Pat BRAHMANAND SINGH v. DUND BAHADUR SINGH, 1 P. L. T. 229; (1920, Pat 245; 2 U. P. L. R (Pat) 111 344

Company In liquidation—Solvency, test of—Interest after commencement of liquidation, liability to pay—Proof of interest, whether necessary.

If a company in liquidation is, or ultimately turns out to be, solvent, interest is payable upon any debts which carry interest, or upon which a right to interest has been acquired, out of the surplus assets remaining after payment of principal and interest up to the date of the winding-up order.

Company in liquidation—concld.

The solvency of a company is established by the fact that after the payment of the principal and interest up to the date of the winding-up, there are some assets which may be realized and will be sufficient to meet the liability on account of interest which accrued due after the commencement of the liquidation.

No proof is necessary for interest after the commencement of the winding-up, the creditor, if his debt is one that bears interest, gets it, if there is a surplus, as incidental to his debt, irrespective of the question whether any mention of the interest was made in the order adjudicating upon his claim. L GHANSHAMDAS v. PUBLIC BANKING AND INSURANCE Co., 1 L. 154 251

Companies Act (VI of 1832), s. 68—Charge in favour of officer of company—Non-registration, effect of—Charge, whether enforceable—"As such," effect of—Appeal—Enlargement of time—High Court, power of.

An officer of a Limited Company cannot avail himself of a mortgage or charge in his favour, which has not been registered in accordance with section 68 of the Companies Act, 1882.

The words "as such" in the Explanation to section 68 of the Companies Act of 1882 are superfluous.

The lower Court decided that want of registration did not prevent the enforcement of a charge against a Company by one of its officers. The debenture-holders, although bound by the judgment, did not appeal. More than a year after the time for appeal had elapsed, when it was sought to enforce the charge, the debenture-holders, on appeal to the High Court, were allowed by that Court to raise the point of non-registration:

Held, that the High Court had by implication enlarged the time for appeal. P C KRISHNA AYYANGAR v. NALLAPERUMAL PILLAI, 38 M. L J. 444; 18 A L. J. 489; 22 Bom. L R. 568; 28 M. L. T. 28; 12 L. W. 92; (1920) M. W. N. 419; 43 M. 550; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 118; 47 I. A 33 163

——— ss. 147, 169—Company in liquidation, when becomes solvent—Bankruptcy rules, applicability of.

A company in liquidation becomes solvent as soon as it has paid off its liabilities existing at the date of the winding-up order.

Ordinary bankruptcy rules are applicable to companies in liquidation and when the liabilities existing at the date of the winding-up order have been discharged, creditors, when debts carry interest, are entitled to subsequent interest. L DEVI DITTA MAL v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, AMRITSAR BANK, LTD., 1 L. 368 69

Complaint dismissed without complainant's evidence—Complainant, order for prosecution of, whether justified.

When a complaint is dismissed upon the report of the Investigating Officer without taking the complainant's evidence, it is improper to direct the prosecution of the complainant under section 211, Penal Code. A MEWA LAL v. EMPEROR, 18 A L J. 620; 21 Cr. L. J. 416; 2 U. P L. R. A) 213 64

Compromise—Agreement between parties, when amounts to completed compromise. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XXIII, R. 3 26

Consent decree—Limitation, plea of, waiver of—Appeal, whether lies.

Where a suit is time-barred but the defence of limitation is waived and a decree is passed, such decree is a consent one, and no appeal lies therefrom. P C RAMCHANDRA DEO GARU v. CHAITANA SAHU, 18. A. L. J. 625; (1920) M. W. N. 366; 39 M. L. J. 68; 28 M L T 97; 12 L. W 260; 24 C. W. N. 1055, 2 U. P L. R. P. C.) 122; 22 BOM. L. R 1313 539

Construction of decree—Appellate decree, ambiguity in—Decree of first Court and pleadings, whether can be looked into—Executing Court, powers of.

A decree must be construed in a fair and reasonable spirit so as to advance and not to impede its execution

An executing Court cannot vary or alter a decree under execution, but it must be satisfied as to what it is called upon to execute, and in order to find that out, when the decree is not clear and it is an appellate decree, the Court is justified in referring to the pleadings and the decree of the trial Court. Pat TRALOKHYA NATH v. SARAT KUMAR SINGH, 1 P. L. T. 526 283

Construction of document—Ambiguity—Intention of parties—Oral evidence, admissibility of. See EVIDENCE ACT, S. 92, PRO. (2) 476

——— Shankalap, grant by way of—Grantor reserving no right to herself—Property to be held bila lagan with heritable and transferable rights—Under-proprietary rights.

Where a deed of grant declared that the grant was made by way of shankalap, that after the date of the deed the grantor was to have no sort of right or claim to the granted property, and that the grantee was to hold it for ever bila lagani with heritable and transferable rights:

Held, that the deed conferred under-proprietary rights on the grantee. O GANESH PRASAD v. BISHWANATH, 7 O. L. J. 188; 23 O. C. 30 354

——— Shankalapnama with power of transfer—Grant in perpetuity—Transaction, whether amounts to sale—Pre-emption, right of, whether arises.

A document, described as a shankalapnama with powers of transfer, recited that the grantors had received from the grantees a certain sum of money as zar-i-peshgi yani baithki, and that in consideration of this payment they had openly put the grantees in possession of a certain piece of land, and declared that the grantees would remain in possession for ever subject to an annual payment on account of Government revenue. The proprietors and under-proprietors in the village brought this suit for pre-emption, contending that the document amounted to an out-and-out sale of an under-proprietary right. The defendants pleaded that the document was merely a lease and did not give rise to a right of pre-emption in favour of the plaintiffs, and the lower Courts, accepting this view, dismissed the claim. On appeal by the plaintiffs:

Held, that the document amounted to an out-and out sale, because the stipulation therein making the grantees liable for the payment of the Government revenue necessarily imported the grant of an under-proprietary right and that consequently, a right of pre-emption did arise in favour of the plaintiffs. O RAM SUCHIT v. SHEO SEWAK SINGH, 23 O. C. 50 629

Construction of Statutes—Speech in Legislative Council, whether can be referred to.

When the construction of an Act is in question, no statement made on the introduction of the measure or its discussion can be looked at as affording any guidance as to the meaning of the words. PC KRISHNA AYYANGAR v. NALLAPERUMAL PILLAI, 38 M. L. J. 444; 18 A. L. J. 489; 22 Bom. L. R. 568; 28 M. L. T. 28; 12 L. W. 92; (19 0) M. W. N. 419; 43 M. 550; 2 U P. L. R. (P. C.) 118; 47 I. A. 33 163

Constructive possession—Possession of part, whether possession of whole.

Although possession of a part is constructive possession of the whole if the whole is otherwise vacant, this constructive possession is an incident of ownership and results from title The doctrine of constructive possession is not applicable to a case where the occupant defends himself on the ground of his possession only without proving any title. Pat KUMAR PREMATHA NATH MALIA v MEIK, (1920 PAT. 146; 5 P. L. J. 273; 1 P. L. T 360) 184

Contract, construction of—Condition, implied —Sale of goods to be supplied to vendor by third parties—Goods not supplied to vendor—Liability of vendor to purchaser.

Defendants undertook to supply a certain number of bales of Dhoties manufactured by the Bradbury Mills to the plaintiffs. The agreement after setting out the details proceeded to say: "The goods under manufacture are sold. The same are to be taken delivery of as and when the same may be received from the mills. Delivery is to be caused to be given in full by the 3 st of December in the year 918." The mills failed to supply the full number of bales to the defendants, who consequently could not supply them to the plaintiffs. The latter sued the defendants to recover damages for breach of contract:

Held, that the basis or foundation of the contract was the anticipation, common to both parties, that the mills would supply the goods to the vendors and that the goods not having been supplied by the mills, the foundation of the contract disappeared and neither party had any claim against the other for damages B HURNANDRAI FULCHAND v. PRAGDAS BUDHSEN, 24 BOM. L. R. 343 632

Contract—concld.

be late and that it would be taken as a case of "Force majeure." The plaintiffs were also informed that the defendants were entitled to tender delivery at any time until arrival of the last steamer of July shipment, which was yet to come. In October, that is, before the last steamer arrived, plaintiffs institutes the present suit claiming damages for breach of contract owing to defendants' failure to tender the sugar of the July shipment by 12th September 1917, the latest date by which such shipment sugar could be tendered for delivery under the contracts. The defendants contended that the contracts were made on the usual terms of office contracts, by virtue of which in case of delay in shipment due to unavoidable circumstances they were exempt from liability. In other words, the benefit of what is known in the contract forms of importing firms as the "Force majeure" clause was claimed:

Held, (1) that the contracts between the parties were on the terms of the office contracts with the buyers, meaning thereby that the parties were bound by the terms of those contracts as to whether the goods tendered were such as could be tendered as July shipment goods;

(2) that the defendants were entitled to wait till the arrival of the last steamer, and could take advantage of the "Force majeure" clause;

(3) that the plaintiffs' suit, having been intsituted before the arrival of the last steamer, was premature and must be dismissed. S GOBINDRAM v. KHUSHALDAS, 13 S. L R. 100 885

———, construction of—Contract for delivery of sugar Contract on "usual terms"—Late shipment—Office contracts, meaning of - Shortage of steamers—Force majeure clause, when can be taken, advantage of.

Plaintiffs entered into four contracts with the defendants at Karachi on the "usual terms" for the purchase of 60 tons of Java sugar, July-September 19 7 shipment. Owing to the war and the Government requisitioning tonnage, part of the July 1917 shipment was shut out at Java and July shipment goods arrived in Karachi, some in August 1917 and the remainder in February 1918. Plaintiffs demanded delivery of the goods in August 1917 and were informed that July shipment goods were still to come. In September they again demanded delivery and were informed that the defendants were entitled to perform at any time up to the arrival of the steamer. In response to a further demand for delivery the defendants intimated that they had been advised that on account of Government requisitioning steamers August and subsequent shipments would ———, formation of—Documents constituting contract—Breach of contract—Damages, measure of.

A., a dealer in a certain class of goods, used to obtain his supplies from firm B. On July 21st he wrote to B. stating his requirements and asking the firm to write sowda or contract. On July 24th the firm wrote giving their selling rates from July to November. On July 24th A. wrote to the firm "Please write sowda for one wagon for the month of July in respect of flour," etc., he then set out the rates and concluded thus, "Please write sowda for four wagons On arrival of the goods ordered I shall send for one wagon of July sowda. Further I shall make the sowda for the months of October and November pucca hereafter. Please send a reply to this letter." He also on the 1st and 5th August made remittances to B which the latter accepted. On July 29th B. despatched a letter, dated July 28th, to A repeating the rates quoted in his letter of July 24th, and on the same day sent him a telegram quoting different rates, to which A. objected:

Held, that there was a completed contract between the parties, that after the firm B. had sent in its quotation, and A had made the remittance and given the order, there was an acceptance of the offer which constituted a complete contract, and that the rate of damages was the difference between the price prevailing in A's city on the day of delivery and the contract rate plus the cost of freight and bags. C MADHUSUDAN KOER v. BADRIDAS, 31 C. L. J. 93 693

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Mortgage—Interest, high rate of—Court, power of, to reduce rate of interest—Undue influence—Hard and unconscionable bargain.

In the absence of any thing to show that undue advantage was taken of a mortgagor, or that his will was dominated or that the terms of the mortgage were extorted from him in any way, the mortgagee is entitled to interest at the contract rate, and the Court ought not to come to the conclusion that the stipulation in the mortgage-deed as to interest is hard and unconscionable. C BEJOY KUMAR ADDYA v. SATISH CHANDRA GHOSE, 24 C. W. N. 444 1007

——— s. 16—Undue influence—Burden of proof—Unconscionable bargain—Test—Compound interest, agreement to pay, effect of.

An agreement to pay interest at a stipulated rate does not become unconscionable merely because there is a stipulation to pay compound interest at the same rate in the event of there being a default in the payment of the simple interest agreed upon.

There is nothing inherently wrong or oppressive in a lender's securing for himself compound interest after the borrower has for a considerable time neglected to pay the debt or the interest accruing due upon it which he has contracted to pay. It is the state of affairs at the time when the bargain was struck that has to be considered, and not the ultimate claim made L RAM DAS v. ABBAS 74

——— s. 23—Auction sale—Agreement not to bid against each other, whether unlawful—Bidding curtailed—Fraud on vendor.

It is not unlawful for two or more persons to agree not to bid against each other at an auction sale. The fact that owing to such an agreement the bidding is curtailed is not a fraud upon the vendor. L B NAGAPPA CHETTY v. AH FOKE, 12 Bur. L. T. 241 963

——— s. 23—Champertous agreement, validity of—Agreement to share property obtained by litigation in consideration of promisee providing funds, whether can be enforced.

The English Law of champerty is not in force in India and fair agreements made by claimants of property in litigation to share it with others on their obtaining decrees, in consideration of funds being supplied by the latter for carrying on their suits, are not in themselves opposed to public policy, nor are they necessarily void, but such agreements, when extortionate, are inequitable and in that case should not receive effect.

In order to determine whether such an agreement is extortionate or inequitable, what has to be looked at is the actual value of the land in dispute at the time when the agreement was made. L INDAR SINGH v. MUNSHI BHAGWAN SINGH, 1 L. 124 272

——— s. 23—Surety-bond, forfeiture of—Agreement to indemnify surety, enforceability of Public policy.

A contract to indemnify a surety against loss in the event of the surety-bond being forfeited is illegal and cannot be enforced. C BHUPATI CHARAN NANDI v. GOLAM EHIHAR CHOUDHURY, 24 C. W. N. 368 539

——— ss. 79, 83, 86, 112—C. I. F. contract—Sale of goods—Property in goods, when passes—Buyer, right of, to reject goods—Remedy in case of shortage or deterioration.

Contract Act—contd.

Under a C. I. F. contract property in the goods sold passes at the time of shipment, but such passing is subject to the buyer's right to reject the goods if after inspection they are found to be not goods in accordance with the contract; this, however, refers to the goods at the time of shipment and not to any shortage or deterioration caused on the voyage for which the buyer's remedy lies in the policy of insurance.

Section 86 of the Contract Act does not preclude a buyer from agreeing to take the risk of loss or damage before the property in the goods passes to him. On tender of the effective shipping documents the property in the goods passes to the buyer, but even if this were not so, a contract, the terms of which imply that the goods are at the buyer's risk from the time of the shipment, is not invalid. L B AH CHOY v. TRADING COMPANY 978

——— s. 107, applicability of—Contract to sell goods not ascertained—Sale, whether complete—Delivery, failure to accept—Re-sale—Damages, measure of.

On 18th August 1919 D. entered into an agreement with S., the owner of an oil mill, for the purchase of 101 maunds of castor oil at Rs. 31-12-0 per maund to be delivered at Cawnpore in 8 days, S. despatched a portion of the oil on the 21st August and the remainder on the 23rd August to a firm at Cawnpore, and called upon D. to take delivery after having the oil weighed at the shop of that firm. D. failed to take delivery, and further refused a telegram from S, warning him that if he did not take delivery in 2 days the oil would be sold at the prevailing rate, and that he would be liable for damages caused by re-sale. On 13th September S. sold the oil for Rs 26 a maund and brought the present suit to recover as damages the difference between the contract rate and the price realised by re-sale:

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the damages claimed, as the transaction did not amount to a complete sale, but was merely a contract to sell, that the sale could not have become complete until the quantity of the oil sold was separated and taken to Cawnpore and was weighed or was otherwise ready for delivery within the knowledge and with the consent of D. and that S. was merely entitled to the difference between the rate agreed and the market rate prevailing on the date of the breach.

Held, further, that to such a case the provisions of section 07 of the Contract Act did not apply. O SHAMBHU DAYAL v. DURGA PRASAD, 23 O. C. 67 647

——— ss. 151, 152, 161—Railways Act (IX of 1890), ss. 72, 80—Bailee, laibility of, extent of—Burden of proof—Goods consigned to two Railways—One Railway responsible for loss—Damages, whether can be recovered from both Railways.

The duty of a Railway Administration to which goods are delivered for carriage is that of a bailee as defined in sections 151, 152 and 161 of the Contract Act, and when a thing is injured or lost while in the charge of a Railway the question of the burden of proof must be dealt with on the footing that the Railway is a bailee and not an insurer, and the burden of proving that the Railway has exercised ordinary care must generally in the first instance be upon the Railway and it is for them to establish positively that they had discharged the statutory duty which is defined in section 72 of the Railways Act, read with sections 151 and 152 of the Contract Act.

Contract Act—concld.

Although section 80 of the Railways Act gives a plaintiff an option to sue one of two Railway Administrations in cases where goods have been booked through, yet where the plaintiff sues both of them he is not entitled to a decree against that one of them which has satisfied the Court that it has taken all the care of his goods that was required of it by law. O SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. AFZUL HUSAIN, 7 O. L. J. 250; 23 O. C. 96; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 109 714

Co-sharer—Co-sharer, one of several, paying off rent decree—Contribution, suit for, maintainability of—Court, duty of, performance of—Presumption—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 69—Appropriation, doctrine of, applicability of, to contribution.

Where a co-sharer is not bound by law to pay a rent decree in favour of the superior landlord, he is not liable to contribution where the decree is paid off by the other co-sharer.

Where a statutory duty is imposed on a Court, it must be presumed that that duty has been performed.

No question of appropriation arises in a suit for contribution under section 69 of the Contract Act. Pat KAMALESWARI PROSAD SINGH v. JAGAR NATH SAHAI 949

Costs—Discretion of Court, how to be exercised—Appeal, when competent.

Courts have full discretion in the matter of award of costs, but that discretion is not an arbitrary one and must be exercised in accordance with general principles

In a pre-emption case the plaintiff's right of pre-emption was admitted, the only point in controversy being the price payable. The District Judge, dissenting from the Court of first instance, held that the whole of the price was paid before the Sub-Registrar and that there was no proof of the return of any part of the price. He accordingly accepted the vendee's appeal as to the price, but did not set aside the first Court's decree awarding costs against him. The vendee filed a second appeal in the High Court:

Held, (1) that in the circumstances of the case the Court of Second Appeal was entitled to entertain an appeal on the question of costs;

(2) that the vendee, having defeated his adversary on the only point in controversy between them, was entitled to recover his costs. L GOBIND SAHAI v. RAM CHAND 971

Court-fee, deficiency in, on plaint and appeal—Procedure—Suit for declaratory decree and consequential relief—Court-fee payable.

Where upon the proper valuation of a suit an Appellate Court finds that there is a deficit in the amount of Court-fees paid by the plaintiff on his plaint and memorandum of appeal, the correct procedure for the Court to adopt is to call upon the plaintiff to make good the deficiency and on his failing to do so, to enforce its order by the dismissal of his suit. In such a case the rejection of the plaint is inappropriate, because section 10 of the Court Fees Act enjoins a dismissal without option.

Court-fee—concld.

Where a plaintiff asks for a declaration and consequential relief, he should pay ad valorem fees in proportion to the loss from which he seeks to be relieved. Pat BRIJ KRISHNA DAS v. MURLI RAI, 4 P. L. J. 703 316

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv) (c)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8—Suit for declaration and injunction—Valuation for purposes of Court-fees and jurisdiction.

A plaintiff in a suit for a declaration and for an injunction by way of consequential relief has the right to put his own valuation on the claim for purposes of Court-fees under section 7, clause (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act, and under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, the same value must determine the value for the purpose of jurisdiction.

In a suit for a declaration and for an injunction by way of consequential relief the plaintiff valued the claim at Rs. 135 for purposes of Court-fees and at Rs 16,000 for purposes of jurisdiction. The suit was heard by a First Class Subordinate Judge under his special jurisdiction and was dismissed. Plaintiff filed an appeal in the High Court. On the appeal coming on for hearing, the plaintiff-appellant raised a preliminary point that the value of the claim for purposes of jurisdiction must be taken to be Rs. 135 in accordance with the provision of section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act and that the appeal accordingly lay to the District Judge and not to the High Court:

Held, that under the circumstances of this case, it must be held that the valuation was incorrectly stated for Court-fees and correctly stated for purposes of jurisdiction and that the appeal, therefore, lay to the High Court. B BALKRISHNA NARAYAN SAWANT v. JANKIBAI SITARAM SANZGIRI, 22 Bom. L. R. 289; 44 B. 331 340

——— s. 7 (iv) (c)—Suit for declaration that decree is void, nature of—Prayer for setting aside decree—Court-fee payable.

A suit for a declaration that a decree is null and void and for setting it aside is one both for a declaration and for consequential relief and is governed by clause (iv) (c) of section 7 of the Court Fees Act. N GOVIND v. DHEKLU 550

——— s. 7 (IV) (c), (v)—Suit for declaration of title and possession—Court-fee payable.

Where a challenge is directly thrown on the plaintiff's title as the adopted son of a certain person and the plaintiff comes into Court in order to meet that challenge and claims a declaration of his title as an adopted son and also seeks to recover possession of his adoptive father's property, the suit falls within section 7 (iv) (c), of the Court Fees Act and not within clause (v) of the section. Pat UGRA MOHAN v. LACHHMI PRASAD CHAUDHURI, 5 P. L. J. 339 422

——— s. 7 (v), Sch. II, Art. 17 (vi)—Suit for partition—Property in possession of defendant—Court-fee payable.

Plaints in all suits for partition should be carefully examined. Where it is patent that the defendants are in possession of any part of the property to be partitioned and have denied the plaintiff's title thereto, the suit is obviously a suit to recover possession of that part of the property at least, and a Court-fee ad valorem on the share claimed in that part must be levied. Pat DIP CHAND RAI v. CHHETRU LAL, 1 P. L. T. 529 570

——— s. 7 (iv) (c), Sch. II, Art. 17 (3) —Suit to set aside decree on ground of fraud, nature of—Court-fee payable.

A suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud falls under sub-clause (c) of clause (iv) of section 7 of the Court Fees Act and ad valorem Court-fees must be paid on the value set on the claim for purposes of jurisdiction. N BALDEOPRASAD v. GHASIRAM, 16 N. L. R 84 360

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 44—Omission to give information of commission of offence to Police, manner of proving.

Under section 44 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is the duty of a person who witnesses the commission of an offence to give information thereof to the nearest Magistrate or Police Officer, and, if he fails to do so, he renders himself liable to prosecution under section 202 of the Penal Code. N AJODHI v. EMPEROR, 16 N. L R. 30; 21 CR. L. J. 486 532

——— s. 107—Information, necessity of, before initiation of proceedings—Magistrate, whether can issue process on his own knowledge—Procedure.

Prior to the initiation of proceedings under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, information must be given against a person from whom it is sought to take security.

Where the petitioner made an application under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, against one A. and the Magistrate, on taking his statement, recorded an order that the petitioner was a quarrelsome fellow and called upon him to show cause why he should not be bound down, and eventually did place him on security under section 107:

Held, (1) that it was quite illegal for the Magistrate to issue notice to the petitioner merely because he considered from his own statement that he was a quarrelsome person;

(2) that no information such as is required by section 107 having been given to the Magistrate, the initiation of the proceedings was ultra vires. L ABDUL KARIM v. EMPEROR, 10 P. L. R. 1920; 21 CR. L. J. 511 671

——— s. 107, proceedings under—Hearsay evidence.

Proceedings under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, cannot be based upon hearsay evidence. N MOHAN v. EMPEROR, 21 CR. L. J. 560 864

——— s. 107—Security for breach of peace—Jurisdiction of Magistrate, essential condition of—"Wrongful act," meaning of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860,) s. 295—Killing of dedicated bull—Offence.

An essential condition of the jurisdiction of a Magistrate to act under section 107, riminal Procedure Code, is that he should have some tangible evidence that some definite wrongful act is contemplated, which act, if committed, is likely to cause a breach of the peace.

The words "wrongful act" in section 107 mean an act forbidden by the Penal Statutes of India, or declared to be penal or wrongful by such Statutes.

The killing of a dedicated bull for the sake of the meat and the value of the skin is not an offence under section 295 of the Penal Code. Pat PIR ALI v. EMPEROR, 21 CR. L. J. 453 437

——— ss. 107, 350 (1), proviso (a)—Proceedings under s. 107—Right of person proceeded against to re-call witnesses.

A person proceeded against under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code has the same right, under section 350 (1), proviso (a), as an accused person in a summons or warrant case, to have the witnesses re-called and re-heard M YELUCHURI VENKATACHENNAYA v. EMPEROR, 11 L. W. 435; (1920, M. W. N. 280; 38 M. L. J. 370; 21 CR. L. J. 402; 43 M. 511 50

——— s. 133—Absence of one of the Jurors at the time of making investigation, effect of—Report of other Jurors, whether should be acted upon—Procedure.

Where in a proceeding under section 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure only four out of the five Jurors were present at the time of the investigation:

Held, that the Magistrate should not act upon their report but should allow the proceedings to go on after appointing a fresh Jury. C DASSYA v. NIBARAN CHANDRA GHOSE, 31 C. L. J. 371; 21 CR. L. J. 448; 24 C. W. N. 928 240

——— s. 133, scope of—Lawful trade, whether can be prohibited—Manner of carrying on trade, whether can be restricted—Order proceeding on grounds not covered by notice, legality of.

Section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code relates to an existing state of affairs and not to the possibility of future results.

Clause (3) of section 133 deals only with occupations or trades which are in themselves injurious to health or physical comfort and has nothing to do with trades which in themselves are innocuous, but in the course of which the manager, or plier, of them commits a public nuisance.

The provisions of Chapter X of the Criminal Procedure Code should be worked so as not to become themselves a nuisance to the community at large, and although every man is bound so to use his own property that it may not work legal damage or harm to his neighbour, yet no one has a right to interfere with a free and full enjoyment by another of his property except on clear and absolute proof that such use is producing such legal damage or harm and, therefore, a lawful and necessary trade such as the manufacture of bricks should not be interfered with unless it is proved that it is injurious to the health, or physical comfort, of the community.

An order under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code which proceeds on grounds not covered by the notice issued to the accused is illegal L GOKAL HAND v. EMPEROR, [illegible] L. 16; 21 CR. L. J 462 446

——— s. 162—Statement to Police, manner of proving

Although section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code forbids the obtaining of signatures to a statement taken down in writing by the Police, there is no prohibition to evidence being given of a statement recorded in writing by the Police, provided it is otherwise relevant, nor can the provisions of the section be evaded by the Police recording as the first information report a statement obtained after the commencement of the investigation N AJODHI v. EMPEROR, 16 N. L. R 30; 21 CR. L J. 486 582

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 164—Statement recorded in presence of Police Officer, value of—Witness withholding information about offence, reliability of.

A statement cannot be said to be properly recorded under section 164, Criminal Procedure Code, if a Police Officer is present at the time and is allowed to put questions to the witness.

Statements of witnesses who do not say anything about the commission of an offence which they have witnessed to anybody till the time of their examination by the Police and who on being questioned previously stated that they knew nothing, cannot be relied on. L INDAR SAIN v. EMPEROR, 21 CR. L. J. 418 210

——— ss. 179, 181 (2), 202—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 403—Criminal misappropriation—Place of trial—Preliminary inquiry, when necessary.

Accused was charged by his master with having misappropriated a sum of money. He received the money on behalf of his master at Raniganj, and deposited it in his master's name with a firm at Barh; he withdrew it from this firm and failed to account for it, the complaint was filed in the Court of the City Magistrate of Patna, who dismissed it on the ground that the case was of a civil nature for the adjustment of accounts:

Held, (1) that the facts alleged did not necessarily involve an adjustment of accounts, and the complaint should not have been dismissed on that ground alone;

(2) that as the offence was complete the moment the accused received or retained the money with the dishonest motive of appropriating it or converting it to his own use, and as he received the money at Barh, the City Magistrate of Patna had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint

Where upon a complaint it is doubtful whether an offence has been committed, the Magistrate should hold an inquiry under section [illegible] of the Criminal Procedure Code before summoning the accused to ascertain whether a prima facie case has been made out and the accused should be summoned or not. Pat GOWKARAN LAL v. SARJU SAW, 1 P. L. T. 200; 21 CR. L. J. 519 775

——— s. 195—Penal Code Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Evidence Act (I of 187 , s. 80—Perjury, trial for—Prosecution, duty of—Recital in judgment, whether can take the place of deposition—Admissibility of recital—Sanction to prosecute, refusal to grant by trial Court—Sessions Judge, interference by, when justified.

In a prosecution under section 193, Penal Code, it is the duty of the prosecution to prove conclusively that the statement made by the accused was necessarily a false statement.

The recital in a judgment of a statement made by a witness cannot take the place of a record of the deposition of the witness, nor can such recital be accepted as evidence under section 80 of the Evidence Act, and it, therefore, cannot form the basis of a prosecution under section 93 of the Penal Code.

Where a trial Court which has the advantage of seeing a witness in the box, and is cognisant of the full facts in connection with the case, refuses to sanction the prosecution of the witness, the Sessions Judge should not, unless a clear case is made out against the witness, too readily adopt a different view and grant sanction. Pat NIRGHIN MAHTON v. EMPEROR, 21 CR L. J. 500 660 ——— ss. 195, 476—Order under s. 476—Judicial proceeding, existence of, whether necessary—Court sanctioning prosecution under s. 195—Sanction subsequently altered to order under s. 476, legality of—Time limit for passing such order.

For the purposes of section 476 of the riminal Procedure Code it is not necessary that judicial proceedings should be in existence before an order under that section is made; all that is required is that the order should be passed with respect to an offence which may have been committed before the Court or brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding.

Where a Court sanctions a prosecution under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, and is subsequently directed by the Appellate Court to which it is subordinate to draw up a proceeding under section 476 as being more appropriate, a compliance with such a direction is not fatal to the proceedings, as the granting of sanction to prosecute at an earlier stage of the proceedings was present in the mind of the Court.

Although there is no time limit fixed for the making of an order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, yet where there has been undue delay, the High Court is entitled to set aside the order and arrest further proceedings. Pat BIRAN RAI v. EMPEROR, (920 PAT. 205; 1 P. L. T. 331; 21 CR. . . J 649 853

——— s. 195 (6)—Appellate Court, power of, to remand case for further inquiry—Inherent power of Court to make inquiry.

Although a Court, before which an application comes under section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code for re-consideration of orders passed by a Subordinate Court has no power to remand the case for further inquiry, it, nevertheless, has inherent power to make an inquiry itself and to proceed in accordance with law. Pat BALDEO KOERI v. LAKSHMI NARAYAN KUER, 1 P. L. T. 627; 21 CR. L. J. 479 511

——— s. 195 (6) (7)—Sanction given by Munsif—Appeal, forum of—Munsif's Court, whether subordinate to that of Senior Subordinate Judge.

A Munsif granted sanction for the prosecution of one S for an offence under section 210, Indian Penal Code. On appeal the Senior Subordinate Judge maintained the order. S. filed an application for revision in the High Court:

Held, that as appeals from the order or decree of a Munsif ordinarily lie to the District Courtand only in special cases to the Senior Subordinate Judge, the Munsif is subordinate to the District Court within the meaning of section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code;

(2) that consequently the Senior Subordinate Judge had no power to hear the appeal. L SUNDAR SINGH v. PHUMAN SINGH, 21 CR. L. J. 4 5; 122 P. L R. 1920 591

——— s. 202—Criminal misappropriation—Place of trial—Preliminary inquiry, when necessary.

Where upon a complaint it is doubtful whether an offence has been committed, the Magistrate should hold an inquiry under section 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code before summoning the accused to ascertain whether a prima facie case has been made out and the accused should be summoned or not. Pat GOWKARAN LAL v. SARJU SAW, 1 P. L. T. 200; 21 CR. L. J. 519 775

——— ss. 202, 203, 476—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211—Complaint against Police Officer—Investigation by another Police Officer, propriety of—Complaint dismissed without complainant's evidence—Complainant, order for prosecution of, whether justified.

Where a complaint is made against an Officer of Police, it is improper to direct another Police Officer to conduct the investigation, the investigation should be conducted by the Magistrate receiving the complaint or by some other Magistrate.

When a complaint is dismissed upon the report of the Investigating Officer without taking the complainant's evidence, it is improper to direct the prosecution of the complainant under section 211, Penal Code. A MEWA LAL v. EMPEROR, 18 A. L. J. 620; 21 CR. L. J. 416; 2 U. P. L R. A 213 64

——— ss. 236, 271, 537—Sessions case—Charge, absence of, from record, explanation of—Irregularity.

On the record of a trial by a Court of Session there should be the charge, which under section 271 of the Criminal Procedure Code has been read over and explained to the accused, and where this is not so, the record should contain an explanation of its absence The fact that this is an omission covered by section 537 of the Code is not a sufficient answer. A JAGDEO PRASHAD v. EMPEROR, 18 A L. J. 442; 21 CR. L. J. 410 58

——— s. 260—Summary trial—Non-appealable sentence—Judgment, contents of.

In a summary trial, where a non-appealable sentence is passed, the Magistrate need only record a finding and his reasons therefor. A BHOLA NATH v. EMPEROR, 21 CR L. J. 442 234

——— s. 288—Witness not produced in Court of Session, effect of—Statement.

Section 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code has no application to the evidence of a witness not produced ad examine d in a Court of Session. N AJODHI v. EMPEROR, 16 N. L. R. 30; 21 CR. L. J. 486 582

——— ss. 297, 439—Trial by Jury—Previous proceedings against accused—Failure to warn Jury to disregard result of such proceedings—Misdirection—Joint trial of two accused—Appeal by one—High Court, power of, to deal with non-appealing accused

Where in his summing up to a Jury the Judge considers it necessary to refer to previous proceedings against the accused, he ought to deal with them in such a manner as to avoid, if possible, the minds of the Jury being affected by the result of the proceedings It is his duty to warn the Jury to pay no attention to the result of those proceedings, and his omission to so warn the Jury amounts to a misdirection sufficient to vitiate the whole of the proceedings.

The High Court in the exercise of the powers vested in it under section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure can, in a proper case, while setting aside the conviction and sentence of an accused appellant, also release his co-accused who has not appealed. C MIR MOUZE ALI v. EMPEROR, 31 C. L. J. 305; 21 CR.L. J 554 858

——— ss. 303, 307—Verdict of Jury—Perverse verdict—Jury, when may be questioned for reasons of verdict—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 380—Accused caught with stolen property—Explanation, absence of—Offence.

Accused was tried by a Jury upon a charge of theft. He produced no witnesses in defence The prosecution evidence showed that immediately after the theft he was pursued and was caught red-handed with the stolen property in his possession. The Jury returned a verdict of not guilty:

Held, that the verdict was perverse, and that the accused should be convicted under section 380 of the Penal Code.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J—Although a Sessions Judge has no power under section 303 or section 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code to question a Jury as to the reasons for their verdict, it nevertheless is not improper to put them questions for the purpose of coming to a satisfactory conclusion whether the case is a fit one for reference to the High Court M SUBBIAH THEVAN, In re, 11 L. W. 56; 1920 M W. N 347; 39 M. L. J. 65; 43 M. 744 21 CR L J. 466 498

——— ss. 338, 339—Pardon tendered to accused—Order directing trial—Jurisdiction—Procedure.

At the conclusion of a Sessions trial the Sessions Judge directed the commitment for trial of two of the accused to whom a pardon had been tendered by the District Magistrate:

Held, (1) that the Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to make the order;

(2) that on being placed on trial the accused would first plead their pardons and it would be for the trial Court to decide whether or not the pardons had been forfeited. L CHANAN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 1 L. 218; 108 P. L. R. 1920; 21 CR. L. J. 518 774

——— s. 345—Composition of offence with one of several accused persons, effect of.

The composition of an offence under section 345 of the Criminal Procedure Code with one of several accused persons has not the effect of an acquittal of all the accused persons. L RAM KISHEN v. EMPEROR, 1 L 169; 21 CR L. J. 437; 121 P. L. R. 1920 229

——— ss. 345, 439—Composition of offence—Revision—High Court or Sessions Judge, power of, to allow composition.

Neither the High Court nor the Judge of a Court of Session, when sitting as a Court of Revision, has the power, in view of section 345 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to allow an offence to be compounded A RAM BARAN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 2 U. P. L R. A 40; 8 A. L. J. 574; 21 CR L. J. 447; 42 A 474 239

——— ss. 412, 429, 439—Petroleum Act

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

(VIII of 1899), s. 15 (a)——Guilty, plea of—Written statement by accused, value and effect of—Procedure.

Accused was charged with having in his possession a quantity of kerosine oil without a license or pass: he pleaded guilty and filed a written statement in which he raised the defence that he did not trade in kerosine oil, that the oil belonged to a firm which had a transport license, and that under that license he had been employed to convey the oil from the Railway station to the firm's godown:

Held, that the plea of guilty must be taken in connection with the written statement, that the plea was really not a plea of guilty and was of no value, and that it was incumbent on the Magistrate to try the case on the merits.

Per Newbould, J.—The principle of section 412 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should ordinarily be applied in cases in which the High Court is asked to exercise its revisional powers.

Where a Court of revision holds the conviction of an accused person to be bad on the ground that a plea of guilty should not have been recorded, it should order a retrial of the accused. C EMPEROR v AKUB ALI, 31 C. L. J. 122; 21 CR. L. J. 547 851

——— s. 423—Appellate Court, power of, to alter conviction.

Where a person is tried and convicted of a particular offence, it is illegal for a Court of Appeal to alter the conviction to one for an altogether different offence. Pat RAGHU SINGH v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. T. 221; 21 CR. L. J 496 592

——— s. 437—Further inquiry, order for, when to be made—Notice to accused, whether necessary.

Before an order for further enquiry is passed to the prejudice of an accused person who has been discharged, it is proper that he should be called upon to show cause why such order should not be passed.

An order directing further enquiry should not be passed where on the face of the order of discharge it does not appear that the order is perfunctory or foolish. L NABI BAKHSH v. EMPEROR, 1 L. 216; 109 P. L. R. 1920; 21 CR L. J. 521 777

——— s. 439—Revision—High Court, power of interference of.

In dealing with an application under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, the High Court has to see not merely whether it disagrees with the findings but whether there is something in the way in whics the trial Court has looked at the law or in the method by which it has dealt with the evidence which makes it so doubtful whether the conviction is right that it would amount to a miscarriage of justice to allow it to stand. A MAHBOOB v. EMPEROR, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 113; 21 CR L J. 552 856

——— s. 439 (3)—Enhancement of sentence—High Court, power of, extent of.

In revision the High Court can enhance a sentence and inflict any punishment for the offence which in the opinion of the Court has been committed which might have been inflicted for such offence by a Magistrate of the first class, even although the trial Magistrate was invested only with second or third class powers.

The accused were convicted by a Magistrate of the second class of an offence under section 325, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 25 each. Their appeal was rejected by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, who sent the record to the District Magistrate with a recommendation that the High Court should be moved to enhance the sentences which in his opinion were inadequate. The District Magistrate reported the case to the High Court:

Held, that the Court had power to enhance the sentences to the limit of the sentence which could have been passed by a Magistrate of the first class, inspite of the fact that the trying Magistrate could only have awarded six months L EMPEROR v. JAGAT SINGH, 21 CR. L. J. 57; 1 L 453 861

——— s. 476—Order under s. 476—Judicial proceeding, existence of, whether necessary—Time limit for passing such order.

For the purposes of section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is not necessary that judicial proceedings should be in existence before an order under that section is made, all that is required is that the order should be passed with respect to an offence which may have been committed before the Court or brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding.

Although there is no time limit fixed for the making of an order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, yet where there has been undue delay, the High Court is entitled to set aside the order and arrest further proceedings. Pat BIRAN RAI v. EMPEROR, (1920) PAT. 205; 1 P. L. T. 331: 21 CR. L J. 549 853

——— s. 488—Muhammadan Law—Maintenance, order for—Divorce, effect of—Period for which order effective

A Muhammadan wife obtained an order for maintenance, and applied to the Court for the recovery of arrears due thereunder. The husband pleaded that he had divorced her, and was, therefore, no longer bound by the order. The wife denied knowledge of the divorce, which she alleged was pronounced in her absence and which come to her knowledge only when her husband raised the plea:

Held, that the order of maintenance would become inoperative on the expiration of the divorced wife's iddat, and that, in this case, that period should not be deemed to have expired until the expiry of three months from the date on which she was made cognisant of the divorce. L B MAHOMED HUSAIN v. MA PWA HNIT, 10 L. B R. 104; 13 Bur. L. T. 43: 21 CR. L J. 503 663

——— s. 517—Property produced before Court—Power of Court to dispose of property.

Under section 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is not necessary that the property to be disposed of should have been used for the commission of an offence or that some offence should appear to have been committed regarding it: the Court has power to make an order for the disposal of any property "produced before it or in its custody." N GANPAT v. BAI, 21 CR. L J 414 62

——— s. 524—Property seized on suspicion of being stolen—Order for forfeiture and sale, legality of—Suit to recover possession, maintainability of—Limitation

An order under section 524, Criminal Procedure

Code, directing property seized on suspicion of its being stolen to be forfeited and ordering the sale-proceeds thereof to be credited to Government, is illegal and without jurisdiction, as all that that section authorises is that the Government shall be free to sell the property or to hold it as a trustee for the true owner. A suit, therefore, for the recovery of possession of such property is maintainable, and the fact that such suit is brought more than a year after the order of confiscation is no bar, as it is not necessary to set that order aside. Pat SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v LOWN KARAN MARWARI, 5 P. L. J. 321; (1920) PAT 254; 1 P. L. T. 451; 21 CR. L. J. 475 507

——— s. 526—Transfer of case—Apprehension against fair and impartial trial—Delay in examining complainant—Disregard of preliminaries prescribed by Code, effect of.

In dealing with applications for the transfer of cases each case must be decided upon its own circumstances.

It is not every kind of apprehension that will entitle an accused person to a transfer of the case against him; there must, upon the record, be reasonable grounds for apprehending that the trial would not be fair and impartial. Inordinate delay in examining the complainant, or a disregard of the preliminaries prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure for dealing with complaints, and awaiting the consideration of the evidence in another case with which the accused has no concern, in order to decide whether any action should be taken upon the complaint, are matters which afford reason to the accused to apprehend that he will not have a fair and impartial trial, and such a case is a proper one in which to direct a transfer. Pat REKHA AHIR v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. T. 434; 2 CR. L. J. 504 664

——— s. 562, applicability of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s 420.

The provisions of section 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code are inapplicable to an offence under section 420 of the Penal Code. Pat EMPEROR v. DEVA KANTA JHA, 5 P L J 257; 1 P. L. T. 197; (1920) PAT. 224; 21 CR. L. J. 468 500

Criminal proceedings, postponement of, to civil proceedings.

Though no invariable rule can be laid down, it is ordinarily undesirable to institute criminal proceedings until the determination of civil proceedings in which the same issues are involved. Criminal proceedings lend themselves to the unscrupulous application of improper pressure with a view to influencing the course of the civil proceedings, and beyond that there is the mischief of criminal proceedings being instituted with an imperfect appreciation of the facts where they have not been ascertained in the more searching investigation of a Civil Court. C LUCAS v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF BENGAL, 24 C. W. N 418; 21 CR. L. J 431 577

Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911), s. 22 (2) (b)—Failure to report change of residence—Previous conviction, form of.

The failure by a member of a criminal tribe notified under section 10 of the Criminal Tribes Act to report himself and to give information of his residence or intended change of residence renders him liable to conviction under section 22 (2) of the Act; if he has been previously convicted, he is liable to conviction under section 22 (2) (b) of the Act. A EMPEROR v. BHAGELU DOM, 21 CR. L. J. 434 226

Cross-objections against co-respondent, when can be entertained. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XLI, R 22 262

Custom—Abadi Mortgage of house by non-proprietor—Presumption—Suit for possession, whether maintainable.

The initial presumption is against a non-proprietor being able to alienate the site of, and his right of residence in, his house without the consent of the proprietary body.

In the case of such an alienation the proprietors are entitled to a decree for possession. L AHMAD YAR v. SAADULLAH 11

——— Adoption—Dhusars of Gurgaon settled in Central Provinces, whether governed by Punjab Customary Law—Orphan, adoption of, whether valid.

In matters of adoption Dhusars of Gurgaon, a non-agriculturist tribe, who settled in the Central Provinces are governed by the Customary Law of the Punjab and there is nothing to prevent the adoption of an orphan among them. N JAINARAIN DHUSAR v. RAM KISHORE 822

——— Alienation by widow—Consent of reversioner—Acquiescence—Mutation, failure to object to, effect of—Alienee making improvements—Silence—Estoppel.

A widow permitted an occupancy tenant to exchange one of his occupancy fields with a non-occupancy one. Plaintiff, one of the collaterals of the last male holder and a lambardar, not only did not object to the exchange but was present when mutation was sanctioned and affixed his seal to the patwari's report. Subsequently the occupancy tenant sank a well in the field obtained by him under the exchange and even then the plaintiff raised no objection. Six years after the exchange had been effected, he brought a suit for a declaration that the exchange would not affect his reversionary rights;

Held, that the plaintiff, having acquiesced in the exchange and having failed to object to the sinking of the well by the defendant, was equitably estopped from now objecting to the exchange L ILA-UD-DIN v AMIR ULLAH, 2 U P. L R (L.) 105 874

——— Family custom set up—Tribal custom, evidence as to, whether relevant.

Where only a family custom is set up, evidence as to a tribal custom may in certain circumstances be relevant as showing that a family belonging to that tribe observed it. O CHAURAS KUNWAR v JAGANNATH SINGH, 7 O. L. J. 147; 2 U. P. L. R. J. C. 89 287

——— General rule, whether abrogated by special custom See PUNJAB COURTS ACT, 1914, s 41 651

——— Gift—Donee, failure of direct line of—Reversion of gifted property—Trespasser, possession of, whether adverse to nearest reversioner or all reversioners—Trees planted by donee, whether revert with the land—Compensation. See LIMITATION ACT, SCH. I, ART 144 733

——— Inheritance—Jadubansi Ahirs of village Dharam Khera, District Kheri—Collaterals pre- ferred to daughters—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, construction of.

Custom—contd.

By virtue of a tribal and family custom among the Jadubansi Ahirs of village Dharam Khera, in the District of Kheri, collaterals are, in matters of inheritance, entitled to preference over daughters and their issue.

Where a wajib-ul-arz, purporting to have been dictated or agreed to by the ancestor of the family under consideration, recorded that the custom observed by the family relating to inheritance was that, if a person died without leaving a son, his widow was entitled to remain in possession of his estate for life without any power of transfer, and that, if there was no widow the collaterals would succeed and in their default daughters and their sons would succeed to the inheritance:

Held, that the wajib-ul-arz established that there was a custom in the family by virtue of which daughters and their issue were postponed in favour of collaterals where they existed. O TIKA v. RAM KUAR, 7 O L. J. 234; 23 O. C. 106 696

——— —Pre-emption—Preferential right—Relationship—Burden of proof—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, construction of—Hissadar qaribi, whether denotes blood relation.

If a person claims a preferential right of pre-emption over another co-sharer by reason of relationship, it is for him to prove that fact.

The expression "hissadar qaribi" in a wajib-ul-arz does not necessarily indicate a blood relation. A BHAGWANDAS v TEJ RAM 148

——— Pre-emption—Village confiscated by Government and held for 21 years—Grant to other persons—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, not stating facts, value of.

In 1857, at the time of the Mutiny, a village was confiscated by Government, who held it for twenty-one years and then gave it in grant to persons other than the original proprietors. one year after this, a wajib-ul-arz was prepared but it did not state the actual facts In a suit for pre-emption an entry in the wajib-ul-arz was relied on to prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption:

Held, that inasmuch as the wajib-ul-arz did not state the actual facts, the entry was no proof of the existence of the custom of pre-emption, but that it was merely a record of the wishes of the Zemindars A RADHA KISHEN v. GULZARI LAL, 2 U. P. L. R (A) 156; 18 A L J. 569 73

——— Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz, interpretation of—Bhai bhatija, meaning of.

Where in recording a custom of pre-emption in a wajib-ul-arz, the first right is given to "bhai bhatija sharik hakiyat," this does not mean that an own brother has a preference over a cousin.

Plaintiff claimed a preferential right of pre-emption against the vendee on the ground of being the own brother of the vendor, and it was found that the vendee and the two brothers were descended from the same common great-grandfather:

Held, that the plaintiff had not a preferential right under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz. A SAMHAR SINGH v SHER SINGH, 18 A. L. J. 454; 2 U P. L. R A) 158 183

———, proof of—Burden of proof—Gift to Custom—concld.

khanadamad—Reversion of gifted property, when takes place—Succession—Daughter entitled to succeed, whether can pass succession to sons.

Any person, who relies on an alleged custom, has to prove that the custom exists and applies to the circumstances of the case.

Gifted land reverts to the donor or his collaterals only when the line of descendants of the donee, both male and female, has entirely died out.

The same rule applies where property is gifted to a khanadamad

Except in the case of a daughter who succeeds to her father's property only as an unmarried daughter entitled to hold it until her marriage, there is no custom whereby a daughter who is entitled to succeed is not also entitled to pass succession on to her sons L SHAH MUHAMMAD v FAZAL ILAHI, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 103 913

——— Village common land, building on, by co-sharer—Suit for demolition—Special damage, proof of, whether necessary—Delay in suing—Acquiescence.

A suit by some of the proprietors of a village for the demolition of a house built by another co-proprietor on the village common land is not maintainable without proof of special damage to the plaintiffs.

Where it appeared that the plaintiffs did not raise any objection to the building of the house at the time and instituted their suit after 5 or 6 years:

Held, that the plaintiffs by their conduct had shown that they had acquiesced in the building and that they were, therefore, not entitled to the relief they sought. L SHEO RAM v DHAPAN 454

——— Widow, childless—Estate taken by widow, nature of. See WAJIB-UL-ARZ 699

Custom or Hindu Law—Kapur Khatris of Jhelum District—Presumption—Burden of proof—Mere inaction, whether enough—Hindu Law—Widow, right of, to share on partition—Widow in possession of family house—Declaratory suit, whether competent.

Where the parties are high caste Hindus and do not depend upon agriculture for their livelihood, the ordinary presumption is that they are governed by the provisions of the Hindu law, and the onus rests heavily on the party denying this to establish the existence of a custom at variance with that law.

Kapur Khatris of Jhelum District are governed by Hindu Law in matters of partition

In order to establish a custom wherein the interests of a female are in conflict with those of a male, it must be shown by clear and cogent evidence that there was actually an assertion of her claim by the female and a denial by the male.

Mere inaction, which may be due to various causes, e. g. mutual good will or ignorance of the law, affords no indication of the fact that the rule of Hindu Law has been abrogated and a custom at variance with it has taken its place

The rule of the Mitakshara Law is firmly established that a mother is entitled only to maintenance until partition, and that she can never herself demand a partition. But if a partition takes place by the act of others, not being strangers, she will be entitled to receive a share, if the effect of that partition is to break up or diminish the estate out of which she would otherwise be maintained.

Custom or Hindu Law—concld.

Where, therefore, one of the co-sharers in a joint estate having applied for partition, the widow of the last male owner sued for a declaration of her title to a share in the estate:

Held, (1) that she had a right to claim a share equal to that of the other co-sharers;

(2) that as the widow was residing in the family house, the declaratory suit was maintainable. L GANESH DEVI v. DARSHAN SINGH, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 100 478

Declaration, suit for, value of—Appeal, second—Valuation, objection to.

Where an objection to valuation is taken in the pleadings, and again before issues are framed, and again in the Appellate Court, section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act is no bar to the objection being taken and entertained in second appeal. Pat MOHINI MOHAN MISSER v. GOUR CHANDRA KAI, 5 P. L. J. 397; 1 P. L. T. 39; 2 U. P. L. R. (PAT) 123 762

Decree, ex parte—Suit to set aside decree, maintainability of—Decree obtained by perjured evidence.

The mere fact that the claim in a suit in which an ex parte decree was passed was supported by perjured evidence, would not by itself be a ground for setting aside the decree.

The principle underlying this rule is that the whole case was before the Court which decided it on the pleadings and on the evidence, and whether the case was a false one or not, and whether the evidence adduced was perjured evidence or not, the Court must be held to have adjudicated on both these points and once having adjudicated on them it cannot be asked to adjudicate on them again. Pat KRIPASINDHU v. NANDU CHARAN, 1 P. L. T. 206 606

——— obtained by perjured evidence—Suit to set aside decree, maintainability of—Case, whether fit one for appeal to Privy Council. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 09 (c) 615

Definitions:—

Agrahar. See HINDU LAW—GIFT 361

As such. See COMPANIES ACT, s. 68 163

Ayakzoung. See BUDDHIST ECCLESIASTICAL LAW 939

Bhai Bhatija. See CUSTOM—PRE-EMPTION 183

Business. See EXCESS PROFITS DUTY ACT, s. 2 914

Decree passed on admission. See O. P. TENANCY ACT, s. 81 845

Douhitransha. See MAINTENANCE 803

Final. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 09 302

Gained. See BENGAL ALLUVION AND DILUVION REGULATION 344

Hisadar Qaribi. See WAJIB-UL-ARZ 148

Holding. See OUDH RENT ACT, s. 37 966

Jodi. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT, s. 3 (1) 552

Merchant. See ARBITRATION ACT, s. 19 76

Offence. See PENAL CODE, s. 149 210

Plaint. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. LXIII, R. 1 865

Rents. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT, s. 3 (2) 92

Definitions—concld.

Serving under war conditions. See INDIAN SOLDIERS LITIGATION) ORDINANCE 947

Soldier. See PENAL CODE, s. 131 671

Stair case. See PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT, s. 13 17

Trespass. See PENAL CODE, s. 143 235

Within. See BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT, s. 85 821

Wrongful Act. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 07 437

Yajman Vriti. See HINDU LAW 683

Document lost, contents of, proof of—Oral evidence, admissibility of. See STAMP ACT, s. 35 249

——— on which plaintiff relies—Defendant, right of, to inspect documents. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. VII, R. 14 457

———, subsequent addition to, whether binding—Burden of proof.

Where a party has shown it probable that there is a subsequent addition to a document, he cannot be held bound by the addition merely because it is proved or admitted that the rest of the document is genuine. N SONIBAI v. DHANRAJ 620

Easement—Right of way—Open user for 20 years Presumption. See LIMITATION ACT, s. 26 728

———, suit based upon—Easement not established—Natural right, decree, whether can be based on—Natural right not specifically pleaded—Appellate Court whether can make new case not set out in plaint.

Where a plaintiff claims a right based upon easement and fails to establish the exercise of the right for the statutory period, he cannot succeed upon his natural right, and it is not open to the Court to make out a case not set up in the plaint and grant relief.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration of right by easement to two mochas for draining off rain water from his lands, but he failed to establish the exercise of the right for the statutory period. The Appellate Court, however, gave him a decree, holding that he was entitled to the natural flow of the water through the mochas. In second appeal:

Held, that the decree could not be maintained; that the plaintiff having failed to establish the easement asserted by him, it was not open to the Appellate Court to change the claim into one for the flow of natural water; that the plaintiff could not succeed upon his natural right to drain off water from higher to lower lands in the absence of evidence that the water flowed in the usual course of nature and in undefined channels, and that to succeed upon his natural right, the plaintiff must have specifically pleaded such right. Pat BADHE MANDER v. FAKIR MANDER 970

——— Tenant, whether can obtain prescriptive right against landlord—Easement, extinguishment of, by natural forces—Suit to enforce easement, maintainability of. See LANDLORD AND TENANT 598

Ejectment, suit for—Lease, expiry of—Plaintiff not relying on lease—Cause of action, change of.

A suit for ejectment was contested on the ground that the defendant had acquired occupancy rights. To rebut this the plaintiff produced a lease to cover a period of eight years. Defendant objected in appeal that the lease should have been made the basis of the suit and that the suit ought to have been under section 58 of the Agra Tenancy Act. The objection was allowed and the suit dismissed on the ground that plaintiff ought not to have been allowed to change his cause of action. In second appeal:

Ejectment—concld.

Held, that the plaintiff had not changed his cause of action and that he was not bound to base his claim on the lease. U P B R GAURI SHANKAR v. MEWA, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 69 977

Estate, separate, what constitutes—Cess, direct payment of, effect of.

Direct payment of cess in respect of rent free lands is by no means conclusive that the lands constitute a separate estate. Pat KUMAR PREMATHA NATH MALIA v. MEIK, (1920) PAT 146; 5 P. L. J. 273; 1 P. L. T. 360 184

Estoppel—Person taking active part in bringing about sale, whether estopped from challenging it—Purchase in good faith

There is no estoppel against a person challenging a sale merely because he took an active part in bringing about the sale, was present at the execution of the document, and who, at the time, represented that no claims of his would affect the vendee's title. S SHAHAB-UD-DIN v. VOHIDBUX, 14 S L. R. 12 492

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 25—Confession to Police, admsisibility of, to prove ownership of property.

A confession made to the Police by an accused person is admissible to prove the ownership of property in respect of which he is accused. N GANPAT v. BANI, 21 CR. L. J. 414 62

——— s. 32 (2)—Statement made in course of gossip, admissibility of.

A statement made by a person in the ordinary course of gossip and not in the ordinary course of business is not a statement to which the provisions of section 32 (2) of the Evidence Act would apply. N AJODHI v. EMPEROR, 16 N. L. R. 30; 21 CR. L. J. 486 582 ——— ss. 32 (2), 34—Talab baki papers, evidentiary, value of.

Under section 34 of the Evidence Act talab baki papers are not sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability. The talab baki papers prepared by the agent of a landlord may be evidence under section 32, clause (2) of the Evidence Act, if the landlord shows that the person making the statement is dead and that the entries were made by him in the ordinary course of business. C UMED ALI v. HABIBULLAH, 51 C. L. J. 61; 47 C. 266 38

——— ss. 33, 165—Evidence taken in judicial proceeding, admissibility of, in subsequent proceeding between same parties, by consent of parties.

Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding is admissible in a later proceeding between the same parties where they agree upon that course, irrespective of the conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Evidence Act. M JAINAB BIBI v. HYDERALLY SAHEB, 38 M. L. J. 532; 28 M. L. T. 23; (1920) M. W. N. 360; 12 L. W. 64; 43 M. 609 957

——— s. 35—Confidential inquiry as to possession, whether admissible. See PROCEDURE 807

Evidence Act—concld.

——— s. 67—Document not required by law to be attested—Execution, proof of.

In the case of a document not required by law to be attested, it is absolutely necessary under section 67 of the Evidence Act that some evidence should be given to show that the executant executed the document, i. e., that he signed it or put his mark on it. O BANKE LAL v SWAMI DAYAL, 7 O. L. J. 207; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 82; 23 O. C. 72 328

——— s. 68—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 59—Attestation of mortgage-deed—Execution by pardanashin lady—Proof.

In the case of a pardanashin lady executing a mortgage-deed it is not essential that the attesting witnesses should actually see the executant sign or make a mark. The attestation would be sufficiently proved if there is evidence that the lady admitted that she was the executant and the deed was taken behind the pardah for her signature and after it was signed by her, the signatures of attesting witnesses who were present there were then made. N KASIDANBI v. GANGU LAL 247

——— s. 80—Perjury, trial for—Recital in judgment, whether can take the place of deposition—Admissibility of recital See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s 195 660

——— s. 92—Evidence to show that consideration for pro-note was advanced by person other than payee, admissibility of.

Under section 92 of the Evidence Act, evidence is inadmissible to prove that the consideration for a promissory-note was advanced by some person other than the payee of the note. U B MAUNG SAW v. INGRASWAMY, 3 U. B. R. (1919) 200 259

——— s. 92—Oral evidence to vary or contradict terms of document, admissibility of.

Evidence of acts and conduct of parties is not admissible in order to contradict or vary the written terms of an agreement. Pat SUKHAN RAI v. CHAKOWRI SINGH, 2 U. P. L. R. (PAT.) 119 752

——— s. 92, proviso (2)—Construction of document—Ambiguity—Intention of parties—Oral evidence, admissibility of.

Where effect can be given to every word used in a document, it is not open to the parties to adduce evidence as regards their intention, but where certain words, the use of which is superfluous, render the document ambiguous and it is clear that the parties intended something different from what has been actually written, then under section 92, proviso (2) of the Evidence Act, oral evidence is admissible to show what the parties really intended.

The provision regarding interest in a document ran as follows: "I shall pay for the aforesaid sum every year calculating interest at ten kalams of paddy per year":

Held, that the word 'calculating' would be meaningless unless there was a basis on which the calculation was to be made and the document being silent as to the basis, oral evidence was admissible to show what the basis was. M MUTHUSAMI IYER v. VARADA VYROYAN, 11 L. W. 352; (1920) M. W. N. 239 476

Evidence for defence, method of recording.

A Magistrate should record the evidence for the defence with the same amount of care and precision as that for the prosecution, as otherwise his opinion that the evidence is false is not easy to test. A MAHBOOB v. EMPEROR, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 113; 21 CR. L. J. 552 856

Excess Profits Duty Act (X of 1919), s. 2—'Business', meaning of—Company owning house property and carrying on business of letting tenements and stalls—Company, whether liable to taxation.

The term 'business' in section 2 of the Excess Profits Duty Act has the same meaning which is assigned to it in the Income Tax Act, and the former Act does not contemplate an extension of that meaning or justify the introduction of anything which, according to the scheme of the Income Tax Act, is wholly dissimilar.

A person who has invested his capital in house property and who keeps a rent office, and a staff of rent collectors, clerks, etc., for the purpose of letting out his houses and collecting the rents, is not carrying on a 'business' within the meaning of the Excess Profits Duty Act. Similarly, a Company which holds house property, and distributes the rents therefrom in the form of dividends to share-holders, is not carrying on a 'business' within the meaning of that Act, as, although it is an association for acquiring gain, yet the method of acquiring gain is passive by owning property and not by the active carrying on of business. L B KALADAN SURATTEE BAZAAR CO. LTD., In re 914

Execution of decree Appellate decree, ambiguity in—Decree of first Court and pleadings, whether can be looked into—Executing Court, powers of See CONSTRUCTION OF DECREE 283

——— Order made without notice to party—Party whether bound by order—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O XXXIV, r. 6—Mortgage decree—Balance remaining unpaid on sale—Judgment debtor, liability of, decision of—Notice to judgment-debtor, whether necessary.

A party to an execution proceeding who has had no opportunity to take exception to a proposed order of the Court is not bound in the same way as if an adverse order were made in his presence.

Where the only matter before an execution Court is whether execution can proceed without a supplemental decree under Order XXXIV, rule 6, of the Civil Procedure Code, an order made without notice to the judgment-debtor directing execution to issue against him in respect of costs cannot be supported. C ILLIMMOLLA v. MANINDRA MOHAN PODDAR, 31 C. L. J. 382 801

——— Sale—Application to set aside sale, dismissal of—Application to set aside dismissal—Appeal, whether lies.

An order rejecting an application to set aside an order dismissing for default an application to set aside an auction sale, is not appealable. C AMBICA CHARN KHASKEL v ESMAIL 981

——— Sale of properties belonging to stranger—Application to set aside sale—Limitation See LIMITATION ACT, SCH. I, ART. 166 260

Ex parte decree, application to set aside, dismissed for default—Application for restoration, whether entertainable. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. IX, r. 13 25

——— obtained by fraud, suit to set aside—Burden of proof. See FRAUD 270

——— Suit to set aside decree, whether competent—Remedy, proper. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, (ACT V OF 1908), O. IX, R 13 878

Expert evidence as to age, value of.

The effect of medical testimony as to the age of a person is to render the other evidence adduced in the case as to his age medically probable or improbable. O SRIPAL SINGH v. JAGDISH NARAYAN, 7 O L J. 219; 2 U P. L. R. (J. C.) 77 313

Fraud—Ex parte decree obtained by fraud, suit to set aside—Burden of proof.

In a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud, the plaintiff must prove that the decree was obtained by some fraud practised upon the Court. The dishonesty of a claim on which a plaintiff obtains a decree, after following strictly and honestly the procedure laid down for the trial of suits, cannot justify the setting aside of the decree in a subsequent suit Therefore, if the plaintiff cannot prove that the decree was fraudulently obtained, he cannot succeed whether the original claim against him was true or false. Pat KRISHNA DAYAL GIR v. LAKSHMI NARAIN, 1 P. L. T. 486 270

Government of India Act, 1915, (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 167—High Court, power of superintendence of, extent of—Procedure—Duty of Court.

It is the privilege and prerogative of a High Court, once a record is before it which is erroneous and so erroneous as manifestly to amount to an injustice, to exercise its powers of superintendence to revise such order, or set it aside and direct such further proceedings to be taken as justice may require.

If the record is not before the High Court, but sufficient materials are before it to induce it to send for the record to correct a gross error apparent on the face of the record, it should accede to the application in exercise of the powers conferred upon it, not under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, but under the wider and larger powers conferred upon it under section 107 of the Government of India Act. Pat BRINDABAN CHANDER CHOUBEY v GOUR CHANDRA RAY, (1920) Pat 66; 1 P L. T 467 155

Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. V. C. 37), s. 2 (2) 440

Grant, construction of—Minerals, whether pass by grant—Adverse possession of minerals, what constitutes—Leases of sub-soil rights, grant of, effect of—Constructive possession—Possession of part, whether possession of whole—Trespasser, position of—Surface working, whether gives title to sub-soil rights—Estate, separate, what constitutes—Cess, direct payment of, effect of.

Where a zemindar grants a tenure in lands within his zemindari and it does not clearly appear by the terms of the grant that a right to the minerals is included, the minerals do not pass to the grantee.

The mere grant of leases by the tenure-holder which purport to grant sub-soil rights will not in itself give to the tenure-holder a title to the sub-soil rights by adverse possession. What must be considered, in order to decide the question of adverse possession, is the evidence of actual working.

Grant—concld.

Although possession of a part is constructive possession of the whole if the whole is otherwise vacant, this constructive possession is an incident of ownership and results from title. The doctrine of constructive possession is not applicable to a case where the o cupant defends himself on the ground of his possession only without proving any title.

A wrong doer's rights by adverse possession must be confined to the land of which he is in actual possession.

Where an owner of land sells it reserving to himself the minerals, he retains possession of the minerals in the same way as if he had not sold the surface. Non-user is not an abandonment of possession. Consequently, no matter how long mines remain unworked by the owner, his right is not barred so long as they are not worked by some one else.

There may be cases in which a title by adverse possession can be made out in respect to minerals, but it does not follow that by working a part of the minerals or opening up particular quarries possession over a continuous field of minerals or of quarries of which the portion worked forms part can be obtained.

A mere surface working cannot give any claim by adverse possession to the whole of the coal seam or to any portion of it beyond that which is actually extracted

Direct payment of cess in respect of rent free lands is by no means conclusive that the lands constitute a separate estate. Pat KUMAR METHA PREMTHA MALIA v MEIK, (1920) Pat. 146; 5 P. L. J. 273; 1 P. L. T. 360 184

——— – Sanad—Proprietary interest—Grantee, dispossession of—Suit for re-possession, maintainability of.

A person holding a full proprietary interest under a grant of a sanad from the Government who is dispossessed of that property is entitled to maintain a suit for re-possession into that property. P C GANPAT v. LALAMIYA, 16 N. L. R. 59; 1 L. W 574 242

Guardian ad litem, appointment of, provisions as to, object of Court, duty of—Notices to minor and his guardian, whether necessary preliminaries to appointment of guardian ad litem Failure to issue required notices, effect of Guardian ad litem, appointment of, effect of - Irregularity or defect in procedure—Minor, whether bound by decree passed in suit - Decree, when can be avoided by minor—Guardian ad litem, powers of, extent of. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XXXII, r. 3 313

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 7, 47 (a) –Order appointing guardian subject to furnishing security - Nature of order—Final order—Appeal, maintainablility of.

An order appointing a guardian for a minor subject to the person appointed furnishing security is a preliminary and conditional order, and is no bar to ar appeal against the final order made under section 7 of the Guardians and Wards Act after the security is furnished. M SANGAYYA TEVAN v. PETHAMMAL, 11 L W. 377 513

Guardians and Wards Act—concld.

——— ss. 27, 31 (2)—Admission by guardian of time-barred debt, whether act of prudence—Order sanctioning transfer by guardian, contents of—Necessity for and advantage of transfer not recited in order, effect of.

The provisions of section 31 (2) of the Guardians and Wards Act are mandatory and not merely directory, and an order made by a District Judge granting sanction to the guardian to transfer his ward's property, which fails to recite the necessity for or the advantage of the transfer, is not a legal order which can be pleaded as sufficient sanction for the transfer by the guardian.

It is not an act of ordinary prudence on the part of a guardian, within the meaning of section 27 of the Guardians and Wards Act, to admit that his ward is liable for a debt which cannot be legally recovered owing to the lapse of time. O BANKE LAL v. SWAMI DAYAL, 7 O. L. J. 207; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 62; 23 O. C. 72 328

——— ss. 47, 48—Order refusing to remove guardian—Appeal, whether lies.

An order refusing to remove a guardian is final and is not open to appeal under sections 47 and 48 of the Guardians and Wards Act. A MUHAMMAD ANWAR ALI KHAN v. DARA SHAH KHAN, 18 A. L. J. 624; 2 U P. L. R. (A) 217; 42 A. 514 208

Guardianship—Mother—Natural right of mother to have custody of her child, whether can be given up for good by agreement—Child made over by mother to another to be brought up as the latter's own—Mother, whether precluded from claiming it back—Circumstances depriving mother of her natural right—Expectations or associations.

A mother cannot be deprived of her natural right of absolute control over her own child by any agreement. Therefore, the mere fact that the child was made over by its mother to another to be brought up by the latter as her own, or even a definite agreement never to claim it back, would not preclude her from having the custody of her own child. But there may be circumstances in a particular case which would render it undesirable in the interests of the infant that the mother should resume her rights over it when she has once made over the child to another, and associations or expectations have been created on the part of the infant When there are no such associations or expectations which it would be undesirable in the interests of the infant to disturb or disappoint, the Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants would not deprive the mother of her natural right of guardianship over her child. C PETERSON v. SHAVE, 24 C. W. N. 711 673

Guilty, plea of—Written statement by accused, value and effect of—Procedure

Where a Court of revision holds the conviction of an accused person to be bad on the ground that a plea of guilty should not have been recorded, it should order a retrial of the accused C EMPEROR v. AKUB ALI, 31 C. L. J. 122; 21 CR. L. J. 517 851

Highway—Dedication to the public—Intention to dedicate—Permissive use by tenants or their visitors, effect of—Dedication to a section of the public, whether sufficient—Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), ss. 3, 171—Public street, what is.

In cases where the existence of a public highway is in issue, it is of crucial importance to distinguish between the grant to the public as such of a right of way and the permission which naturally flows from the use of the ground as a passage for visitors to or traders with the tenants whose shops abut upon it.

A public right of way can be acquired by user of, or by dedication to, the public in general. But in order to constitute a valid dedication to the public of a highway by the owner of the soil there must be an intention to dedicate—there must be an animus dedicandi, of which the user by the public is evidence, and no more, and a single act of interruption by the owner is of much more weight, upon a question of intention, than many acts of enjoyment. The onus of establishing such an intention lies heavily upon the person asserting the dedication.

A person in dedicating land to public use may place such limits as he wishes upon the dedication. There may be a dedication to the public for a limited purpose as for instance an access to a particular building, or a footway, horse-way or drift-way, but there can be no such thing in law as a public right of way constituted by dedication to only a section of the public.

A plot of ground left open in a market owned by a citizen, and by its nature accessory to shop property and let by him as such to his shop tenants, and neither drained, lighted, nor cleaned by a Municipality would not form a public street, and if the Municipality enters upon it and builds a road across it in spite of the objection of the owner and without taking any steps under the Statute to acquire it, such action amounts to a trespass and the ground still remains the private property of the owner. P C MUHAMMAD RUSTAM ALI KHAN v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF KARNAL CITY, 1 P. W. R 1920; 13 P. L R. 1920; 38 M. L. 455; 1 L. 117; 11 L. W. 579; 18 A. L. J. 466; 22 Bom. L. R. 563; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 87; 28 M. L. T. 1 1

Hindu Joint family, holding let to member of—Ejectment—Holding let to other members of family—Tenancy, whether continuous. See AGRA TENANCY ACT (II OF 1901), s. 4 764

Hindu Law—Adoption—Factum valet, doctrine of, applicability of.

The doctrine of factum valet in Hindu Law only applies to adoptions where matters which do not affect the essence of the adoption have been disregarded. It cannot be applied to validate the adoption of an orphan. N SONIBAI v. DHANRAJ 620

——— Jains—Adoption of married man, validity of—Religious ceremony, whether necessary—Giving and taking, whether essential.

Among Jains a married man can lawfully be adopted, adoption amongst Jains being a purely secular matter.

No religious ceremonies are essential to the validity of an adoption among Jains, inasmuch as they do not believe in the Hindu doctrine of the spiritual efficacy of sons. But the secular ceremony of giving and taking cannot] be dispensed with. N JAMUNABAI v. JUHARMAL 81

Hindu Law—concld.

——— Adoption—Jains—Possession of child, delivery of, when complete—Grown up man, delivery of, mode of—Jain widow, adoption by—Consent of husband, whether necessary.

In matters of adoption the Jains are governed by Hindu Law to the extent that giving and taking are sufficient to constitute a valid adoption.

In the case of Jains all that is necessary under the law to effect an adoption is that the possession of the child to be given in adoption must be made over to the adoptive parent.

In the case of a grown up man who is adopted, his being placed near his adoptive parent would be sufficient in point of law to constitute a valid delivery of possession. The ceremony of actually placing him in the lap of his adoptive parent is not essential.

The permission of the husband is not necessary in the case of a Jain widow adopting a son. N JIWRAJ v SHEOKUWARBAI 65

——— ——— Sister's son's son, adoption of, validity of—Adopted son, whether can succeed to occupancy rights.

Although the adoption of a sister's son's son may amount to a breach of caste custom, it nevertheless, is not illegal or void.

An adopted son can succeed to an occupancy right, and is not liable to ejectment as a non-occupancy tenant U P B R SHEOPUJAN RAI v MANOG GIR, 2 U. P L R. (B R.) 12 652

——— Alienation by co-parcener in undivided family, validity of.

An alienation by a co-parcener in an undivided Hindu family in the Central Provinces is valid to the extent of the alienor's own interest in the property. N KISANLAL v. NATHU, 16 N. L. R. 131 44

——— Daybhaga—Person interested, right of, to oppose application by stranger for Probate. See WILL 122

——— Debt incurred by father on suretyship—Son, liability of.

A Hindu son or grandson governed by the Mitakshara Law is liable for the debt of his father or grandfather due on account of a contract of suretyship for the payment of money and which comes within the meaning of vyavarika, which has been translated as lawful, useful or customary, unless the transaction is either illegal or immoral. Pat BALKRISHNA SAHAI v. SHAM SUNDAR SAHAY 962

——— Female, grant in favour of—Presumption—Absolute estate, grant of—Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 82, applicability of.

Where a grant is made by a person governed by the Hindu Law in favour of a female, there is no necessary presumption that an absolute estate is intended to be granted, and section 82 of the Succession Act has no application to such a case. O CHAURAS KUNWAR v. JAGANNATH SINGH, 7 O L J. 1[illegible]; 2 U. P. L. R. J. C.) 89 287

——— Parbhus in Central Provinces, law applicable to—Daughters, estate taken by

The Parbhus of the Central Provinces, who originally immigrated from the Bombay Presidency, are governed by the Bombay School of Hindu Law—contd.

Hindu Law as now known and judicially ascertained, and not by that law as it existed at the date of their immigration.

In those parts of the Bombay Presidency where the Mayukha Law is paramount authority, as well as in those parts governed by the Mitakshara Law, daughters succeed to an absolute estate. N MADHORAO v. KESHEORAO 175

——— Property given to two widows for maintenance —Tenancy-in-common—Property acquired under grant from Government, whether self-acquired.

Where property is given to two widows for their maintenance, they enjoy it as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants.

Property acquired under a grant from Government is self-acquired, unless it is merely restoration of a confiscated grant intended for the benefit of the family. Pat SASIBALA DASI v CHANDRA MOHAN DUTTA 937

——— Separation, proof of. See HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY 306

——— Yajman vriti, nature of—Co-owner of vriti performing ceremonies and appropriating fees—Trespass—Damages, suit for, by other co-owners, whether maintainable—Priest, whether can be dismissed by yajman.

A yajman vriti is a religious office to which fees are attached.

Where one co-owner of a vriti performs the religious ceremonies of a yajman and appropriates the fees, the otheir co-owners of the vriti can sue him to recover their share of the fees.

Where the act of the co-owner performing the ceremonies amounts to an ouster of the other co-owners, the latter can sue the former for damages as a tortfeasor.

A yajman has no right to dismiss a priest except for serious misconduct or upon the latter being outcasted.

The law allows a co-owner to sue another co-owner for trespass, if the latter has ousted him and such ouster covers an act inconsistent with the enjoyment of the property by both. S MANGHIRMAL v. JETHANAND. 13 S. L. R. 56 683 ——— Gift—Agrahar gift, nature of—Condition restricting residence, whether enforceable—Public policy.

A religious gift (agrahar) to a Brahmin for his maintenance is a private and an absolute gift according to law, and is entirely distinguishable from a religious endowment in favour of a deity of a public character, and where such a gift imposes a condition restricting the residence of the donee, and there is no rule of Hindu Law necessitating the enforcement of such condition, the condition is opposed to public policy and has no legal effect B RUKMINIBAI KRISHNARAO v. LAXMIBAI NARAYAN, 22 Bom. L. R. 254; 44 B 304 361

——— Inheritance—Illegitimate daughter, right of, to inherit, her mother's property—Hindu female entitled to maintenance—Possession—Mutation—No indication that possession is in lieu of maintenance—Adverse possession—Daughter, right of, to inherit

According to Hindu Law an illegitimate daughter, even among twice born classes, inherits the property of her mother in preference to trespassers.

Where a share in the property of a Hindu was held by his mistress, and mutation was effected in her favour some 40 years ago, and although she was entilted to maintenance, there was nothing to show that her possession was in lieu of maintenance, it was held that she had acquired title by adverse possession and that upon her death her share devolved on her daughter. N KASTURI v LOTE MAJOR 952

——— Inheritance—Mental effection, whether disqualification.

According to Hindu Law mental affection, to disqualify a person from inheriting, must be of such a nature that a man is thereby debarred or incapable of performing the funeral rites and offering the proper funeral oblations. C PADMABATI DASSI v. BONOMALI SEAL, 24 C. W. N. 378 566

——— Joint family—Alienation—Necessity, proof of—Enquiry by alienee—Presumption.

If an alienee from the father of a joint Hindu family makes enquiries as to the necessities of the loan and if he satisfies himself that the necessities represented exist, he is sufficiently protected.

If the necessity for the loan cannot be established by direct evidence, it may be assumed if it can be shown that reasonable care was taken to ascertain that such circumstances existed and that the transferee acted in good faith O JAI NARAIN v BAJRANG BAHADUR SINGH, 7 O L J. 330; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 115 826

——— ——— Ancestral property, nature of—Property inherited from collaterals, whether ancestral—Alienation—Father, power of, to alienate family property—Antecedent debt, meaning of.

Under the Hindu Law property acquired by inheritance from a collateral relation is not ancestral property.

Joint family property may be sold or charged by the father in order to discharge an antecedent debt, that is to say, a debt incurred not only prior to the date of the sale or charge but incurred wholly apart from the ownership of the joint estate or the security afforded or supposed to be afforded by it Where joint family property is thus sold or mortgaged, no question arises as to whether the antecedent debt was incurred for legal necessity or for other purposes binding upon the sons or as to whether the transaction entered into by the father is enforceable against the sons during his lifetime. O PUDAI RAM v BAIJNATH LAL, 7 O. L. J. 273; 23 O. C. 264 745 ——— ——— Business carried on by co-parcener, whether family business—Presumption—Minor, liability of—Burden of proof—Ancestral trade —Manager, acts of, whether binding on minor—Minor, when can be partner—Evidence—Account books, witholding of—Presumption.

There is no presumption that a Hindu family has any joint property or that a business carried on by a co-parcener is a family business

If a plaintiff seeks to impose upon a minor in a joint family any liability as a member of a family partnership, it is for him to show how the minor's liability arises.

A minor member of a joint family upon whom an ancestral trade has descended is bound by all acts of the manager, or the adult members acting as managers, which are necessarily incidental to and flowing out of the carrying on of that trade. But where a business is not ancestral, a minor member is not necessarily interested in a business carried on by the major members of the joint family to which he belongs.

A minor member of a joint family cannot become a partner in an ancestral business unless on attaining full age he takes active steps to be recognised as such.

A minor member of a joint family firm can only be liable to the extent of the assets of the business i e., the property which has been used by the family for the purpose or which has been acquired therefrom. N PADAMRAJ v GOPIKISAN 129

——— Joint family—Execution of decree—Sale of share of co-parcener in joint Hindu family—Purchaser, position of—Suit for partition and allotment of share, maintainability of. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1882, s. 244 254

——— ——— —Manager, power of, to alienate family property, extent of—Test to be applied.

In order to determine whether a mortgage by the manager of a joint family is binding on the family, the real test is the benefit to the family and not a justifying legal necessity for the transaction. The manager of a joint family has implied authority to do whatever is best for all concerned and the test in each case is, was it a transaction into which a prudent owner would enter in order to benefit the estate. Pat SHEOTAHAL SINGH v. ARJUN DASS, 1 P. L. T 136; (1920) Pat 155 879

——— ——— —Member joining firm—Presumption—Burden of proof,

There is no presumption that a business carried on by a member of a joint Hindu family is a joint family business.

The burden of proving that a certain member of a joint Hindu family joined a firm not in his individual capacity, but as a representative of the whole family, is on the party who alleges it. L SANT RAM v. KIDAR NATH 469

——— ——— —Mortgage by father—Decree against father—Sale of mortgaged property—Redemption, suit for, by sons, maintainability of.

A Hindu father executed a mortgage which was binding on his sons. The mortgagees obtained a decree on the basis of that mortgage against the father alone, without making the sons parties to the suit, and themselves purchased the mortgaged property in execution of their decree. Subsequently the sons sued the mortgagees-purchasers, seeking inter alia redemption of the property:

Held, that the suit was maintainable for redemption of the mortgaged property.

Hard cases must not be allowed to make bad law. O DRIGPAL SINGH v. SUKHNANDAN LAL, 7 O. L. J. 164; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 96 299

——— —Mortgage by father—Necessity—Immorality—Burden of proof.

Where in a suit to enforce a mortgage, by the father of a Hindu joint family, the sons advance the defence that the father was of immoral life and there was no necessity for the loan, the burden of proving not only that there was necessity to borrow but that it was not unreasonable to borrow at the rate of interest stipulated lies upon the plaintiff, while it is for the defendants to prove that the money was borrowed for expenses incident to an immoral life. P C MANNA SINGH v. KARU SINGH, 1 P. L. T. 6 766

——— Joint family—Presumption of jointness—Separation, proof of—Settlement records, value of, as evidence of title or possession - Settlement of Oudh after Mutiny, entries in, whether recognised existing rights or constituted a fresh root of title.

Given a joint Hindu family, the presumption is, until the contrary is proved, that the family continues joint. That presumption is peculiarly strong in the case of the sons of one father.

It is not any part of the law of India that settlement records are by themselves conclusive evidence of the facts which they purport to record. They have merely to be considered with other evidence. The broad question of partition of rights or separation of interests is not dealt with in such records, and the inference of such a transaction from entries therein may be weak or strong according to circumstances. A definition of shares in revenue and village papers is by itself very slight evidence of an actual separation in a Hindu family and generally quite insufficient to overcome the presumption against partition.

Lord Canning's Proclamation after the Mutiny swept away all prior titles in Oudh. But the Government officers conducting the settlements did not proceed upon the notion that prior rights were to go for nothing, and in most cases their proceedings were rather a recognition of those rights than a fresh root of title. P C NAGESHAR BAKHSH SINGH v. GANESHA, 7 O. L. J. 49; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 37; 34 M. L J. 521; 23 O C 1; 18 A. L. J. 532; 22 Bom. L. R. 596, 28 M. L. T. 5; 42 A 368 306 ——— ——— —Purchase in name of one member—Benami transaction—Real owner, whether bound by result of litigation to which benamidar is party—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s 22—Party already represented, joinder of, after expiry of limitation, effect of—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 82—Resulting trust—Purchase in name of one person with money supplied by several, effect of—Person interested in litigation but not party to suit, whether bound by result.

A purchase in the name of one member of a joint Hindu family is a benami transaction, especially when that member is not the managing member or a representative of the family.

A benamidar is allowed to represent the real owner in suits both as plaintiff as well as defendant, and a decree obtained by a benamidar or against a benamidar is binding upon the real owner.

If a person is already represented in a suit by a party to the suit, his joinder is not the joinder of a new plaintiff or a new defendant, within the meaning of section 22 of the Limitation Act

A resulting trust takes place where several persons jointly furnish the purchase-money and the purchase is made in the name of one of them

A person interested in a litigation is not bound to apply to have himself made a party and in default to be bound by the result of that litigation. N NARHAR v. NARAIN 386

Hindu Law—contd.

——— Joint family—Sister, unmarried—Residence, right of—Family dwelling house, sale of—Purchaser, position of.

Under the Hindu Law the right of an unmarried sister to reside in the family dwelling house till her marriage is unaffected by the sale of the house in execution of a decree against the last male owner for a debt contracted without family necessity, and she is entitled to resist delivery to the auction-purchaser till suitable arrangements are made for her accommodation. M SURYANARAYANA RAO NAIDU v. BALASUBRAMANIA MUDALI, 11 L. W. 409; 38 M. L. J. 433; (1920) M. W N 267; 43 M. 635 524

——— Mitakshara—Dravada School—Adoption by widow—Consent of nearest sapindas, whether necessary—Consent of more distant relatives, whether sufficient.

Under the Mitakshara Law as administered in the Dravada country, a Hindu widow, although not authorised by her husband to adopt a son to him, may nevertheless make such an adoption with the consent of his nearest sapindas

The consent required is that of a substantial majority of those agnates nearest in relationship who are capable of forming an intelligent and honest judgment on the matter.

Save in exceptional cases, e. g, minority, lunacy or absence in a distant country, the consent of the nearest sapindas must be asked and if it is not asked, it is no excuse to say that they would certainly have refused; but where a sapinda is clearly proved to have withheld his consent from corrupt or malicious motives, his dissent may be disregarded.

The absence of consent on the part of the nearest sapindas cannot be made good by the authorisation of more distant relatives. P C ADUSUMILLI KRISTNAYYA v. ADUSUMILLI LAKSHMIPATHI, 18 A. L J. 601; (1920) M. W N. 385 24 C. W. N. 905; 39 M. L. J 70; 28 M. L. T. 70; 43 M. 650; 12 L. W. 625 39

——— —Father's sister's sons, whether heirs—Presumption of continuance of life—Burden of proving death—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 108

In places where the Mitakshara system of Hindu Law prevails, the father's sister's sons of the last male owner are heirs.

The presumption is in favour of the continuance of life and the onus of proving the death of a person lies on the party who asserts it.

Plaintiffs sued for possession of certain land of which their maternal uncle's son S. was the last male owner. Upon the death of S. the land was held by his mother A, on whose death the village proprietors took possession. A. was said to have died in May 1902 and the present suit was instituted on the 5th May 914:

Held, (1) that according to Hindu Law the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed to their maternal uncle's son as bandhus;

(2) that there was no presumption that A died before the 5th May 1902;

(3) that the onus of proving that A died before the 5th May 1902 lay upon the defendants

(4) that in the absence of any proof of the exact date of death the suit was within time. L TANI v. BIKHI RAM, 114 P. L. R. 1920 742

Hindu Law—contd.

——— Mitakshara—Partition, requisites of—Division of interest—Intention to separate, whether sufficient—Burden of proof.

In a Hindu joint family a disruption of the status of jointness may take place by agreement, without division of the estate by metes and bounds. Even an unambiguous expression of an intention by one member of the joint family to separate and hold his share separately will suffice. But the question is one of fact, and the onus is on the party alleging separation of interest or the intention to separate to affirmatively establish it. P C GIRDHAR DAS v SRI KRISHNA DATT, 18 A L J. 545; 39 M. L. J. 18; 22 BOM. L. R. 1348 233 ——— Succession—Munditchela, right of, to succeed—Adoption—Mundit chela, whether adopted son—Joint family Father or manager, power of, to make Will—Son, birth of, effect of—Girhast Bairagis—Son, position of.

There is no custom which authorises the succession of a mundit chela to the estate of the person making him a chela.

The fact that a person is made a mundit chela does not constitute that person an adopted son, and the mere fact that his father was present at the ceremony of his initiation as a chela does not convert the ceremony into one of adoption

Where the head of a Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara Law makes a Will, the subsequent birth of a son, who thereupon becomes a co-parcener in the family estate, has the effect of rendering the Will inoperative and absolutely void and not merely voidable.

Among Girhast Bairagis a son acquires an interest by birth in the ancestral property of the father. N GULABDAS v DHARMIN BAI 996

——— Temple—Manager, whether entitled to remove image to new temple—Ruinous condition of temple, effect of.

The fact that a public temple is in a ruinous condition would not entitle the manager of the temple to remove the image from the temple and instal it permanently in a new building, especially where the removal is objected to by a majority of the worshippers. B HARI RAGHUNATH v. ANTAJI BHIKAJI, 22 Bom. L. R. 334: 44 B 466 459

——— ——— Pala or turn of worship, transfer of, validity of—Custom, requisites of—Right of management and right of service in connection with temples, distinction between—Compulsory and private alienation—Private alienation, when permissible—Shebait, duties and power of—Sale of priestly office for benefit of shebait, legality of—Pala, sub-division of, legality of—Question of law—Appeal, second—Separation of pala from immoveable property of endowment, whether permissible.

Custom, if established, may render private alienation of a pala valid, but in determining the question, the benefit to the idol must be taken into consideration as a matter of primary importance. Property dedicated to a deity is extra commercium, and is entitled to special protection of the sovereign whose duty it is to intervene to prevent fraud and waste. Persons having the management and possession of the property of an idol must of necessity be empowered to do whatever may be required for the service of the idol and for the benefit and preservation of its property. The manager of the endowment is by virtue of his office the administrator of the property attached to it. As regards the property he is in the position of a trustee. Sale of the trusteeship for pecuniary gain is not permissible. The sale of a priestly office for the benefit of the shebait is illegal. Right of worship is property, but has not all the incidents of property. A distinction has been made between transfers inter vivos and transfers by Will. The shebait is manager or quas trustee for the benefit of the idol and as the office endures only for his life, he has no right of devise by Will, as his Will only comes into operation on his death when there is nothing for him to alienate.

The requisites of custom are that it should be ancient, and invariable, uniform, reasonable, not immoral, certain and consistent. About its being ancient it must have existed "so long as the memory of man runneth not to the contrary."

There is a distinction between the right of management and the right of service in connection with temples, private and public, and between compulsory and private alienations. Private alienations are not absolutely prohibited but alienations to strangers are not favoured. In the case of private alienations the prohibition is not of general application and custom and usage govern and prevail over the text law which prohibits both partition and alienation.

The question as to whether a pala is divisible or not is a point of law and can be raised for the first time in second appeal.

Division of a pala by inheritance is on a different basis from division by transactions inter vivos or by devise.

Separation of a pala from the immoveable property of an endowment is not a reasonable method of management of the property or of conducting the sheba. Where there is no custom of separation of the pala and the endowed property, sub-division inter vivos of the pala alone should not be allowed, as it cannot be for the benefit of the deity. C NITYA GOPAL v PROVAS CHANDRA, 31 C. L. J. 37; 24 C. W. N. 309 19

——— Widow—After-born son, whether divests his mother's estate from date of birth or from date of father's death—Alienation by enceinte widow, legality of.

The rights of a son under Hindu Law in the estate left by his father commence at birth and not before. Therefore, an after-born son divests his mother's estate as a widow from the moment of his birth and not from the moment of his father's death. Between the date of the death of her husband and that of the birth of her son, the widow is competent to alienate her husband's property for necessity. L HIRA v. BUTA, 1 L 128; 49 P. W. R 1920; 133 P. L. R. 1920 256 ———, alienation by—Cesses, payment of, whether legal necessity—Interest, high rate of, necessity for, proof of—Burden of proof.

The reversionary heirs of a Hindu widow are not bound by a debt incurred by her for the payment of cesses.

Where a mortgagee from a Hindu widow sues to enforce his mortgage against the reversioners of the widow, and the principal is found to have been advanced for necessity, the question as to the necessity for the rate of interest does not arise and ought not to be gone into, unless the defendants by their written statement specifically raise that question. Pat JAG SAHU v RADHA KISHUN, 1 P. L T. 209; 5 P. L. J. 287; (1920) Pat. 211; 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 127 867

——— Widow, alienation by—Consent of reversioner, effect of—Necessity, proof of.

The consent of the immediate reversioner to an alienation made by a Hindu widow is presumptive proof of legal necessity and bars further enquiry into legal necessity. The consenting reversioner cannot subsequently say that there was no legal necessity Pat ADHIKARI KUER v. LOKENATH RAI, 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 93; 1 P. L. T 335 426 ———, alienation by—Necessity, proof of—Consideration, small portion of, not shown for necessity, effect of.

Where in the case of a sale effected by a Hindu widow, the entire consideration with the exception of a small portion is shown to have been taken for legal necessity, the vendee cannot be deprived of the benefit of his purchase.

In the case of a mortgage no such question arises, because it is open to the reversioners to sue for redemption on payment of the amount for which they may be held liable. O BHARATH SINGH v. MUNNU SINGH, 7 O L.J. 151; 2 U P. L. R. (J. C.) 93 291 ——— ——— —Maintenance—Right of residence —Widow, whether bound to liquidate husband's debts.

Ordinarily, a Hindu widow has a right of residence in the family house and she may not be ousted except to satisfy claims which are paramount to her right of residence, which is a part of her right to maintenance.

The widow of an undivided member of a Hindu family can set up her right of residence against a purchaser for value, unless the alienation was for a family purpose, but the widow of a divided member is bound to liquidate any debt which was binding on her husband unless it was incurred in fraud of her right.

Where, however, the husband loses the property in his lifetime, there is nothing to which his widow can succeed as his heir or from which she can derive maintenance. L ASA DEBI v. BASHI RAM, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 93 198 ———, right of, to share on partition—Widow in possession of family house—Declaratory suit, whether competent.

The rule of the Mitakshara Law is firmly established that a mother is entitled only to maintenance until partition and that she can never herself demand a partition. But if a partition takes place by the act of others, not being strangers, she will be entitled to receive a share, if the effect of that partition is to break up or diminish the estate out of which she would otherwise be maintained.

Where therefore, one of the co-sharers in a joint estate having applied for partition, the widow of the last male owner sued for a declaration of her title to a share in the estate:

Held (1) that she had a right to claim a share equal to that of the other co-sharers.

(2) that as the widow was residing in the family house, the declaratory suit was maintainable.

Hindu Law—concld.

GANESH DEVI v. DARSHAN SINGH, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 100 478

——— Will, construction of—Bequest to wife for life with remainder to sons—Accumulation, direction for, validity of.

A direction in the Will of a Hindu testator to accumulate the surplus income of devised property with a gift of the accumulations is not fundamentally bad: it only fails if it offends some independent rule of Hindu l aw.

A testator by his Will appointed his wife his executrix and trustee and "gave devised and bequeathed unto her the rest and residue" of his moveable and immoveable properties for her life and after her death to his five sons in equal shares, with directions to incur certain expenses and to accumulate the surplus income for the benefit of the sons:

Held, that the provision for accumulation of the surplus income was not bad. C RAM LAL SEN v. BIDHUMUKHI DASI, 47 C 76 373

Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Ordinance (II of 1915), ss. 2, 9—"Serving under war conditions," meaning of—Duty of Court in cases of doubt.

"Serving under war conditions" does not necessarily mean serving abroad.

When the Court is in doubt as to whether a party can be said to be serving under war conditions or not, it ought to refer the matter to the prescribed authority and act on the certificate given by such authority. L GURBACHAN SINGH v. RALLA RAM 947

Improvements by purchaser—Compensation, purchaser, whether entitled to.

Where a purchaser of immoveable property, under the honest belief that he is the absolute owner thereof, undertakes permanent improvements on the property, he is in equity entitled to compensation for the improvements made by him, on the sale being annulled on the ground that the vendor had only a limited interest in the property and could not convey an absolute title, but he is liable for mesne profits from the date his possession became wrongful, i. e., from the date of the death of the vendor S SHAHAB-UD-DIN v. VOHIDBUX, 14 S. L. R. 12 492

Interest by way of damages, award of.

In a proper case interest may be awarded by way of damages, even though it is not claimable under the Interest Act. Mere non-payment on the due date, however, is not sufficient to justify such an award. M SINGARAJU VENKATASUBRAMANIAM v. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI, 11 L. W. 523 552

Interlocutory order deciding preliminary issues—Revision, whether entertainable. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 115 248

Interpretation of Statutes—Legal term, meaning of.

In interpreting a Statute, the settled rule of construction is that where the Legislature uses a legal term which has a known significance, it must be assumed that the term has been used in that sense and in no other. Pat JHARI SINGHA v. EMPEROR, 21 Cr. L. J 443 235

Jagirdar, agreement by, with zemindars for commutation of customary dues—Agreement, whether can be avoided—Jagirs in Sind—Grant, nature of.

A jagirdar entered into an agreement with certain zemindars holding permanent rights in the jagir land, whereby he bound himself to accept certain rates in cash and kind in consideration of the customary dues he was entitled as jagirdar to receive. On the death of the jagirdar his son brought the present suit to avoid this agreement on the grounds that by the terms of the grant conferring the jagir a limited estate only was conveyed, the grantee's rights to alienate being restricted, that the agreement did not create permanent rights, and that he was not bound thereby:

Held, upon a consideration of the history of alienations in Sind and the terms of the sanad conferring the jagir, that the intention of the grantors was to confer a hereditary estate in perpetuity without imposing any condition restricting alienation; that upon a proper construction of the agreement the intention was to make a permanent settlement, and that the plaintiff was bound thereby. S MIR SHER MAHOMED v. ETHOMAL, 14 S. L. R. 1 484

Jail identification—Magistrate superintending, evidence of, whether necessary—Court, duty of.

Where a jail identification is held in the presence of a Magistrate, the Magistrate should be produced at the trial as a witness, and it is the duty of the Court to call him before the conclusion of the trial. A EMPEROR v. SUNDAR, 2 U. P. L. R (A) 116; 21 Cr. L. J. 515 771

Jurisdiction—Connected suits—Appeal in one—Appellate Court, whether can arrive at conflicting findings.

Where in a case the plaintiff instituted a suit for rent as also atitle suit, but an appeal was preferred against the decision in the rent suit only and the Judge came to certain findings different from those arrived at by the Munsif in the title suit:

Held, (1) that the fact that no appeal was preferred from the decision in the title suit did not preclude the Judge from dealing with the appeal before him and going into such matters as were necessary for the decision of the appeal;

(2) that in doing so the Judge had not decided anything that was outside the scope of the suit or appeal. C NALINAKSHYA DUTTA v. DHUN KRISHNA MONDAL 282

Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Pleadings—Suit by owner for declaration of rightful possession, whether cognizable by Civil Court—Defendant obtaining possession pending suit—Amendment of plaint, whether should be allowed.

The question of jurisdiction has to be decided entirely on the allegations in the plaint Plaintiffs sued for a declaration that they were in rightful possession of the land in suit, alleging that the land belonged to them and that the defendant had made a claim on the ground that he was the heir of a deceased occupancy tenant, while as a matter of fact he had no title to the land. The first Court decreed their claim, holding that the occupancy rights were extinct and that the defendant had no rights therein On appeal the District Judge, finding that the defendant had since obtained a decree from a Revenue Court restoring him to possession as an occupancy tenant, held that the defendant was in legal possession and that the declaratory suit could not proceed Plaintiffs filed a second appeal to the High Court:

Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—concld.

Held, (1) that on the allegations in the plaint the suit was cognizable by a Civil Court;

(2) that the locus standi of the plaintiff to ask for relief from a Civil Court had in no way been affected by the subsequent decree obtained by the defendant in a Revenue Court;

(3) that as the plaintiffs had lost possession during the pendency of the suit, they ought to have been allowed to amend their plaint and ask for possession. L KARAM DAD v HUSSAIN BAKHSH 458

Kotwar—Village service tenant—Kotwar losing office, but continuing in possession of portion of village service holding—Settlement, new, effect of, on arrangement—C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1893), s. 56 (2), applicability of.

J. and N. were Kotwars in a village and each held one of two fields which constituted the village service holding It was subsequently decided that one Kotwar would suffice, and the question was which of the two should be dismissed; this was decided by the parties drawing lots, it being understood that the loser would continue for his lifetime in possession of the field he was cultivating J lost and was thus deprived of the office of Kotwar, but he continued in possession of the field he was cultivating, and the wajib-ul-arz was corrected accordingly. In the new settlement some years later the village service holding was recorded in the sole name of N's son D., who consequently ejected J J. brought the present suit for re-instatement in possession and correction of the wajib-ul-arz. The suit was resisted on the ground that the arrangement by which J. was displaced as Kotwar but was allowed to continue in possession did not bind the successors-in-office of N and that under section 56 (2) of the C. P. Tenancy Act, J.'s sub-lease exceeding one year at a time was void:

Held, that section 56 (2) of the C. P. Tenancy Act did not apply that as the sub-tenancy created in favour of J was part of the arrangement whereby N. became the village service tenant, it would be inequitable to permit the ejectment of J merely because a new settlement had been made or because N. had ceased to be Kotwar N CHIBLIA v. DAWLATYA 749

Kudima and adima tenures—Denial to render service—Resumption, liability to. See MALABAR LAW 13

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), s. 13—Reference by Collector after money awarded withdrawn, legality of.

The fact that the compensation awarded under the Land Acquisition Act is withdrawn by the party to whom it was awarded does not affect the right of the party who is entitled to receive it to have a reference made to the Court under section 8 of the Act. Pat RAHIT SAHU v. MAHADEO CHAUDHURI, 1 P. L. T. 44; 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 43; (1920) PAT 129 126

——— s. 23—Land acquisition—Vacant land—Assessment, method of.

In a land acquisition case the amount of compensation cannot be enhanced upon the basis of conveyances of lands which have no similarity] to the lands acquired.

Land Acquisition Act—concld.

In awarding compensation for land acquired under the Land Acquisition Act it is unsound to assert that the value of a raiyat's interest is so much without specification of the conditions of the tenancy. How much is recoverable by a landlord from a hypothetical tenant may be determined with some approach to accuracy from the rent receivable by him But the exact value of the raiyat's interest is dependent on a number of unknown factors.

In awarding compensation for a vacant piece of land the existence of a hypothetical tenant on each plot was assumed and calculation was made of the respective values of what was designated as landlord's interest and raiyat's interest. The total of the sums which represented the values of these interests was taken as the value of the land:

Held, that the award was based on unsound principles. C HEM CHANDRA v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, 31 C. L. J. 214 758

Landlord and tenant—Additional rent for additional area, suit for—Standard of measurement—Presumption.

Where in a suit for additional rent for additional area the standard of measurement set up on behalf of the plaintiff is inconsistent with the kabuliyat upon which the suit is based, it cannot be presumed that the present standard of measurement was the standard in use at the time when the lands comprised within the tenancy were originally measured C MADHABI SUNDARI DASYA v. SYAMA CHARAN BISWAS, 31 C. L. J. 202 748

——— Agraharamdars, liability of, to pay jodi to zemindar—Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), ss. 3 (11), 61—Jodi, whether rent—Interest by way of damages, award of—Pleadings—Defence setting up new case, whether can be advanced in appeal.

Where a village is held by agraharamdars, they are jointly and severally liable to the zemindar for the whole of the jodi due on the entire village; the fact that they have split up the village into separate holdings will not relieve them of this liability, because any arrangement among themselves to enjoy the land in shares and pay the jodi proportionately is not binding on the landlord, unless he consents to it.

A defence not raised in the lower Court and which sets up a new case, cannot be advanced in a Court of Appeal

Jodi is not rent as defined in section 3 (11) of the Madras Estates Land and interest thereon cannot be claimed under section 61 of the Act.

In a proper case interest may be awarded by way of damages, even though it is not claimable under the Interest Act Mere non-payment on the due date, however, is not sufficient to justify such an award M SINGARAJU VENKATASUBBARAMANIAM v. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI, I. L. R. 3 [illegible] 552

——— Denial of title—Forfeiture—Denial, what amounts to. See MALABAR LAW 13

——— Easement—Tenant, whether can obtain prescriptive right against landlord—Easement, extinguishment of, by natural forces—Suit to enforce easement, maintainability of.

A tenant cannot, by mere enjoyment, obtain a prescriptive easement against his landlord, but there is nothing to prevent his having a customary right, or a right by implied contract with his landlord.

Landlord and tenant—contd.

A servient owner cannot by his own wrongful act destroy the utility of the servient tenement actively and thus claim to have put an end to the easement. But if by the forces of nature the easement or right ceases to exist, an action for relief based on the easement is not maintainable. M BAYYA SAHU v. KRISHNACHANDRA GAJAPATHY, 11 L. W. 600 598

——— Enhancement of rent, effect of—Agreement to vacate within one month of receipt of notice—Notice to quit not expiring with end of month, validity of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 106.

Mere enhancement of rent does not put an end to an existing tenancy.

Defendant executed a lease in plaintiffs' favour on the 30th August 1916, under which rent was fixed at Rs. 16 per mensem payable on the 2nd day of each Hindi month. The lease also contained an agreement to the effect that the defendant would within one month of receipt of notice pay the rent and vacate without objection. On the 27th May 1917 the parties agreed to raise the rent to Rs. 40 per mensem, but there was no other change in the terms of the tenancy. On the expiry of the lease on the 30th August 1917 no new lease was executed. On the 8th August 1918 plaintiffs sent defendant a notice to vacate within one month from receipt of notice This notice was received by the defendant on the 10th August, which was the 3rd day of a Hindi month. The defendant having failed to vacate, the plaintiffs sued for ejectment and for recovery of rent:

Held, (1) that the raising of the rent to Rs. 40 per mensem did not create any fresh tenancy and after the expiry of the lease the old terms still continued to apply as no fresh ones were agreed upon;

(2) that as there was a clear contract in the lease to vacate at one month's notice, section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act did not apply and the notice was perfectly valid, even though it was not received on the 2nd day of the Hindi month. L RADHA KISHEN v. RATAN LAL 7

——— Merger, doctrine of, applicability of—Rent, right to recover.

The doctrine of merger can only be applied when the interest in the superior right definitely covers the subordinate right

Where the plaintiff has the right to collect the entire rent of a fixed-rate holding while the defendant has only a mortgagee interest in the holding and an entirely separate interest in the proprietary right the doctrine of merger does not apply and the plaintiff is entitled to collect the entire rent. U P B R MAHABIR PRASAD SINGH v. MANKI, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 14 677

——— Occupancy holding—Joint tenants—Surrender by one tenant of his share, validity of.

A surrender by one of several joint tenants of an occupancy holding of his share in the holding is valid. Pat RAGHUNATH CHATTERJEE v. JUTHU CHATTAR, 2 U P. L. R. (PAT.) 97 466

——— Occupancy holding, non-transferable, transfer of—Khas possession, suit for, by landlord—Limitation, commencement of—Adverse possession of transferee, requisites of—Abandonment—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 87—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 18.

Where there is a transfer of a non-transferable occupancy holding, it is only on the theory of abandonment within the meaning of section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act that the landlord can re-enter and where such abandonment took place 12 years before the landlord's suit to recover khas possession, the only way of overcoming the bar of limitation to the suit would be by establishing a case within section 18 of the Limitation Act

To establish a case of adverse possession against the landlord by the transferee of a non-transferable occupancy holding it must be shown that the possession was adequate in continuity, publicity and extent The element of publicity would be wanting if the landlord was not aware of the transfer, and where the element of publicity is wanting the element of extent would also be wanting C MANULLA KOLU v. PRASANNA KUMAR SARKAR 811

——— Occupancy tenant, whether entitled to cut and appropriate trees—Custom—Burden of proof—Record of Rights, entry in—Presumption of correctness—Evidence before Court—Duty of Court.

The general rule is that an occupancy tenant has the right to cut the trees standing on his holding but the landlord has the right to appropriate them If the tenant claims any right to appropriate the trees, he must prove a custom or usage to that effect.

An entry in a Record of Rights is entitled to the benefit of the presumption attached to it, but where the Court has before it the evidence upon which the record was prepared and where the plaintiff denies the correctness of the record, the Court is bound to come to a finding whether that evidence is sufficient to justify the entry Pat JANKI KUER v. SUDAGAR RAM, 1 P. L. T. 221; (1920) PAT. 177 417

——— Ryotwari holding, suit for possession of—Permanent tenancy, claim of, by defendant.

Where in a suit for the recovery of possession of agricultural land in a ryotwari tract the defendant claims a right of permanent tenancy, it is for him to establish permanency, and this may be done by proving a custom, a contract or a title, or by other means; and where in such a case custom is out of the question, and contract is negatived by the trial Court, but that Court leaves the question of title untouched, it is open to the High Court, in appeal, to make a pronouncement on that question P (SETURATNAM AIYAR v. VENKATACHALA GOUNDEN, (1920) M. W. N. 61; 27 M. L. T. 102; 11 L. W. 399; 38 M. L. J. 476; 22 Bom. L. R. 578, 18 A. L. J. 707; 43 M. 567 117

——— Suit for possession by landlord - Defendent setting up tenancy—Land, whether comprised in tenancy—Burden of proof

A landlord brought a suit for declaration of title to, and recovery of possession of, some land from his tenant on the ground that the land in suit was not included in the tenancy. The defendant alleged a tenancy under the plaintiff in respect of the land claimed. It was found that the land claimed was not an encroachment, nor was it contiguous to the land forming the tenancy of the defendant:

Landlord and tenant—concld.

Held, that the onus of proving that the land was included in the tenancy of the defendant lay on the defendant. C NABIN CHANDRA NATH v. TIRTHABASI BHOWMIK 1 O

——— Under-raiyat, status of—Lands held as korfa chasi or korfa raiyati*—Appeal, second—Point involving question of fact not raised at trial, whether can be taken in second appeal.*

Where in a kabuliyat the holdings are described as korfa chasi and korfa raiyati and the predecessors-in-interest of the holders under the kabuliyat had portions at least of the lands comprised in khas cultivation, the status of the holders is that of under-raiyats.

A point which ought to be, but is not, taken in the trial Court and in respect of which no direct evidence is given cannot be taken in second appeal, especially if it involves a question of fact. C ANWAR BEWA v SURENDRA NATH 844

Lease, construction of—Istimrari lease, duration of.

A lease, described as istimrari, which contains no specific clauses referring to succession and transfer, is good only for the lifetime of the lessee, and, by itself, is no defence to a notice of ejectment against the successors of the lessee. U P B R HARDUTT SINGH v. JAIKARAN SINGH, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R.) 13 656

——— Sub-lease by lessee—Breach of covenant—Lessor, right of, to recover damages or rent from sub-lessee.

Where a lessee in contravention of the terms of his lease grants a sub-lease, the lessor has no cause of action against the sub-lessee either for rent or for damages, his right to recover damages for breach of covenant being restricted to the lessee. N SITARAM MAHARAJ v. NARAYAN 268 ———Leases of sub-soil rights, grant of, effect of.

The mere grant of leases by the teunre-holder which purport to grant sub-soil rights will not in itself give to the tenure-holder a title to the sub-soil rights by adverse possession What must be considered, in order to decide the question of adverse possession, is the evidence of actual working. Pat KUMAR PREMATHA NATA MALIA v. MEIK, (1920) PAT. 146; 5 P. L. J. 273; 1 P. L. T. 360 184

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), ss. 36, 39—Proceedings under Legal Practitioners Act—Revision.

The enquiry under section 39 of the Legal Practitioners Act is of the nature of a departmental enquiry, and it is enough if it is conducted in such a way that the officer enquiring acts with substantial justice and gives the person against whom proceedings are being taken an opportunity to show cause. S MULCHAND, In re, 13 S. L. R. 212; 21 CR L. J. 449 433

Letters of Administration, application for, by two presons—Status of one admitted and of other disputed—Procedure. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT (V OF 1881), s 23 764

Letters Patent (All.), cl. 8—Vakil preparing and presenting petition without authority from his clients—Misconduct.

A Vakil prepared and presented to a Sessions Judge in the course of a criminal trial a statement which purported to be a petition issuing from his clients and drafted on their instructions, whereas in truth and in fact it was a petition which originated with him and in respect of which he had received no instructions, and he put therein allegations which were made recklessly and without any reasonable grounds for belief:

Letters Patent—concld.

Held, that he was guilty of professional misconduct. A A VAKIL, In the matter of, 18 A. L. J. 429; 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 150; 21 CR L. J. 409; 42 A. 450 501

——— (Cal.), cl. 12—Properties situate partly within and partly without ordinary original civil jurisdiction of High Court—Leave to sue, competency of—Jurisdiction, want of—Res judicata—Mortgage—Sub-mortgagee, remedies of—Suit against mortgagor—Court, proper.

The Calcutta High Court is not competent to grant leave, under clause 12 of its Letters Patent, to enforce a cause of action in respect of properties situated partly within, and partly without, the local limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, and a decree so far as it affects properties without those limits must be deemed to have been made without jurisdiction.

Where a Court has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of an action in which an order is made, such order is wholly void and cannot operate as res judicata.

A sub-mortgagee is entitled to bring a suit against his mortgagor and to realise the dues on his mortgage by sale or foreclosure. It is also open to a sub-mortgagee, but by no means obligatory on him, to frame his suit in such a way as not only to enforce his rights under his own mortgage but to enforce the original mortgage against the mortgagor of his mortgagor A sub-mortgagee may thus be content to cut off the equity of redemption of his mortgagor or he may at his choice, by a suit properly framed, cut off the equity of redemption not merely of his mortgagor but also of the mortgagor of his mortgagor.

Where the properties comprised in an original mortgage are situated in the Mufassil, the mortgagee by the grant of a sub-mortgage along with a mortgage of property in the town of Calcutta is not entitled to have the forum altered in relation to the enforcement of the original mortgage As between the mortgagee and the sub-mortgagee, a suit to enforce the security may fittingly be instituted on the Original Side of the High Court at Calcutta. But as the original mortgagor could have been sued by his mortgagee in respect of liabilities arising out of the mortgage transaction only in the Mufassil Court, the mortgagee, by granting a mortgage to a third person of his interest as mortgagee and by including in that document a property in Calcutta, cannot be permitted to prejudice the position of his mortgagor and to render him liable to be sued in a Court other than the Mufassil Court. C KRISHNA KISHORE DE v. AMAR NATH KHETTRY 31 C. L. J. 472; 21 C. W. N. 633 532

Limitation—Adoption, right to challenge, barred by limitation—Gift to adopted son, whether can be impeached by reversioners.

Where an adoption remains unchallenged, and the right to impeach it is barred by limitation, a gift made subsequently in favour of the adopted son does not give the reversioners a fresh cause of Limitation—concld.

action, in that it does not involve any further denial their rights than was involved in the adoption. KHUSHAL SINGH v. HANDA, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 110 931

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 4, applicability of, to private agreements between parties —Agreement by decree-holder to set aside sale on payment of decretal money by judgment-debtor within certain time—Payment beyond time fixed but on re-opening of Court, effect of.

Section 4 of the Limitation Act does not apply to a case where a certain date has been fixed for the payment of money by agreement of the parties.

A decree-holder agreed to set aside the sale of the properties of the judgment-debtor if the latter paid up the decretal amount within two months of the date of the sale. The Courts were closed on the last day allowed for payment and the decretal amount was deposited on the day that the Courts re-opened:

Held, that payment not having been made within the time agreed upon, the sale could not be set aside. Pat ADYA SINGH v. NASIB SINGH, 1 P. L. T. 227 495

——— s. 4—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 6—Plaint filed on day Court re-opened after vacation—Limitation, expiry of, during vacation—Plaint omitting to state cause of delay—Plaint, whether liable to be rejected—Evidence Act (1 of 1872), s. 57 (9)—Judicial notice —Holidays notified—Duty of Court.

Although under rule 6, Order VII, of the Civil Procedure Code the plaint in a suit filed after expiry of the period of limitation should show on what ground exemption is claimed, yet an omission to do so in respect of a suit filed on the day the Court re-opened after its summer vacation, the period of limitation for bringing which had expired during the vacation, would not entail dismissal of the suit, because under section 57 (9) of the Evidence Act the Court is bound to take judicial notice of any public holidays notified in the Official Gazette, and the plaintiff is entitled to presume that the Court would take such judicial notice. The proper course for the Court in such a case is not to dismiss the suit but to require the plaint to be amended. N TEKCHAND v. PATTO 926

——— s. 12—Time requisite for obtaining copy —Application for copy, dismissed for default—Copy of decree obtained by party other than appellant—Appellant, whether entitled to deduction of time for obtaining copy.

Inasmuch as the law does not require that the copy of a decree accompanying a memorandum of appeal should have been obtained by the appellant himself, the provisions of section 12 of the Limitation Act would apply where a copy of the decree appealed against was obtained by another person.

Where, therefore, an appellant applied for a copy of a decree, but his application was dismissed in default of paying the necessary fees, and he presented an appeal accompanied by a copy of the decree obtained by another person:

Held, that, under section 12 of the Limitation Act, he was entitled to an exclusion of the time occupied in obtaining the copy in computing the period prescribed for the appeal. M AMINUDEEN SAHIB v. PYARI BI, 11 L. W. 370; 38 M. L. J. 340; (1920) M. W. N. 246; 43 M. 633 73

Limitation Act—contd.

——— s. 12—Time requisite for obtaining copy— Judgment pronounced on first day of vacation—Copy applied for several days after re-opening of Court—Period of vacation, whether can be excluded from time for appealing.

Where a judgment is pronounced on the first day of the Court's vacation, and an application for a copy is not made till several days after the re-opening of the Court, the applicant is not entitled to deduct the period of the vacation, as time requisite for obtaining a copy under section 12 of the Limitation Act, from the period prescribed for presenting an appeal. M DONOPUDY SUBRAMANYAM v. NUNE NARASIMHAM, 11 L. W. 483; (1920) M. W. N. 295; 38 M. L. J. 465; 43 M. 640 67

——— s. 19—Mortgage Redemption—Acknowledgment by mortgagee—Limitation—Burden of proof.

Where in a suit for the redemption of a mortgage the plaintiff relies upon an acknowledgment by the mortgagee to establish the subsistence of the mortgage, it is for him to prove that the acknowledgment was made before the expiry of the period of limitation and that he had a subsisting title at the date of the suit A ANUP SINGH v. FATEH CHAND, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 187 & 258; 18 A. L. J. 789; 42 A. 575 586

——— s. 20—Part-payment of principal— Writing, what must contain—Extension of limitation.

If the fact that a payment is made by a debtor to a creditor appears in the handwriting of the person making the payment, and if it appears on the evidence in the case that the payment was in part satisfaction of the principal of a debt, the requirements of section 20 of the Limitation Act would be satisfied. B SAKHARAM MANCHAND GUJAR v. KEVAL PADAMASI GUJAR, 22 Bom. L. R. 313; 44 B. 392 429

——— s. 22—Party already represented, joinder of, after expiry of limitation, effect of.

If a person is already represented in a suit by a party to the suit, his joinder is not the joinder of a new plaintiff or a new defendant, within the meaning of section 22 of the Limitation Act. N NARHAR v. NARAIN 386

——— s. 23, Sch. I, Art. 120—Injunction, suit for—Continuing wrong—Limitation—Terminus a quo.

Article 120 of the Limitation Act, being the residuary Article, prescribes the period of limitation for a suit for injunction, but the terminus a quo is the date when the right to sue accrues.

Plaintiffs sued for the issue of a perpetual injunction restraining defendant from discharging rain water on to the roof of the plaintiffs' shop through a parnala:

Held, that the plaintiffs had a fresh cause of action on each occasion when the defendant discharged water through the parnala on the plaintiffs' roof and that they were entitled to rely upon the last occasion when this was done as the starting point of limitation. L NUR MOHAMMAD v. GAURI SHANKAR, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 116 1003

——— s. 26—Easement— Right of way—Open user for 20 years—Presumption - Appeal, second—Failure to make presumption allowed by law—Error of law.

An open user of a right of way continued without interruption for a period of over 20 years and not shown to be attributable to permission or sufferance on the owner's part is prima facie evidence of enjoyment as of right within the meaning of section 26 of the Indian Limitation Act.

The failure by a Court to make a presumption allowed by law amounts to an error of law. L DIWAN v. JAGTA, 1 L 206; 113 P L. R. 1920 728

——— s. 28, Sch. I, Art. 47—Scope of Art. 47—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 146—Possession proceedings—Attachment of property and appointment of Receiver - Suit challenging Magistrate's order by party aggrieved Limitation—Failure to sue within time - Extinguishment of remedy.

The suit contemplated in Article 47 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act is one for possession by a party against whom an oder is passed by a Magistrate The principle underlying Article 47 is that as possession is outstanding, the party who is out of it should sue within three years to recover it. If he fails to sue within that period then under section 28 of the Limitation At his right to possession is extinguished. M SOLAI AMMAL v JOGI CHETTY, 10 L. W. 647: 27 M. L. T. 53 675

——— Sch I, Art. 67—Book entry, whether bond—Suit for recovery of money due on book entry—Limitation

A book entry containing a promise to pay at a certain rate of interest and attested by witnesses is a bond, and a suit for recovery of the money due thereon is governed by Article 67 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act L HARI SINGH v FAZAL 117

——— ——— Art. 68, applicability of—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s 78—Administration security bond, suit on—Limitation applicable.

An administration security bond is not a bond subject to a condition as contemplated in Article 68 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act, consequently the period of limitation prescribed by that article does not apply to a suit brought upon a breach of the terms of the bond Article 68 applies to a bond which is to become enforceable only when a specified condition is broken. The obligation to sue under an administration surety bond is liable to be enforced at once, and can only be avoided by the sureties showing that the conditions laid down in the bond have been fully carried out, or carried out as far as possible up to the time of the suit. The right to sue on such a bond accrues on failure of the administrator to comply with any of the conditions, or on the administrator putting it out of his power to comply with them. L B KO PU MA THEIN YIN, 2 Bur. L. T. 225 968

——— ——— Arts. 115, 120—Suit for return of goods delivered with interest in kind—Limitation applicable.

Plaintiff sued for 4 ¾ manis of wheat, alleging that the defendant had signed a balance in his favour of 5¼ manis with interest payable in kind at the rate of 50 per cent. per annum;

Held, that the suit was governed either by Article 115 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act, in which case limitation began to run when payment was demanded and refused, or by Article 120, and that in either case the suit was in time. L SOHAN SINGH v. MUHAMMAD DIN 162

——— Sch. I, Art. 116—Suit to recover arrears of rent under registered kanom deed—Limitation.

The period of limitation applicable to a suit recover arrears of rent from the assignee of a person holding under a registered kanom deed is contained in Article 116 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. M KANNAN NARAYANAN v. MUTHALPUREDATH RAMUNNI, 11 L. W. 328 241

——— ——— Art. 118, applicability of—Suit for possession questioning validity of adoption—Limitation.

A suit for possession of property where the plaintiff questions the validity of an adoption is not governed by Article 118 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act N SONIBAI v DHANRAJ 620

——— ——— Art. 132—Mortgage—Charge, nature of—Suit to recover mortgage money wrongfully received by defendant—Limitation.

Plaintiffs, two out of the three daughters of one G., who died 11 years before suit, sued for possession of 2/3rds of certain immoveable property and mortgage money realised by the defendants after G.'s death:

Held, (1) that the money realised by the defendants represented the security which the plaintiffs had under the mortgage and did not cease to represent that security by reason of the defendants having wrongfully received payment thereof from the mortgagors;

(2) that the suit was governed by Article 132 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act and was within time. L ASO v. HARNAMI, 2 U. P. L R. (1) 114 944

——— ——— Arts. 140, 144—Devised property, suit for possession of—Devisee in possession—Limitation applicable.

Where the purchaser of the rights of a devisee sues to obtain possession of the devised property, the period of limitation applicable, if the devisee or his transferee has once obtained possession, is prescribed by Article 144 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. If the devisee has not obtained possession, the suit must be brought within the period prescribed by Article 140 of that Schedule. N GAJIBAI v. NILKANTH 929

——— ——— Art. 142, applicability of—Possession and dispossession—Burden of proof

In order to avail himself of the period of limitation prescribed by Article 14 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act, the plaintiff in a suit for possession of immoveable property must prove the dispossession which he alleges, and that he was in possession within twelve years of the suit. L B MUTHIA CHETTY v. THEVAR, 12 Bur L. T, 234 951

——— ——— Art. 142—Possession and dispossession—Suit for possession—Burden of proof.

When a plaintiff brings a suit for possession on the allegation that while in possession he was dispossessed by the defendant, he must show when exactly he was dispossessed and he must bring his suit within 2 years of the date of dispossession. Pat BHIKHAN v. MARDAN ALI 40

Limitation Act—contd.

Sch. I, Art. 144—Custom—Gift—Donee, failure of direct line of—Reversion of gifted property—Trespasser, possession of, whether adverse to nearest reversioner or all reversioners—Trees planted by donee, whether revert with the land—Compensation.

Where on the failure of a donee's line of descendants the gifted property is taken possession of by a trespasser his possession is adverse, within the meaning of Article 144 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act, to the nearest reversioner who is entitled to claim immediate possession of the property and not to the more distant collaterals who cannot at once claim possession.

A donee has a precarious tenure of the gifted land and any permanent fixtures, e g, trees which he attaches to it and any permanent structures which he erects upon it would, in the event of the failure of his direct line, go to the reversionary owner of the land, and not to the collateral heirs of the donee The latter are not in such a case entitled to any compensation. L HARNAMAN v. DASONDHI, 1. L. R. 210; 112 P L. R. 1920 733

Arts. 166, 181—Execution of decree—Sale of properties belonging to stranger—Application to set aside sale—Limitation.

Where the property of a stranger to execution proceedings, i. e, a person who was not a party to the decree, is attached and sold, the sale is void for want of jurisdiction, and an application to set aside such a sale would not be barred if made within the period prescribed by Article 181, of Schedule I to the Limitation Act Article 166 has no application to such a case M SHESHAGIRI RAO v. SREENIVASA RAO, 38 M. L J. 62; (1920, M. W. N. 127; 43 M. 313 260

Art. 131—Application for restoration of application to set aside ex parte decree dismissed for default—Limitation applicable See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. IX, R. 325

Art. 181—Execution of decree—Interposition of bar to execution—Fresh application, when to be made—Limtiation

Where a bar is interposed which prevents the holder of a decree from carrying on execution, as for instance, where execution is restrained by injunction, he must, to save execution being barred by limitation, come into Court within three years of the removal of the bar under Article 181 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. A BALWANT SINGH v. BUDH SINGH, 18 A. L J. 642; 42 A 564 1005

Art. 181—Execution of decree—Sale set aside—Fresh application for execution—Limitation—Appeal, pendency of, whether bar to applying for execution.

Where a sale held in execution of a decree is set aside, the decree-holder has a period of three years from the date of the order setting aside the sale to again apply for execution. The fact that the order forms the subject of an appeal is no bar to the making of an application for execution during the pendency of the appeal within the aforesaid period of three years. Pat AMJAD HUSSAIN v. SHYAM LAL 1004

Arts. 181, 182—Mortgage-decree—Application for order absolute—Repeal of ss. 88, 89, Transfer of Property Act, before expiry of time fixed for payment—Prior application within three years, dismissal of—Final decree, application for, whether necessary—Limitation.

A mortgage decree having been passed on 10th December 1908, the decree-holder applied on 2nd December 1911 for an order absolute for sale. That application having been dismissed for default, the decree-holder again applied for an order absolute on 28th April 1914:

Held, that the decree-holder had a right to make the application for order absolute on 28th April 1914 and that the right was not barred by Article 182 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act or by section 48, Civil Procedure Code.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A decree passed under section 88 of the Transfer of Property Act gave a vested right to the decree-holder to apply in execution for an order absolute and the repeal of the said section by Order XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code, could not take away this right.

Per Spencer, J.—The application of 2nd December 1911 was a step-in-aid of execution but if it were deemed necessary, owing to the introduction of Act V of 908 while the suit was pending, that the decree-holder should apply for a final decree, the applications of 1911 and 1914 might be treated as applications under Article 181 of the Limitation Act for a final decree, the second application being treated as a continuation or revival of the first. M GANAPATHIYA PILLAI v. GOPALA AIYER 563

Lunacy Act (XXXIV of 1858), proceedings under—Order of Judge and deposition of lunatic, whether admissible in subsequent suit against lunatic Hindu Law—Inheritance—Mental affection, whether disqualification.

Although the order and the report made by a Judge in a proceeding in lunacy under Act XXXIV of 1858 do not fall within either sections 40, 41 or 42 of the Evidence Act, yet in a subsequent suit against the lunatic they are admissible in evidence under other provisions of the Act. But the deposition of the lunatic taken in the lunacy proceeding would not be admissible in evidence unless he is examined in the subsequent suit, for it is admissible only to contradict any evidence which he gives in the subsequent suit.

According to Hindu Law mental affection, to disqualify a person from inheriting, must be of such a nature that a man is thereby debarred or incapable of performing the funeral rites and offering the proper funeral oblations. C PADMABUTTI DASI v. BONOMALI SEAL, 24 C. W. N. 378 566

Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), s. 3 (2), (5), (11)—Minor inamdar—Grantee of lands in permanently settled estate, whether 'land-holder'—'Rents,' in cl. (5), meaning of.

Per Wallis, C. J.—An inamdar to whom lands were granted by the zemindar after the settlement out of the lands included in the permanently settled estate is not a 'land-holder' within the definition of clause 5 of section 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act.

There is no sufficient reason for refusing to apply the definition of 'rent' in clause (11) to the word 'rents' in clause (5) of section 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act, and full effect can be given to that definition by reading the latter part of it as intended to include, as it says, persons entitled to collect the rents due to the owner of the estate, such as farmers or assignees of such rents by way of mortgage, etc Inams and under-tenures in larger estates which do not consist of one or more villages but are of lesser extent are not within the operation of the Act.

Madras Estates Land Act—concld.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J—(dissenting).—An inamdar to whom lands were granted by the zemindar after the settlement out of lands included in the permanently settled estate is not a 'land-holder' within the definition of clause (5) of section 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act. M GADADHARADOSS v. SURYANARAYANA PATNAIK, 38 M. L. J. 342; (1920) M. W. N. 503; 12 L. W. 77 92

——— ss. 3 (11), 61—Jodi, whether rent.

Jodi is not rent as defined in section 3 (11) of the Madras Estates Land and interest thereon cannot be claimed under section 61 of the Act. M SINGARAJU VENKATASUBBARAMANIAM v. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI, 11 L. W. 523 552

Maintenance grant—Mashahara bandegi patra, construction of—"Douhitransha," meaning of—Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 160, applicability of.

A mashahara bandegi patra (maintenance grant) executed in favour of his daughter by a zemindar of considerable means having no son, recited that the daughter had been receiving a certain sum of money from his zemindari for her maintenance and other expenses, and that unless some deed was executed objection might be raised in future to her getting the "settled amount of maintenance" which was, therefore, made "kaim" permanent by the deed and it was, further, provided by the deed that the daughter would get the same in "douhitransha":

Held, (1) that the grant was intended to be perpetual and was not limited to the life of the daughter's sons:

(2) that the word "douhitransha" was intended to mean "in the line of the daughter's sons"

The principle enunciated in section 160 of the Succession Act cannot apply when a contrary intention appears in the document. C RAJLAKHI DEBYA v. SAROLA SUNDARI DEBYA 803

Malabar Law—Landlord and tenant—Denial of title—Forfeiture - Denial, what amounts to—Kudima and adima tenures—Denial to render service—Resumption, liability to

In order that a denial of the landlord's title by a tenant may operate as a forfeiture of the tenancy, such denial must be brought home to the knowledge of the landlord, and it must be unequivocal and clear. The mere acceptance and retention by a tenant of a document in which he is spoken of as the jenmi would not operate as a denial of the landlord's title, but the setting up of a prescriptive title would.

In the case of kudima and adima tenures in Malabar, a grant made for past services cannot be resumed, but a grant made for future services, can be resumed for failure to perform the services and a denial of title is tantamount to a denial to render services. M KOLANGERETH RAMMAN NAIR v. KOLLAMATAMULLATHIL MARIYOMMA, 11 L. W. 613; (1920) M. W. N. 332; 43 M. 480 13

Malabar Law—concld.

——— Tarwad—Agreement by karnavan for benefit of tarwad—Junior member not consulted—Agreement, whether valid

Where an agreement is entered into by the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad for the benefit of the tarwad, the fact that a junior member was not consulted about it is not a legal ground for invalidating the agreement. M VENGANATH RAJA VASUDEVA v. NAITHILATH MATATHIL, 27 M. L. T. 54 199

Malicious prosecution—Damages, suit to recover—Reasonable and probable cause, absence of—Burden of proof.

In order to succeed in a suit to recover damages for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff must prove, among other things, (a) that he was acquitted in the criminal proceedings, (b) that the defendant was actuated by malice in instituting the proceedings, (c) that damage was caused to him as a result of the prosecution, and (d) that there was absence of reasonable and probable cause on the part of the defendant. A NAZIR HASAN v. BAKHTAWAR, 2 U. P. L. R. (A. J.) 7 161

Maliciously procuring order of Court—Damages, suit for—Malice, absence of, effect of.

In the absence of proof of malice or its equivalent, a suit for damages for having wrongfully procured an order of Court appointing a Receiver will not lie. LB M. M. L. P. K. CHETTY v. SUPAYA MAISTRY, 12 BUR. L. T. 239 960

Martial Law Ordinance (IV of 1919), applicability of—Ordinance, whether confined to persons taken in the act of committing an offence specified in Regulation X of 1804—Government of India Act, 1915 (5 and 6 Geo V, c. 61), ss 65 (2), 73, 72—Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916, (6 and 7 Geo. V, c. 37) s. 2 (2)—Restrictions on powers of Indian Legislature—Right to be tried by ordinary Courts, whether can be taken away—Laws affecting allegiance—"Repugnancy" between Indian Statutes and Acts of Parliament, how far invalidates Indian Statutes.

The Martial Law (Further Extension) Ordinance, 1919 Ordinance No. (IV of 1919) is not confined in its application to persons taken in the act of committing one of the offences specified in Regulation X of 1804, or to the persons and offences described in Martial Law Ordinance I of 1919, but extends to all offences committed on or after March 30th, 1919.

Section 65, sub-section (2) of the Government of India Act, 1915, does not prevent the Indian Government from passing a law which may modify or affect a rule of the constitution or of the common law upon the observance of which some person may conceive or allege that his allegiance depends: it refers only to laws which directly affect the allegiance of the subject, as by a transfer or qualification of the allegiance or a modification of the obligation thereby imposed.

Observations of Phear, J., in Ameer Khan, In the matter of, 6 B. L. R. 394 and 459 at p. 477, approved

It was argued that Ordinance IV of 1919 contravenes section 65 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1915, which prevents the Indian Government from empowering any Court other than a High Martial Law Ordinance—concld.

Court to sentence to death any of His Majesty's subjects born in Europe, the Ordinance containing no exception in favour of such subjects :

Held, that the Ordinance may properly be described as repugnant to the Act so far as British-born subjects are concerned, but that it is void only to the extent of that repugnancy, i. e, in the case of His Majesty's subjects born in Europe P C BUGGA v. EMEEROR, (1920) M. W. N. 326; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C) 50; 24 C. W. N. 650; 18 A L. J. 455; 22 Bom. L. R. 609; 39 M. L. J. 1; 12 L. W. 293; 1 L. 326; 21 CR. L. J. 458 440

Material Irregularity, what amounts to. See AGRA TENANCY ACT, S. 185 287

Minor—Contract by guardian, when binding on minor's estate—Creditor, rights of—Subrogation.

Where a contract is entered into by a guardian on behalf of a minor in a case in which the minor's estate would have been liable for the obligation incurred by the guardian under the personal law to which the minor is subject, a decree might be passed against the estate of the minor.

Where a guardian borrows money for the necessities of a minor in such circumstances as to give him a right to be reimbursed from the minor's estate, his creditor may in a proper case be subrogated to the guardian's rights. N CHHOGALAL MEGHRAJ v. KANHAYALAL TARACHAND 740

——— Guardian ad litem, appointment of—Disqualified person appointed guardian—Minor, whether represented.

If the law absolutely disqualifies certain persons from being appointed guardians ad litem, the appointment of any such person in that capacity is a nullity, and the minor is not at all represented in the litigation. O DRIGPAL SINGH v SUKHNANDAN LAL, 7 O. L. J. 164; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C) 96 299

Misjoinder of causes of action against separate defendants—Objection to use of irrelevant evidence not taken in trial Court, effect of.

Where a plaintiff in disregard of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code unites in the same suit, not merely several causes of action, but several causes of action or suits against separate defendants, with the result that in effect the litigation is conducted and treated throughout as though the defendants are a community with common interests, he cannot be heard to object to the use of evidence against him as irrelevant, but to which the irregularity of his procedure has given relevance and to which he took no exception when it was tendered at the trial. P C SETURATNAM AIYAR v VENKATACHALA GOUNDUN, (1910, M. W. N. 61; 27 M. L. T. 102; 11 L. W. 399; 38 M. L. J. 476; 22 Bom. L. R. 578; 18 A. L. J. 707; 43 M. 567 117

Mortgage—Co-mortgagees, position of—Payment to one co-mortgagee, whether discharges mortgage.

Co-mortgagees must, unless the contrary is shown, be regarded as having a separate interest in the money advanced, although they take a joint security, and must be treated as in the position of tenants-in-common and not joint tenants. Therefore, a payment of the mortgage-debt to one of two mortgagees would not amount to a discharge of the mortgagor's liability to the other mortgagee. Pat ABBAS v. MISRI LAL, 1 P. L. T. 339; 5 P. L. J. 376 403

Mortgage—contd.

——— Construction of document—Deed stipulating for redemption on payment of mortgage-money and charging property with liability for principal and interest—Redemption, sum payable on.

Where a mortgage-deed stipulates for redemption of the mortgaged property on payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage-money, and states that the property is mortgaged for the principal and interest, the mortgagor can only redeem on payment of the principal sum and the interest due thereon. L GHANISHAM DAS v MUBARIK 576

——— Hypothecation of future crops, when becomes complete—Suit against transferee without notice, whether maintainable Revision—Misapprehension of nature of contract, whether material irregularity.

A hypothecation of future crop becomes complete when the crop is grown and the produce realized, and is enforcible against a transferee of such produce with notice of the obligee's equitable interest but not against a transferee without notice.

On the 4th January 1918 G. hypothecated the coming rabi crop by an unregistered deed to the plaintiff, and on the 10th February 1918 G. and his son N. hypothecated the same crop by an unregistered deed to S., who had no notice of the prior hypothecation S having taken the crop, plaintiff sued N. (G having died and S for the amount due to him:

Held, (1) that the hypothecation to the plaintiff and S became complete at the same time, i.e., when the crop was grown and the plaintiff could not, therefore, have any preference over S who moreover had no notice of the former hypothecation;

(2) that, therefore, S. was not liable at all;

(3) that the lower Appellate Court's misapprehension of the nature of the contract entered into by G. was a material irregularity justifying interference in revision. L SAWAYA RAM v. FATTU RAM 489

——— Interest, rate of, fixed and certain—Mortgagee, right of, to receive profits in excess—Construction of document.

Where under a mortgege-deed the rate of interest which the mortgagee is to receive is fixed and certain he is not entitled to any portion of the usufruct which might be in excess of that rate, and the mortgagor is entitled to maintain a suit for accounts to be taken of the profits realized by the mortgagee from the mortgaged property.

It would require very clear words to induce a Court to put upon a mortgage-deed such a construction as would entitle the mortgagee to claim interest and such portion of the usufruct as might be in excess of it.

Where a mortgage-deed provided that the net profits of the mortgaged property, which were estimated at a certain fixed amount, would go towards the payment of interest at the stipulated rate due to the mortgagee, that if the gross rental then fetched by the mortgaged property became deficient afterwards the mortgagor would pay the deficit, that if the revenue assessed on the propertry was enhanced the mortgagor would pay the extra revenue, that if by any efforts of the mortgagee the profits derived from the mortgaged property increased the advantage of that increase would go to the mortgagee, that the mortgagor would have no right to claim surplus profits on that account and that the mortgagor would be entitled to redeem the property after the lapse of the fixed period on payment of the principal money secured by the mortgage and such deficient profits or extra revenue as might be recoverable under the above conditions:

Held, that in a suit for redemption of the above mortgage the mortgagor was entitled to claim an account of the profits, derived by the mortgagee from the mortgaged property although no provision was made in the deed to cover a case where the profits might increase without any special efforts on the part of the mortgagee. O NARAIN DAS v. BAIJ NATH SAHAI, 7 O. L. J. 231 692

——— Mortgagee, right of, to take possession on default—Waiver—Penal clauses—Suit by mortgagee to recover possession—Consideration, payment of, whether can be gone into—Redemption, whether can be permitted.

A mortgage-deed was to the following effect. The principal and interest was to be paid within a fixed period. If default was made in payment of any portion of the interest, the balance was to be converted from simple interest to compound interest at the same rate. If the total amount due on the deed was not paid by the time fixed, the mortgagee was at liberty either to bring the mortgaged property to sale and recover the amount due from the sale-proceeds or, in the alternative, to enter into possession of the property and remain in possession until such time as the mortgage was redeemed or in perpetuity if the mortgage was not redeemed. Default was made in the payment of principal and interest and it was found that the mortgagee had accepted certain deeds of further charge in respect of some of the unpaid arrears of interest:

Held, (1) that the acceptance of the deeds of further charge by the mortgagee did not amount to a waiver of his remedy as to taking possession of the mortgaged property;

(2) that the mortgage-deed contained no penal clause and that the condition permitting possession was a good condition.

The question as to whether the full consideration for a mortgage was paid can be gone into only when a suit for its redemption is filed and not in a suit by the mortgagee for possession of the mortgaged property. Nor can the mortgagor be allowed to redeem the mortgage in such a suit. O GOKUL PRASAD v. SITLA PRASAD, 7 O. L. J. 184 348

——— Mortgagor in possession—Rent settled by mortgagor, whether binding on mortgagee - Burden of proof.

Where a person gets a contractual benefit from a mortgagor in possession after the date of the mortgage, the onus is upon such person to prove that it was a benefit which he might derive and retain in the usual course of the management of the property.

Where a mortgagor in possession made a collusive settlement of rent with the tenants:

Held, that the settlement was not binding on the mortgagee. Pat MATHURA RAI v. MANDIL DAS, 1 P. L. T. 392 805

——— of grove land—Mortgagee, right of, to let for cultivation—Lease, whether binding upon mortgagor

It is within the rights of a mortgagee of grove land to let the land for agricultural purposes, and such letting is binding on the mortgagor. Where grove land is so let, the mortgagor cannot set up the fiction that it was not held for these purposes. U P B R GAJADHAR v. BENI PRASAD, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R) 44 819

——— Redemption—Benamidar, whether can maintain suit for redemption.

A benamidar can maintain a suit for redemption in his own name, and the beneficial owner is bound by the decision of the suit, whether he is a party to it or not. Pat BISUDHANAND v. ISRI SINGH 599

——— Redemption, suit for—Mortgage converted into sale—Sale, validity of, whether can be questioned by mortgagor.

Plaintiff sued to redeem a mortgage effected by himself. The defence was that the plaintiff had converted the mortgage into a sale, and this was established Plaintiff objected to the validity of the sale on the ground that he had no power to effect it:

Held, that plaintiff had no locus standi to impugn the validity of the sale. U B MA YE BAW v. MAUNG SHWE HMAN, 3 U. B. R. (1919) 192 253

——— Suit for sale—Failure to implead necessary parties—Sale in execution of mortgage decree—Suit to redeem by persons who should have been joined as parties, maintainability of.

In a suit for sale under a mortgage the mortgagee failed effectively to implead certain persons interested in the mortgaged property. A decree was passed and the mortgaged property was sold under it and was purchased by the mortgagee. The persons who should have been impleaded subsequently sued for a declaration that their right to redeem was not extinguished, but, to save Court-fees, abandoned the prayer to set aside the sale:

Held, that after the sale had taken place, the mortgagee held as purchaser and was entitled to raise all the defences that belonged to him as such, and that unless the claim to set aside the sale were made in a properly constituted action and properly raised in suitable pleadings in that action, the Court could not interfere with the possession which had been given him by the purchase. P C GIRNPAT LAL v BINDRASINI PRASHAD NARAYAN SINGH, 18 A L J. 555; (19 0) M. W. N. 382; 12 L. W. 59; 39 M. L. J. 108; 2 U. P. L. R (P. C.) 103; 24 C. W. N. 954 274

———, suit on—Receiver, appointment and position of—Order for appointment of Receiver obtained by first mortgagee, effect of, on second mortgagee—Second mortgagee purchasing equity of redemption, position of—Mortgagee, when can ask for appointment of Receiver.

Where there are two mortgages on the same property, it is open to the first mortgagee to obtain an order for the appointment of a Receiver and such order is binding on the mortgagor as also the second mortgagee, and a Receiver so appointed holds the property for the benefit of the first mortgagee and is bound to make over to him the entire income for the satisfaction of his dues The fact that the second mortgagee has obtained a decree and in execution thereof has purchased the equity of redemption places him in no position of advantage. In his character of purchaser in execution of his own decree he is as much bound by the order appointing a Receiver as the mortgagor.

Mortgage—concld.

A mortgagee, whether he is or is not entitled to possession, may invite the Court to appoint a Receiver if the demands of justice require that the mortgagor should be deprived of possession. C RAMESHWAR SINGH v. CHUNI LAL SHAHA, 31 C. L. J. 385; 47 C. 418 839

——— , usufructuary—Mortgagee to pay rent—Failure to pay—Redemption—Mortgagor, whether entitled to deduction of rent agreed to be paid.

A usufructuary mortgage provided that the mortgagee should pay the annual rent to the landlord, but he failed to do so and the debt became time-barred. The mortgagor in suing for redemption claimed to be entitled to deduct from the principal mortgage money the sum which under the mortgage should have been paid by the mortgagee:

Held, that the mortgagor was not entitled to the deduction he claimed and that the mortgagee was entitled to the benefit of the non-payment. Pat TOKHAN PANDEY v. SIVAKANTA PROSAD SINGH 743

Muhammadan Law—Dower, claim for, nature of—Relinquishment of dower, valid, requisites of—Burden of proof.

There is nothing in the Muhammadan Law to render valid the relinquishment of a claim for dower which was prompted when the lady was not a free agent or in a position to exercise free and deliberate judgment, and was under an influence which she was not in a position to overcome.

According to Muhammadan Law, the character of the obligation to pay the dower is a debt The moment the dower is settled it is enforceable as a debt. The dower becomes the property of the wife by the mere contract and she may, therefore, deal with or dispose of it before taking possession of the same. The dower is the right of the woman solely; and hence it is that she is empowered to give it up or relinquish it in the continuance of the contract. As the debt is enforceable under the Contract Act, it can also be released under section 63 of that Act.

There is nothing in the Muhammadan Law which requires that a relinquishment of a claim for dower, to be valid, must take place immediately after the husband's death. The lady can relinquish it at any time. No consideration is needed for such relinquishment, but it must be shown that the lady had the opportunity of considering the matter when it is said she gave up her claim. C NURUNNESSA KHANUM v. MUHAMMAD SAKRU, 31 C. L. J. 14; 24 C. W. N. 385; 47 C. 537 8 ——— Endowment—Mutwalli, lease by—Sanction of Court—Suit, whether necessary—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 92.

To enable the Mutwalli of a Muhammadan endowment to grant a lease of a piece of land comprised in the endowment, it is sufficient to obtain the sanction of the District Judge. It is not necessary for such purpose to institute a suit under section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure. C FAKHRANNESSA BEGAM v. DISTRICT JUDGE OF THE 24-PARGUNNAS, 24 C. W. N. 339; 47 C. 592 475

Muhammadan Law—concld.

——— Maintenance, order for—Divorce, effect of—Period for which order effective. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 488 663

——— Pre-emption—Shafi-sharik—Imperfect partition—Complete separation of rights—Co-sharer—Pattidar, right of, to pre-empt.

Where a plaintiff claims a right to pre-empt under the Muhammadan Law as a co-sharer, he must, in order to succeed, prove that he is one of the class of co-sharers within the meaning of that law.

In the case of an imperfect partition of a village, where there is a complete separation of all rights, the owner of a patti in that village cannot be regarded as a co-sharer and consequently he has no right to pre-empt. A MATHURA PRASAD v. HARDEO BAKHSH SINGH, 18 A. L. J. 58; 42 A. 477 174

——— Succession—Co-heirs, position of—Suit by one heir to recover his share—Some co-heirs not made parties to suit—Non-joinder, effect of—Partition, suit for—Parties necessary.

In a suit for partition it is necessary that all interested parties should be joined either as plaintiffs or as defendants.

On the death of a Muhammadan all his heirs become tenants-in-common of his estate.

A suit by one of several heirs of a deceased Muhammadan to recover his share in the estate left by the deceased is practically a suit for partition, and all the other heirs of the deceased must be impleaded as parties to the suit. If some of the heirs are not joined, the suit cannot proceed. Where their joinder becomes impossible, the suit must be dismissed. O MUHAMMAD AHMAD v. ANSAR MOHAMMAD, 7 O. L. J. 158; 23 O. C. 62 304 ——— Succession - Marriage—Slave girl—Acknowledgment that issue of slave girl entitled to succeed, effect of—Illegitimacy—Burden of proof.

Although according to strict Muhammadan Law, no marriage is necessary between a slave girl and her master, yet an acknowledgment by the master that he has a son born by the slave girl, with whom he has gone through a ceremony of marriage, coupled with the assertion that on the failure of issue from his real wife the issue of the slave girl would be entitled to his succession, would invest the son with a legitimate status with all the consequences which that imports. In the absence of positive evidence that the marriage did not take place, the law will refuse to declare the son a bastard and so disentitled to inherit L IBRAHIM ALI KHAN v. MUBARAK BEGAM, 20 P. W. R. 1920; 1 L. 229; 82 P. L. R. 1920 923

Necessity—Immorality—Burden of proof. See HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY 766

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 8—Pro-note—Stranger, whether can sue on note

Section 8 of the Negotiable Instruments Act prevents any person suing on a negotiable instrument, who is not named therein as the payee, or has not become entitled as endorsee or assignee. U B MAUNG SAW v. INGRASWAMY, 3 U. B. R. (1919) 200 259

——— s. 80—Pro-note—Agreement to pay interest, proof of—Secondary evidence, admissibility of—Interest, rate of, allowable—Period for which interest payable.

Negotiable Instruments Act—concld.

Secondary evidence of a written agreement to pay interest on a pro-note at a certain rate is inadmissible, and interest can only be awarded in accordance with section 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

In the case of a promissory note payable on demand, the date of the demand and not of the making of the note must be taken as the point from which to calculate interest. N PENTAYA v. KESHEORAO, 16 N. L. R. 68 249

——— s. 105—Presentation, time for—Reasonableness of time, whether question of law—Appeal, second.

The question of the reasonableness of the time for presenting a bill of exchange for payment is a mixed question of law and fact. L FIRM, KATASI SINGH-KAHAN SINGH v. FIRM, DAULAT RAM-KIRPA RAM 936

Non-Joinder of Parties—Suit by one heir to recover his share—Some co-heirs not made parties to suit—Non-joinder, effect of. See MUHAMMADAN LAW—SUCCESSION 304

Opium Act (I of 1878), s. 9—Sale of morphia to patients by approved medical practitioner without license—Offence.

An approved medical practitioner is entitled under the Bengal Morphia Rules to possess a certain quantity of morphia drugs for use in his practice but not for sale. A medical practitioner who sells morphia, which he has prescribed to one of his patients, without a license is liable to conviction under section 9 of the Opium Act. C JOGESH CHANDRA v. EMPEROR, 24 C. W. N. 313; 21 CR. L. J. 497 657

Oral evidence, admissibility of, to vary or contradict terms of document. See EVIDENCE ACT, s. 92 752

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 37, Exp. I—Trespasser, land held by, nature of.

Land held by a trespasser is not a "holding" or parcel of land held by a tenant and forming the subject of a separate engagement within the meaning of Explanation I to section 37 of the Oudh Rent Act. U P B R SANT PATHAK v. PARTAB RAHADUR 2 U. P. L. R. (B R.) 70 966

——— s. 62 (1)—Land let for cultivating purposes, whether can be used for groves.

Lands given to tenants for cultivating purposes must not be used for cultivating groves without the landlord's consent. U P B R DARSAN SINGH v. SHEORAJ SINGH, 2 U. P. L. R. (B R.) 22 286

Paper Currency Act (II of 1910), s. 26—Promissory note—Endorsement in blank, effect of—Holder, right of, to recover.

The endorsement in blank of a promissory note has the effect of making the note payable to bearer on demand. Such endorsement does not contravene the provisions of section 26 of the Paper Currency Act, as that section only prohibits the original making or issuing of promissory notes payable to bearer on demand, and the holder of a note so endorsed is not prevented from recovering on it. L B ISMAIL v. EZEKIEL, 12 BUR. L. T. 249 930

Pardanashin Lady—Execution of instrument by—Proof. See EVIDENCE ACT, s. 68 247

Part performance, doctrine of, applicability of, to India—Conditions necessary for exercise of jurisdiction.

There is nothing in the Law of India inconsistent with the doctrine of part performance on which Courts of Equity in England have acted for many years.

The jurisdiction to carry into execution transactions clothed imperfectly in legal forms being purely equitable, Courts of Equity have imposed on themselves certain limits for the exercise of the jurisdiction. Those limits must be clearly recognised and carefully guarded.

The first essential condition for the exercise of the jurisdiction is that there must be a final engagement between the parties. If the circumstances in the case suggest that the matter still rested in negotiation, there is no room to charge a person on the equities resulting from the acts done in execution of the contract.

The second essential condition is that there are such actings of the parties as must be unequivocally and in their own nature referable to the agreement alleged. If the alleged part performance cannot be connected with the alleged agreement, then there is nothing which the Court has to undo and consequently nothing which has been left undone and which ought to be carried into further execution. Pat DEB LAL JHA v. BALDEO JHA, 2 U. P. L. R. (PAT.) 100; 1 P. L. T. 354; (1920) PAT. 337 277

Partition proceedings—Presumption—Co-sharers not parties to proceedings, whether bound—Mortgagees, whether necessary parties to, and whether bound by, proceedings.

The presumption is that when a partition takes place, all the co-sharers in the village are made parties to the proceedings and, therefore, the proceedings must be taken to bind all the co-sharers and all persons who derive title under them.

Mortgagees are not necessary parties to partition proceedings, but they are bound by the decision of the partition Court in so far as it affects the interests of the co-sharers who are their mortgagors. O DRIGPAL SINGH v. NAKCHHED SINGH, 7 O. L. J. 171; 2 U. P. L. R. (J.C.) 99 320

———, suit for—Parties necessary. See MUHAMMADAN LAW—SUCCESSION 304

———, suit for—Res judicata—Previous suit, dismissal of, effect of.

The right to sue for partition is a continuing right and incidental to the ownership of joint property. Therefore, so long as the propetry remains joint, one of the co-owners has a good cause of action for bringing a fresh suit for partition notwithstanding the dismissal of a previous suit for partition. C JAGAMOHINI DASI v. SHIBA GOPAL BANERJEE 610

Party—Person interested in litigation but not party to suit, whether bound by result.

A person interested in a litigation is not bound to apply to have himself made a party and in default to be bound by the result of that litigation. N NARHAR v. NARAIN 386

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 62, 302—Murder—Forfeiture of property, order of, when appropriate.

An order under section 62 of the Penal Code, directing the forfeiture of the property of a person sentenced to death for murder, is appropriate only

Penal Code—contd.

when theft forms part of the motive for the murder. A MANNA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 18 A. L. J. 375; 21 CR. L. J. 401 49

——— ss. 131, 135—"Soldier," meaning of—Definition in Articles of War, scope of.

The word "soldier" in section 135 of the Indian Penal Code must be interpreted as in the explanation to section 131 of the Code

The definition of the word "soldier" given in the Indian Articles of War is expressly confined to those Articles and is a very limited one. L SRI NAWAS v. EMPEROR, 102 P. L. R. 1920; 21 CR. L. J. 511 671

——— ss. 140, 149—"Offence," meaning of.

The word "offence" in section 149 of the Penal Code means only an offence under the Penal Code and does not include an offence under the Railways Act.

Consequently, a conviction under section 126 of the Railways Act, read with section 149 of the Penal Code, is illegal. L INDER SAIN v. EMPEROR, 21 CR. L. J. 418 210

——— ss. 143, 297—Offence under s. 297, gist of—Trespass, meaning of—Interpretation of Statutes—Legal term, meaning of.

The gist of an offence under section 297 of the Penal Code is trespass, and before a person can be convicted under that section it must be proved that there was a trespass by him with the intention and in the places mentioned in the section.

The term "trespass" means an unjustifiable intrusion upon property in possession of another person.

In interpreting a Statute, the settled rule of construction is that where the Legislature uses a legal term which has a known significance, it must be assumed that the term has been used in that sense and in no other. Pat JHARI SINGH v. EMPEROR, 21 CR. L. J 443 235

——— ss. 147, 379—Unlawful assembly, common object of, to commit theft—No finding as to who removed property—Separate sentences, whether legal.

Where it is found that the common object of an unlawful assembly was to commit theft, but there is no finding as to which of the persons composing the unlawful assembly removed the property stolen, it is illegal to convict them both under section 147 and under section 379 of the Penal Code and to pass separate sentences for each offence. Pat CHANDRA MOHAN SINGH v EMPEROR, 1 P. L. T 6[illegible]; 21 CR L. J. 480 512

——— ss. 149, 325—Charge under s 325 read with s. 149—Conviction under s 325, legality of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 236, 237, 238.

If an accused person is charged with grievous hurt under section 325 read with section 149 of the Penal Code, he cannot be convicted of the substantive offence under section 325, Indian Penal Code, such a course not being warranted by the provisions of sections 236, 237 and 238, Criminal Procedure Code. Pat PARTAP RAI v. EMPEROR, 21 CR. L. J. 439 231

——— ss. 395, 397—Dacoity with torture—Sentence—Leniency, when should be shown

A person found guilty of the offence of dacoity with torture ought not, in the matter of sentence, to be treated with any considerations of leniency. A EMPEROR v. SUNDAR, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 115; 21 CR. L. J. 515 771

——— s. 406—Criminal breach of trust by servant—Trust, nature of, to be established—Transaction involving adjustment of accounts—Retention of money, whether offence.

Accused was employed as agent by the complainant to collect on his behalf the taxes of the Union Committee. He was to receive as remuneration 10 per cent of the collections, and was to hand over the collections, less his remuneration, to his master or to pay the money into the treasury, no period being fixed for the latter purpose. It was alleged that while in charge of the collections he failed to account for a certain sum of money collected by him. He was accordingly convicted of criminal breach of trust under section 406 of the Penal Code:

Held, that in such cases the nature of the trust should be established; that as the accused was entitled to deduct his remuneration from the collections, and as no period was fixed for payment into the treasury, a charge of criminal breach of trust could only be maintained after an adjustment of accounts, the mere fact that he retained the sums collected not being conclusive proof of criminal breach of trust, and that the conviction was, therefore, not maintainable. Pat NURUL HASSAN v. EMPEROR, 21 CR L. J 509 669

——— s. 411—Receiving stolen property—Stolen property, value of—Evidence, nature of—Criminal trial—Procedure.

In a case in which a person is charged with receiving or being in possession of property alleged to have been stolen, an important factor is the value of the property and as to this the Court should insist on having direct evidence, as the accused is entitled to have some sworn testimony of value which he can cross-examine. A MAHBOOB v. EMPEROR, 2 U P L R (A) 113; 21 CR. L J. 552 856

——— s. 411—Receiving stolen property—Trial by Jury—Charge to Jury—Judge, duty of—Jury, functions of—Burden of proof

Where a prisoner is charged with receiving stolen property, when the prosecution has proved the possession by the prisoner and that the goods had been recently stolen, the Jury may be told that they may, not that they must, in the absence of any reasonable explanation, find the prisoner guilty. But if an explanation is given which may be true, it is for the Jury to say on the whole evidence whether the accused is guilty or not, that is to say, if the Jury think that the explanation may reasonably be true though they are not convinced that it is true, the prisoner is entitled to an acquittal, because the Crown has not discharged the onus of proof imposed upon it of satisfying the Jury beyond reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt. That onus never changes; it always rests on the prosecution.

In a prosecution under section 411 of the Penal Code it is the duty of the Judge in delivering his charge to the Jury to point out that the possession of the stolen goods must be possession soon after the theft or that the stolen goods must have been "recently" stolen. HATHIM MONDAL v. EMPEROR, 31 C. L. J. 10; 24 C W. N. 614; 21 CR. L J. 515 843

Penal Code—contd.

——— ss. 415, 419—Cheating—Obtaining health certificate by giving false name—Health certificate, whether property within s. 415.

A health certificate is property within the meaning of section 415 of the Penal Code and if a person by falsely personating another dishonestly or fraudulently induces a Health Officer to deliver to him a health certificate, he is guilty of an offence under section 419 of the Penal Code. M PACKIANATHAN, In re, 11 L. W. 368; 21 CR L. J. 478 510

——— s. 426—Mischief—Intention to cause wrongful loss, finding as to, necessity of.

In order to sustain a conviction under section 426 of the Penal Code, it is essentially necessary to find that the accused had the intention of causing wrongful loss to the complainant, or that he had knowledge that he was likely to cause such loss A mere finding that wrongful loss was caused is not sufficient. M PACKIRIYA PILLAI v MUTHUKRISHNA IYER, 21 CR. L. J. 450 434

——— ss. 447, 448—House-trespass—Entry into house at invitation of wife of owner with intent to commit adultery—Offence.

During the temporary absence of the complainant from his house his wife invited the accused to the house, who entered it with the intent to commit adultery:

Held, (1) that the complainant could not be said to have ceased to be in possession of his house because of his temporary absence;

(2) that the accused, having entered the house with the intent to commit an offence, was guilty of house-trespass. U B CHATTAR SINGH DAMAI v. EMPEROR, 3 U. B. R. 194; 21 CR. L.J. 435 227

——— ss. 467, 471—Charge under s. 467—Conviction under s. 471, whether legal.

Where an accused person was charged under section 467, Indian Penal Code, but it appeared in evidence that he had committed an offence under section 47 , Indian Penal Code, for which he might have been charged under section 236 of the Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that although the accused was not charged with it, he could be convicted of an offence under section 471, Indian Penal Code. A JAGDEO PARSHAD v. EMPEROR, 18 A. L J. 442; 21 CR. L J. 410 58

——— s. 498—Accused marrying woman represented to be a widow—Woman claimed as wife by another—Denial by her of marriage and staying preferably with accused—Accused, whether guilty of wrongful detention.

Accused married a woman whom her relatives represented to be a widow. The complainant claimed the woman as his wife and demanded her from the accused. She denied that she had ever seen the complainant, or had had anything to do with him and deliberately walked into accused's house, Accused was convicted under section 498, Penal Code, for detaining the woman with unlawful intent knowing or having reason to believe that she was the wife of the complainant:

Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, as the woman's attitude showed that she was not being detained by the accused with or without justification, having determined to stay with him and not submit to the complainant, and that the accused did not have "reason to believe" that she was the wife of the complainant. A LACHMAN CHAMAR v. EMPEROR, 18 A. L J. 311; 21 CR. L. J. 417 209

Penal Code—concld.

——— s. 504—Intentional insult—Offence, what constitutes—Discourtesy and bad manners, whether amount to insult.

In order to constitute an offence under section 504 of the Penal Code, it is necessary that the insult should have been intentionally caused and thereby provocation given with the intention or knowledge that such provocation is likely to cause the person provoked to break the peace or to commit any other offence. Mere discourtesy and bad manners do not amount to a criminal offence for which a person can be criminally punished. A RAHIM BAKHSH v EMPEROR, 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 124; 18 A. L. J. 515; 21 CR L. J. 451 435

Petroleum Act (VIII of 1899), s. 15 (a) 851

Place of suing—Goods, purchase of, at one place to be delivered at another—Cause of action, accrual of, at place of delivery. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s 20 (c) 182

——— Sale of goods—Payment to be made where goods purchased—Cause of action, accrual of, place of. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 20 (c) 604

Pleadings—Court, whether can set up new case See PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE 638

——— Defence setting up new case, whether can be advanced in appeal.

A defence not raised in the lower Court and which sets up a new case, cannot be advanced in a Court of Appeal. M SINGARAJU VENKATASUBBARAMANIAM v. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI, 11 L W. 523 552

——— Gift, validity of, not questioned in trial Court, whether can be questioned in Court of Appeal—Procedure

In a pre-emption suit the defendant produced a deed of gift showing that, as against him, the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption. The validity of the gift was not questioned in the trial Court and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. On appeal the plaintiff challenged the validity of the gift deed on the ground that it was not properly attested and that attestation had not been proved, The Appellate Court allowed the objection and decreed the claim:

Held, that the plaintiff, having practically admitted the validity of the deed of gift in the trial Court, ought not to have been allowed to challenge it in appeal, and that the Appellate Court ought not to have entertained the objection without affording the defendant an opportunity of proving the due attestation of the deed A LALTA PRASAD v NASIR KHAN 179

Police Act (V of 1861), s. 29—Superintendent of Police, order by, regulating duties of Police Force—Disobedience of order—Offence.

An order by a Superintendent of Police regulating the duties of the men under his command is a lawful order under section 29 of the Police Act which the men are bound to obey, and a disobedience of any such order renders the person disobeying liable to conviction under that section.

An order by a Superintendent of Police directing members of the Mounted Police Force to groom their horses is a lawful order which the men are bound to obey. Pat MOHAMED YUSUF v. EMPEROR, 21 CR. L. J. 465 497

Possession and dispossession—
Land in condition unfit for actual enjoyment.

Where land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes at such a time, and under such circumstances that the state naturally would, and probably did, continue till within twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue, and that the plaintiff's possession continued also, until the contrary is shown. Pat BRAHMANAND SINGH v. DUND BAHADUR SINGH, 1 P L. T. 224; (1920) PAT 245; 2 U. L. R (Pat.) 111 344

Practice and procedure—Pro-note, suit on—Defendant admitting execution but denying consideration—Burden of proof—Pleadings—Court, whether can set up new case.

Plaintiff Bank sued one A. for recovery of Rs. 27,000 on the basis of a pro-note for Rs 25,000. Defendant, while admitting the execution of the pro-note, denied having received any consideration therefor and pleaded that the transaction was a bogus one and that he signed the pro-note on the assurance given him by one B., the Chief Manager of the Bank, who himself stood in need of money, that he defendant) could not be liable as B. had a fixed deposit of Rs. 25,000 in the Bank which would cover the transaction. Counsel for the Bank flatly contradicted the suggestion made by the defendant's Pleader that the fixed deposit receipt was obtained by B. as consideration for the pro-note and stated that it was given by B. as security for a debt already due. The Court held that no cash was paid to A, but decreed the claim on the ground that the consideration to A was the fixed deposit receipt which was a good consideration. The defendant appealed:

Held, (1) that the suit being based on a pro-note the execution of which was admitted, the onus was on the defendant to prove that no consideration passed;

(2) that as no money was paid to A as consideration for the pro-note and as B. had paid no money into the Bank in consideration for the fixed deposit receipt the plaintiff's suit should have been dismissed and the Court was wrong in setting up a case for the plaintiff which not only he did not set up but which he through his Counsel definitely repudiated. L ANANT RAM v. BHARAT NATIONAL BANK LTD., DELHI 638

Precedents, value and applicability of.

Every judgment must be read as applicable to the particular facts proved, or assumed to be proved, since the generality of the expressions which may be found there are not intended to be expositions of the whole law, but governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which such expressions are to be found.

A case is only an authority for what it actually decides. It cannot be quoted for a proposition that may seem to follow logically from it. N KISANLAL v. NATHU, 16 N. L. R. 131 44

Pre-emption—Sale—Vendor and purchaser, evidence of, value of—Representatives appointed to act on behalf of whole village—Minority of some villagers, effect of—Appeal to His Majesty in Council—Practice of Privy Council—Point, fresh, whether can be raised.

In a suit for pre-emption the persons engaged in the transaction and notably the vendors and the vendees are necessarily essential witnesses, and, in the absence of contradiction, their testimony ought not to be disregarded merely because they are interested parties.

It is not in consonance with the practice of the Privy Council upon the hearing of an appeal to entertain a point not raised in either of the Courts below nor presented upon the appeal.

Where in the matter of effecting a purchase of land two or three trusted and responsible inhabitants of a village are appointed to act on behalf of the whole village, very strong and cogent reasons would be required to hold that the arrangement, which is extremely wise and reasonable and so much in the interests of all the villagers, was bad, merely because one or more of the villagers happened to be an infant. P C IDRIS v. MRS JANE SKINNER, 82 P. R. 1919; 45 P. W. R. 1919 126 P. L. R. 1920 723 ——— suit—Pre-emptor indebted—Good faith.

The facts that a pre-emptor is indebted, is a minor and is not possessed of any means to enable him to purchase any new property are no justification for the inference that a suit brought on his behalf is not brought in good faith. O ATHAR HUSAIN v. IDU SHAH, 7 O. L J. 271; 23 O. C. 85; 2 U. P. L. R (J. C.) 105 691

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 33—Official Assignee, order by, directing insolvent to attend, whether should be in writing—Failure to comply with order—Contempt of Court—Application for committal for contempt, affidavit in support of, service of—Procedure—Irregularity, effect of.

It is not necessary that an order of the Official Assignee directing an insolvent to attend at his office, in pursuance of section 33 (2) (c) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, should be in writing: a verbal order is valid, and casts upon the insolvent the duty to comply therewith. Where in pursuance of a verbal order the insolvent fails to perform the duty imposed upon him, he is guilty of a contempt of Court.

There is no express provision requiring the affidavit in support of an application to commit an insolvent for contempt of Court to be served at the same time as the notice of the application.

An irregularity in the proceedings of an Official Assignee, which is not in any way prejudicial to the insolvent, or does not occasion any failure of justice, does not invalidate the proceedings.

In future if the Official Assignee intends to apply for a committal order for contempt of Court, he will be well advised to put his order into writing and have it served on the person intended to be proceeded against, with a notice that if the order is not complied with proceedings for contempt will be taken Further it is eminently desirable from all points of view that the procedure laid down by the rules should be strictly complied with. C BHURAMULL BANKA v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF BENGAL, 47 C 56 337

——— ss. 36, 103 A (1), 104—Criminal charge against insolvent—Offence, whether can be committed both before and after adjudication—Books of account, concealment or removal of—Destruction, whether refers only to destruction before the Official Assignee takes possession—Charge, error or irregularity in, effect of— Notice of charge, sufficiency of— Intention—Appellate Court, whether can arrive at finding as to intention—Examination of insolvent in insolvency proceeding, whether admissible in evidence in criminal proceeding—Admission—Evidence Act I of 1872), ss. 17, 132—Voluntary statement—Examination of insolvent under s 36 of Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, whether illegal—Practice—Evidence, weight of, admissibility of—Statement of unreliable witness corroborated by reliable witness, whether can be accepted.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act —contd.

An offence mentioned in section 103 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act may be committed by an insolvent either before or after adjudication of insolvency, and the section not only applies to cases of destruction of an insolvent's books of account before they are produced before the Official Assignee but also to cases of destruction in the Official Assignee's office after the latter has taken possession of the documents.

The rule that a charge under section 103 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act cannot be maintained if the charge is not framed in pursuance of the notice under section 101 of the Act, is subject to the principle that no error or irregularity in a charge will call for a reversal of an order unless it in fact has occasioned a failure of justice, and in determining whether this is the case, the Court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage of the proceedings.

If an accused person receives notice that the prosecution may seek to prove against him either of two alternative intentions, he cannot, as he must be ready to meet a charge in respect to both, be prejudiced by a charge of having had both intentions.

It is generally necessary that an insolvent should have notice of the charge which it is proposed to make against him A notice having reference to removing or causing to remove certain documents is sufficient notice of a charge of preventing the production of those documents within the meaning of section 103 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, inasmuch as removing a document is a mode of preventing its production.

A Court of appeal with all the materials before it can arrive at a finding of intention if this has been omitted per incuriam by the trial Judge, provided it is not a jury case.

The examination of an insolvent purporting to be made under section 36 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act and without any objection on the part of the insolvent is voluntary and is admissible in evidence in a criminal proceeding against him under section 103 of the Act.

It is the practice to examine an insolvent under section 36 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act.

The Court has power to examine an insolvent even if section 36 is not applicable, for the Court must have full control over the insolvent. There is no illegal compulsion in such examination.

In a criminal proceeding against the insolvent something said by him in other proceedings in the insolvency may be relied on as admissions of fact under section 17 of the Evidence Act. Being admissions, they are relevant and admissible, unless they are excluded by sections 18 to 31 of that Act. Even if the examination of the insolvent is not authorised, the answers given on such examination without objection are nonetheless admissible. Even if there was compulsion not being of the kind which excludes a confession, then under the Evidence Act the fact of compulsion might affect the weight of the evidence but not its admissibility.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act —concld.

It is open to a Court to accept part of the story of one witness who is not reliable, if it be corroborated by another who is reliable. C PERRY v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF CALCUTTA, 31 C. L. J. 209; 24 C. W. N. 425; 47 C. 254: 21 CR L. J. 522 778 ——— Part. VIII, ss. 103, 104—Charge, notice of—Form of charge—Prosecution, duty of—"Alleged creditor," undue preference to, whether offence—Transfer for valuable consideration—Good faith—Criminal proceedings, postponement of, to civil proceedings.

Where in a proceeding under Part VIII of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the charge framed against the insolvent does not correspond with the notice issued to him, his conviction thereunder cannot be maintained.

Where an insolvent is charged with purposely withholding books, it is the duty of the prosecution to establish that such books do in fact exist: mere suspicion cannot be allowed to pose as proof.

In order to constitute the offence of undue preference under section 103 (b) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act against an insolvent, the payment must be to a creditor, and not to an "alleged creditor."

Where an insolvent transfers property, and the question is whether in so doing he acted in good faith, the fact that there was valuable consideration for the transfer adequate to the occasion would negative the inference that there was an absence of good faith, in spite of the fact that the transfer was in favour of a relative.

Though no invariable rule can be laid down, it is ordinarily undesirable to institute criminal proceedings until the determination of civil proceedings in which the same issues are involved. Criminal proceedings lend themselves to the unscrupulous application of improper pressure with a view to influencing the course of the civil proceedings, and beyond that there is the mischief of criminal proceedings being instituted with an imperfect appreciation of the facts where they have not been ascertained in the more searching investigation of a Civil Court. C LUCAS v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF BENGAL, 24 C. W. N. 418; 21 CR L. J. 481 577

Principal and agent—Agent, collusive act of detrimental to principal—Principal, whether bound.

Where an agent acting in collusion with a third party does an act without the consent of his principal and the act is detrimental to the interests of the principal, the latter is not bound by the act. L RAM KAUR v. RAGHBIR SINGH 631

Probate—Corporation aggregate, probate, whether can be granted to—Benares Hindu University, whether capable of obtaining probate—Benares Hindu University Act (XVI of 1915), s. 20.

Probate—concld.

A Court is competent to grant probate to a corporation aggregate as executor, although the enactment creating the corporation does not distinctly provide authority for it to be an executor, where the granting of the probate is not only in no way repugnant to its functions, but is merely a prelude to the obtaining of benefits under the Will which it is permitted to accept both generally and under the provision of the enactment creating it

The Benares Hindu University is not incapable of obtaining probate of a Will as an executor. O BENARES HINDU UNIVERSITY v. SRI KISHEN DAS, 7 O. L. J. 203; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 81: 23 O. C. 288 335

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 8—Executor, appointment of, provided he is fit for the work, meaning of—Executor, death of—Procedure—Universal or residuary legatee, when may be granted Letters of Administration.

Where a person appoints one of the sons of his executor to be an executor after the death of the latter provided that the son is fit for the work, this merely means that the person named as executor is free from any of the legal disabilities mentioned in section 8 of the Probate and Administration Act.

Where an executor appointed under a Will dies, a universal or residuary legatee may be admitted to prove the Will, and Letters of Administration with the Will annexed may be granted him of the whole estate or of such portion thereof as may be unadministered, and where such universal or residuary legatee is a minor, his mother may be appointed administrator during his minority. Pat MANKI KOER v. MANRAKHAN KUER, 2 U. P. L. R. (PAT.) 116 841

——— s. 23—Letters of Administration, application for, by two persons—Status of one admitted and of other disputed—Procedure.

Where two persons apply for Letters of Administration to the estate of a deceased person, and the status of one of the applicants to so apply is disputed, while the other is entitled to a portion of the estate, the correct procedure for the Court is to ignore the question of status and grant Letters of Administration to the applicant entitled to a part of the estate. L B MA THU DAW v. MA NGWE NU 764

Procedure—Trial of suit—Findings to be recorded on evidence adduced—Findings based on inadmissible evidence, effect of—Evidence Act I of 1872), s. 35—Confidential inquiry as to possession, whether admissible.

In deciding a suit for the possession of a holding, the Court must record a finding on the evidence adduced before it and is not entitled to base its judgment upon matters which are not properly admissible in evidence.

Plaintiff sued for possession of a holding. The suit was dismissed, the Judge relying upon a confidential inquiry conducted by an Assistant Settlement Officer at the time of the Revised Settlement for the purpose of ascertaining to whom the holding belonged:

Held, that the judgment could not be maintained as the proceedings of the confidential inquiry contained an opinion on an ex parte investigation which was not admissible in evidence under section 35 of the Evidence Act, and that it was the duty of the Judge to record a finding on the evidence adduced before him. Pat BALDEO SINGH v. SHEORAJ KUERI, 2 U. P. L. R (PAT.) 135 807

Profits, suit for—Evidence of collections, absence of—Presumption—Basis of calculation.

Where in a suit for profits of land the recorded collections are suspiciously low, and the defendant neither produces nor gives any evidence to show what was collected, the Court would be justified in presuming that the full amount of the rents had been collected and in assessing the profits on the basis of the gross rental. O RAGHUNATH SINGH v. HAR DAYAL SINGH, 7 O. L. J. 278 751

Promissory note—Evidence, admissibility of, to fix date of payment—Cause of action, accrual of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 69, 80.

Where a promissory note is executed for a loan, evidence is receivable to fix the date of payment.

Defendant applied to the plaintiff Bank for a loan on one of the Bank's printed forms, and mentioned therein six months as the period for repayment; his application was accepted and he executed a promissory note in favour of the Bank. Upon a suit by the Bank to recover the amount of the promissory note:

Held, (1) that the application to the Bank was admissible in evidence to fix the date of payment;

(2) that the cause of action arose on the expiry of the six months mentioned in the applicatien, and that either Article 69 or 80 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act provided the period of limitation for bringing the suit. M PONNUSWAMI CHETTY v. VELLORE COMMERCIAL BANK, LTD, 11 L. W. 28; 38 M. L. J. 70; (1920) M. W. N. 75; 27 M. L. T. 81 384

——— Stranger, whether can sue on note. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT, s. 8 259

———, suit on—Defendant admitting execution but denying consideration - Burden of proof. See PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE 638

Provident Funds Act (IX of 1897), s. 4—Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss 16, 43—Provident fund, whether "property"—Provident fund received and paid over by insolvent—Fraudulent transfer.

By virtue of section 4 of the Provident Funds Act, neither the Receiver nor the creditors of an insolvent have any right to money drawn by the insolvent from his compulsory deposit in a Railway Provident Fund. There can, therefore, be no fraudulent dealing in respect of such money such as is made punishable by section 43 of the Provincial Insolvency Act B NAGINDAS v. GHELABHAI, 22 BOM. L. R. 822; 44 B. 673 450

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 4 (c) (ii), 6 (4) (b)—Contracts of sale and purchase—Difference, whether liquidated sum—Act of insolvency—Departure of debtor from dwelling house—Intention.

For the purpose of ascertaining the aggregate amount of debts owing to creditors in respect of an application under section 6 (4) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the difference between contract rates of sale and purchase under a contract entered into by the debtor constitutes a liquidated sum within the meaning of clause (b) of the sub-section.

Provincial Insolvency Act—concld.

In determining whether the departure of a debtor from his dwelling house or place of business amounts to an act of insolvency within the meaning of section 4 (c) (ii) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the intention with which the debtor actually departed must be considered. The mere fact that he returned having altered his intention would not affect a departure made with the intention to defeat or defraud his creditors S In the matter of an applicntion by DHOLAN DAS, 13 S. L. R. 187 158

——— ss. 43, 46—Application by creditor asking action should be taken against insolvent under s. 43, dismissal of—Appeal, whether lies—Revision, whether competent.

No appeal lies against an order of a District Judge refusing to take action against an insolvent under section 43 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, nor is such an order open to revision. L GUJAR SHAH v. BARKAT ALI SHAH, 1 L 2 3; 130 P. L. R. 1920 744 ——— ss. 43, 46, 47—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 190-), O. XLI, r. 5—Sentence under s. 43, Provincial Insolvency Act—Appeal—Appellate Court power of, to suspend sentence.

On an appeal from a sentence of imprisonment under section 43 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the High Court has power under Order XLI, rule 5 of the Civil Procedure Code, read with clause (2) of section 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, to suspend the sentence until the appeal is disposed of. B NAGINDAS BUKHANDAS v. GHELABHAI GULABDAS, 22 Bom. L. R. 322; 44 B. 673 449

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 17—Ex parte decree—Application to set aside decree unaccompanied by decretal amount or security—Time, whether can be granted for furnishing security—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 148, applicability of, to Provincial Small Cause Court.

Where an application, under section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, is made to set aside an ex parte decree, the applicant must at the time of making the application either deposit in Court the decretal amount or furnish security for the performance of the decree. The provisions of the section are mandatory, and the Court has no power to grant time for furnishing security.

The provisions of section 148 of the Civil Procedure Code cannot be applied to extend the time for doing an act prescribed by the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. Pat RAM CHARITAR RAM v. HASHIM KHAN, (1920) Pat 203; 1 P. L. T. 323 810

——— s. 17—Review, application for, unaccompanied by deposit—Application filed on last day of limitation—Time, extension of, for making deposit, legality of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5, Sch. I, Art. 161.

An application for review of the judgment of a Small Cause Court can be entertained only if the applicant complies with the provisions of section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act.

Where an application for review unaccompanied by the deposit, or security for the same, was, presented on the last day of the period prescribed for making such application and the Court accepted the application and granted time for making the deposit:

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act—concld.

Held, that the application was not made in a proper manner and as the order granting time for making the deposit was passed after the period for presenting the application had expired, the application was not entertainable. C ABDUL SHEIKH v. MAHAMAD AYUB, 24 C. W. N. 380; 31 C. L. J. 197 551

——— s. 25—Revision—High Court, power of interference of, when to be exercised.

The powers of interference vested in the High Court under section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act should only be exercised to remedy injustice. S GUL MAHOMED v. FAIZ MAHOMED, 13 S. L. R 210 69

——— Sch. II, Arts. 15, 35 (ii)—Suit for return of article lent or for compensation, whether cognisable by Court of Small Causes.

A suit for the return of an article lent by the plaintiff to the defendant or, in the alternative, for compensation is not cognisable by a Court of Small Causes. O MATA DIN v. MADHO CHARAN 877

Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), ss. 3, 6—Presumption as to occupation—Warrant, issue of, legality of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s 260—Summary trial—Non-appealable sentence—Judgment, contents of—Trials, separate—Judgment, joint, legality of.

Where there is a fair presumption under section 6 of the Public Gambling Act that a person is the occupier, or has the use of a room, within the meaning of section 3 of the Act, as a common gaming house, the issue of a warrant is not illegal.

In the case of two separate trials where the law requires a judgment to be written in each, it is improper to record a single judgment.

In a summary trial, where a non-appealale sentence is passed, the Magistrate need only record a finding and his reasons therefor. A BHOLA NATH v. EMPEROR, 21 Cr L J. 442 234

——— s. 6—U. P. Public Gambling (Amendment) Act (I of 1917), s. 3—Common gaming house, what is.

Where upon the search of a house persons are found therein engaged in gambling and instruments of gaming are also found, and there is evidence that the owner made a profit by allowing his house to be used as a place for gambling, it must be presumed under section 6 of the Public Gambling Act, as amended by the U. P Public Gambling Amendment Act of 1917, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the house in question is a common gaming house. A BHAGGI LAL v. EMPEROR, 2 U P. L. R. All 119; 18 A. L. J. 562; 21 Cr. L. J. 438; 42 A. 470 230

——— s. 13—Place exposed to public view whether public place.

Where the accused were found gambling at a place near a public street and exposed to public view, but which was not part of the public street:

Held, that they could not be convicted of gambling in a public place L MOULA v. EMPEROR, 104 P. L. R. 1920; 21 Cr. L. J. 512 672

Punjab Courts Act (III of 1914), s. 41—Custom—General rule, whether abrogated by special custom—Appeal, second—Certificate, whether necessary.

Plaintiffs, the sister's son and grandson of one N., the last male owner, sued for a declaration that a gift made by defendant No. 1 in favour of one M, the deceased husband of defendant No. 2, shall not affect their reversionary rights, alleging that both under Hindu Law and by custom they were entitled to succeed to the property in suit. The Court, holding that the plaintiffs had established a special custom which entitled them to succeed to the property, decreed their claim. On appeal the District Judge held that the special custom had not been proved and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. An application for the grant of a certificate under the Punjab Courts Act was also dismissed. The plaintiffs filed a second appeal in the High Court:

Held, that the question for decision before the lower Appellate Court was whether the general rule of custom had been abrogated by a special custom and, therefore, no second appeal was competent without a certificate. L FITHA v. DEVKEE 651

Punjab Courts Act (IX of 1919), s. 44—Revision—Error of law, whether good ground for interference.

An error of law does not amount to a material irregularity and is not a good ground for interference in revision

Where upon an examination of all the relevant facts and the law bearing upon the subject a suit was dismissed as time-barred:

Held, that the High Court could not interfere in revision simply on the ground that the Court below had come to a wrong conclusion. L FAKIR CHAND v. DULLAH 848

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), Ss. 3, 171—Public street, what is. See HIGHWAY 1

Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), ss. 13, fourthly, fifthly, 14 (3)—"Staircase," meaning of—Step to a thara, whether an "entrance from the street"—Election between two equal pre-emptors—Suit instituted and decree passed before repeal of Act—Applicability of Act.

One D. sold a house to J. for Rs. 1,000. T. and others brought a suit for pre-emption on the ground that their house was adjacent to the house sold and that a party-wall was jointly owned by them and the vendor. N. and others brought a second suit for pre-emption of the same house on similar allegations T. and others claimed a superior right of pre-emption by reason of the fact that a step leading to a thara which formed part of their house and the house sold was common to both. The first Court held that both sets of plaintiffs had equal rights of pre-emption and that the vendors having elected N. and others, they were entitled to a decree under section 14 (3) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905. On appeal the District Judge held that T and others had a preferential right under section 13, fifthly, and passed a decree in their favour. N. and others thereupon preferred a second appeal to the High Court:

Held, (1) that the sale having been made and the suit having been instituted while the old Act was in force, it was governed by the Punjab Pre-emption Act of 1905;

(2) that the step leading to the thara could not be called a "staircase" within the meaning of section 13, fourthly, of that Act;

(3) that it could not be said to be an entrance from the street within the meaning of section 13, clause fifthly

(4) that, therefore, T. and others did not have a preferential right of pre-emption and N. and others having been elected by the vendor, were entitled to a decree. L NANAK CHAND v. TEK CHAND 17

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 77 (3) (d), (c)—Occupancy rights, creation of, by widow—Reversioner, suit by, to contest alienation—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts

A suit by a reversioner to contest the validity of the creation of occupancy rights by the widow of the last male owner is cognizable by a Civil Court. L SARDHA v. LAKHU 465

Railways Act (IX of 1890), ss. 72, 80 714

Receiver, suit against—Leave of Court not obtained before institution of suit—Leave obtained subsequently, whether cures defect.

Where a suit is filed against a Receiver without first obtaining the leave of the Court which appointed him, the defect can be cured by leave subsequently granted. B JAMSEDJI v. HUSSEINBHAI AHMEDBHAI, 22 Bom L.R. 319 424

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Agreement by reversioner to transfer his rights, whether requires registration.

An agreement by the reversioner of a holder of property to transfer a portion of it to the promisee after the vesting of the estate in the reversioner does not require registration. L INDAR SINGH v. MUNSHI, 1 L. 124; 134 P. L. R. 1920 272

——— s. 17—Agreement to give up rights in property on certain conditions, whether compulsorily registrable—Agreement, whether admissible in evidence in so far as it relates to moveable property—Oral evidence, whether admissible to prove contents—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 91.

Plaintiff sued for possession of certain property, moveable and immoveable, left by one B. on the ground that the widow in possession had forfeited her rights in her husband's estate owing to her unchastity. It was pleaded that the plaintiff had waived his rights by means of an agreement by which he gave up all his rights in B.'s estate, real and personal, on the condition that the widow paid Rs. 1,000 to the gowshala:

Held, (1) that the document was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration;

(2) that the fact that the plaintiff admitted execution of the document did not make any difference;

(3) that oral evidence was inadmissible to prove the contents of the document.

(4) that the document was not admissible even in so far as it related to moveable property. L BISHESHAR LAL v. BHURI, 1 L. 436 595

——— s. 17—Memorandum of partition, whether requires registration—Admissibility in evidence.

Registration Act—concld.

A memorandum in an account-book of a partition which has already taken place does not require registration and is admissible in evidence. L KANSHI RAM v. LAL CHAND, 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 93 182

——— ss. 17, 49—Mortgage—Agreement between first and second mortgagees to share moneys equally—Registration, whether necessary.

An agreement between first and second mortgagees to share equally monies realised is, although not registered, admissible in evidence to prove such agreement. P C VYRAVAN CHETTY v. SUBRAMANIAN CHETTI, (1920) M. W. N. 368; 18 A. L. J. 726; 39 M. L. J. 37; 12 L. W. 143; 24 C. W. N. 1053; 43 M. 660; 22 BOM. L. R. 1357 642

——— s. 28—Sale-deed, entry in, of property not intended to be sold, effect of, on registration—Sale, validity of—Suit to recover such property—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 44, 144.

Where, in order to secure the registration of a deed of sale of immoveable property in a particular district, a piece of property situated in that district is included in the deed but without any intention of conveying that property to the vendee, the registration of the deed in that district is not a valid registration and amounts to a fraud upon the Law of Registration; consequently no valid title is conveyed to the vendee, and the sale-deed is void. A suit to recover such property from the vendee is, therefore, governed by Article 144 and not by Article 11 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act M GOKARAKONDA NARASIMHA RAO v. GOKARAKONDA PAPANNA, L. W. 394; 38 M. L. J. 327; 43 M. [illegible] 519

Religious endowment—General and particular trusts—General trustee, claim by, for possession of property, subject to particular trust, whether maintainable—Idol, position of—Adverse possession—Limitation.

The property of an endowment may consist partly or wholly in the right to enjoy the revenues of property in the possession of persons who have the right and the duty to manage such property, collect the income and hand it over when collected to be used in the proper manner for the purposes of the endowment. Such persons may even have certain rights of apportionment of the revenue so handed over by them among the several purposes of the endowment. All this is compatible with there being a general trustee of the whole endowment including the revenues when so collected and handed over. But in such a case the general trustee is not entitled to the possession of the properties out of which that portion of the revenue comes. His rights do not commence until after the collection of the revenues by and under the management of those who hold possession

An idol may have not merely a general trustee but also other subordinate representatives having the right to manage certain special portions of his property, and pay over the income so collected to the endowment, and even to some degree control its use. Such rights are not inconsistent with the existence of a general trustee, but they are fatal to his claim to possession of the properties from which those revenues are derived.

When in such a case it is necessary to consider limitation, the possession of such subordinate representatives will be held to be adverse to that of the general trustee. P C AMBALAVANA PANDARA SANNIDHI AVERGAL v MEENAKSHI SUNDARESWARAL DEVASTANAM OF MADURA, 18 A. L. J. 594; 2 U. P. L. R. P C 95; 39 M. L. J. 50; 28 M. L. T. 83; 12 L. W. 212; 43 M. 685; 25 C. W. N. 1 730

Religious endowment—concld.

Res judicata—Law, wrong application of, whether arrests rule of res judicata.

The fact that in a previous suit the law was wrongly applied to a particular state of facts, does not prevent the operation of the rule of res judicata in a subsequent suit where these facts come into issue therein U P 3 R ULFAT v. BARKAT-UN-NISA, 2 U P L R. B R 66 983

——— Previous suit, dismissal of, effect of. See PARTITION 610

Revision—Limitation, plea of, not taken in trial Court, whether can be taken in High Court—Plea depending on evidence—Procedure—Remand

The fact that a defendant omits to plead limitation in the trial Court, would not estop him from taking the plea in revision before the High Court. If such plea depends upon evidence, the proper course is to remand the case for re-trial. A FIRM DEBI DIN-BHAGWAN DIN v. FIRM SARKAR AND CO, 2 U P L R. (A) 143 513

Sanction to prosecute, refusal to grant by trial Court—Sessions Judge, interference by, when justified. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s [illegible] 660

Scotch Law—Holograph writing without witnesses, whether Will. See WILL 683

Separate cases decided by one judgment—Appeals, separate, whether necessary—Procedure

Where two separate cases are finally decided and disposed of in one judgment, two separate appeals should be filed L DEVI DITTA MAL v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR, AMRITSAR BANK LTD., 1 L. 368 69

Settlement records, value of, as evidence of title or possession See HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY 306

Settlement of Oudh after Mutiny, entries in, whether recognised existing rights or constituted a fresh root of title. See HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY 306

Sind Encumbered Estates Act (XX of 1896), s. 28—Hindu female, purchase from Presumption as to limited interest, whether arises in case of Muhammadan zemindar—Estoppel Person taking active part in bringing about sale, whether estopped from challenging it—Purchase in good faith—Improvements by purchaser—Compensation, purchaser, whether entitled to—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 51—Good faith, what constitutes.

The rule that a purchaser from a Hindu female must be presumed to know that he is dealing with a person who has only a limited interest, does not arise in the case of a Muhammadan zemindar who, but for the operation of section 28 of the Sind Encumbered Estates Act, would have been the absolute owner of the property.

There is no estoppel against a person challenging a sale merely because he took an active part in bringing about the sale, was present at the execution of the document, and who, at the time, represented that no claims of his would affect the vendee's title.

Sind Encumbered Estates Act—concld.

Where a purchaser of immoveable property, under the honest belief that he is the absolute owner thereof, undertakes permanent improvements on the property, he is in enquity entitled to compensation for the improvements made by him, on the sale being annulled on the ground that the vendor had only a limited interest in the property and could not convey an absolute title, but he is liable for mesne profits from the date his possession became wrongful, i. e., from the date of the death of the vendor.

What constitutes "good faith" within the meaning of section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act is a question of fact, and a person may act in good faith even if he acts under a mistake of law, or is negligent in investigating title Whether there is good faith or not must depend upon the facts of each case. S SHAHAB-UD-DIN v VOHIDBUX, 14 S. L. R 12 492

Sind Frontier Regulation (III of 1892), ss. 17, 20, 24—Security for good behaviour, order for– Revision Judicial Commissioner, power of, to interfere—Criminal Procedure Code Act V of 1898), s 43).

The Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind has no jurisdiction, either by express enactment or by necessary implication, to interfere in revision with an order made by a District Magistrate under sections 20 (1) and 24 (1) of the Sind Frontier Regulation requiring a person to furnish security for good behaviour. S BHAWAL KHAN v. EMPEROR, 13 S. L. R. 215; 21 Cr. L. R. 513 769

Specific performance of contract of sale, suit for – Possession, whether can be decreed.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of land, it is open to the plaintiff to join with his prayer for specific performance a claim for delivery of possession, unless the contract expressly disentitles him to such relief. Pat DEONANDAN PRASAD SINGH v. JANKI SINGH, 5 P. L. J. 314; 1 P. L. T. 325; 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 108; (1920 Pat. 266 322

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Declaration, suit for, by reversioner of lunatic that certain property acquired by defendant belongs to lunatic, maintainability of.

A suit by the immediate reversioner of a lunatic for a declaration that a mortgage acquired by the manager of the lunatic's estate in his own name belongs to the lunatic is maintainable. L VIR SINGH v. HARNAM SINGH, 1 L. 137; 135 P. L. R. 1920 191

——— s. 42—Declaration, suit for – Persons interested to deny title—Defendants acting in concert, though all do not deny plaintiff's title, effect of—Title established—Possession, presumption as to.

In a suit brought for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the defendants were the plaintiff's riaya and for an injunction against certain of them restraining them from interfering with any rights of the plaintiff for the services of these riaya, it was found that although some of the defendants had not made an overt denial of the plaintiff's rights, yet they were acting in concert and sympathy with those who had and that all the defendants were acting in collusion:

Held, that the whole body of defendants were persons interested to deny the plaintiff's title within the meaning of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act.

Where in a suit relating to land the plaintiff's title and possession within limitation is challenged, and he establishes his title by purchase, the presumption, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is that he was in possession up to the time of the suit. O JANKI SARAN v WIDOW OF MUHAMMAD SADIQ, 7 O L J 258: 2 U P L R (J. C.) 106 720

——— s. 54—Injunction, suit for—Injunction, when can be granted.

Where a suit is in essence one for a perpetual injunction with prayers for declarations ancillary thereto, the plaintiff must establish that the injunction is required to prevent the breach of an obligation, and unless he does so, the injunction claimed cannot be granted, more especially if equally efficacious relief can be obtained by any other usual mode of proceedings C RAM KISSEN JOYDOYAL v POORAN MULL; 31 C L.J. 259; 47 C. 733 571

——— s. 54—Joint Hindu family—Injunction at instance of one member to restrain others from entering on possession, grant of.

The remedy by injunction should not ordinarily be granted to one member of a Hindu family in possession of certain property against other members of the family who are out of possession.

When a plaintiff is entitled to sole possession of certain property and the defendant who has a right to part enjoyment is likely to enter on the property, such entry cannot be prevented by injunction The proper remedy for the plaintiff is to sue for partition.

In a prior suit for partition by the plaintiffs as representing one branch of a joint Hindu family against the defendants, who represented another branch, there was a reference to arbitration and a decree was passed in accordance with the award. According to that decree plaintiffs were to remain in possession for 6 years, at the end of which period the defendants could recover their half share either amicably or through Court. As the plaintiffs did not give possession amicably after the six years, defendants attempted to take possession. There were possession proceedings under the Criminal Procedure Code, wherein plaintiffs were asked to establish their right in a Civil Court. Plaintiffs filed the present suit for an injunction restraining defendants from entering on the lands:

Held, that as the parties were restored to the status quo ante after six years from the date of the prior decree and the plaintiffs were not entitled to sole possession, the suit for injunction was not maintainable. M SRINIVASA AIYANGAR v. NARAYANA AIYANGAR, 11 L. W. 606; (1920) M. W. N. 364 608

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 5—Sale-deed including mortgage of properties as security for performance of covenants—Stamp duty.

A deed of sale, which includes a mortgage of properties not included in the sale as security for the due performance by the vendor of his covenants, need not be stamped both as a sale and as a mortgage, as the sale-deed is not an instrument comprising or relating to distinct matters within the meaning of section 5 of the Stamp Act. M SECRETARY TO THE COMMISSIONER, SALT AND BKARI, In re, (1920) M. W. N. 247; 43 M. 365: 38 A M. L. J. 506 154

Stamp Act—concld.

——— s. 35—Unstamped document, validation of—Original not forthcoming, effect of—Document lost, contents of, proof of—Oral evidence, admissibility of.

The procedure for validating unstamped instruments prescribed by Chapter IV of the Stamp Act has no application to an instrument the original of which is lost and is not forthcoming, as under section 35 of the Act it is only an original unstamped instrument which can be validated by payment of stamp duty and penalty.

Where the original of an instrument is not forthcoming, oral evidence to prove its contents is inadmissible. N PENTAYYA v. KESHORAO, 16 N. L. R. 68 249 Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 160, applicability of.

The principle enunciated in section 160 of the Succession Act cannot apply when a contrary intention appears in the document. C RAJLAKHI DEBYA v SAROLA SUNDARI DEBYA 803

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4(a)—Plea that suit not maintainable, without production of succession certificate—Procedure—Court, duty of.

Where a defendant raises the plea that the suit is not maintainable without the production of a succession certificate, the Court ought not to dismiss the suit without giving the plaintiff an opportunity of obtaining the necessary certificate and filling it. A JAWAD ALI SHAH v KAMLAPAT RAI, 18 A. L. J. 514 641

——— s. 18, cls. (d), (e)—Succession certificate, grant of, in respect of entire debt—Partial revocation or modification, when can be ordered.

If a certificate has once been granted in respect of an entire debt, and it becomes apparent to the Court that circumstances have subsequently changed so as to bring into operation clause (d), or (e), or both, of section 18 of Act VII of 188', it is open to the Court to pass orders having the effect of a partial revocation of the succession certificate once granted, or to modify the terms of that grant in such manner as the interests of justice may seem to require. A SHARIF-UN NISSA v MASOOM ALI, 2 U. P. L R (A) 57; 18 A L. J 314; 42 A 347 380

——— s. 19—Order granting certificate—Appeal, whether lies—Remedy, proper

Under section 19 of the Succession Certificate Act, an appeal lies from an order granting a certificate, and it is not absolutely incumbent on the appellant to move the Court granting the certificate to revoke it A RADHE LAL v. BINDO, 18 A. L. J. 609; 2 U. P. L R (A) 215; 42 A 512 181

Suit against legal representative of deceased debtor—Assets, extent of, proof of, whether necessary.

In a suit against the legal representative of a debtor, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree if he proves that any assets belonging to the deceased debtor exist. He is not bound to prove the extent of such assets. N SHEOLAL v. CHINDHU 962

Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 11, applicability of. See VALUATION OF SUIT 762

——— s. 11, applicability of—Undervaluation of relief as to injunction—Value fixed by rules—Jurisdiction.

Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act applies only where the valuation of the suit depends on the discretion of the parties or the Court and is not applicable when the valuation is fixed by rules having the force of law.

Plaintiff sued for possession of a vacant site and for perpetual injunction, to the effect that the defendants should not prevent him from building a house thereon. He valued his relief for possession at Rs. 50 and that for injunction at Rs. 10. The Munsif, 2nd Class, having decreed the claim in part, both parties appealed to the Senior Subordinate Judge, who modified the decree without any objection being raised as to jurisdiction. Defendants filed a second appeal to the High Court on the ground of undervaluation of the relief as to injunction and of the want of jurisdiction of the Senior Subordinate Judge:

Held, (1) that section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act did not cure the defect, as the valuation of the suit did not depend entirely on the discretion of the defendants but was fixed by the rules of the Court;

(2) that the order of the lower Appellate Court was defective, having been passed without jurisdiction. L MUHAMMAD SHAH v. ABDULLAH SHAH 918

Talab baki papers, evidentiary value of. See EVIDENCE ACT, s. 32 (2) 38

Trade mark—General rule of law—Defendant, whether can be restrained from carrying on busines in his own name—Injunction.

No one may use a name in such a way as to be calculated to lead the public to believe that the business carried on by him is the business of some other person with whom the name has come to be associated.

The Court ought not to restrain a man from carrying on business in his own name simply because there are other people who are doing the same and who will be injured by what he is doing. It must appear that the person who is carrying on the business in his own name is doing it in such a way as to pass off his goods as the goods of some body else.

Where, therefore, the defendant was carrying on business in his own name which also happened to be the name of the plaintiff:

Held, that the defendant could not be restrained from using his own name. L UBEROI LIMITED v. KIRPAL SINGH 709

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1832), s. 51—Good faith, what constitutes.

What constitutes "good faith" within the meaning of section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act is a question of fact, and a person may act in good faith even if he acts under a mistake of law, or is negligent in investigating title Whether there is good faith or not must depend upon the facts of each case. S SHAHAB UD-DIN v VAHIDBUX, 14 S. L. R. 12 492

—— s. 54—Sale-deed, unregistered, of immoveable property of the value of Rs. 20, admissibility of, to prove nature of possession.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

Defendant relied upon an unregistered sale-deed to prove a sale of an open site for Rs. 20. There was oral evidence of the delivery of the site in dispute:

Held, (1) that the sale-deed did not require registration under the provisions of the Registration Act, but it created no title to the site by virtue of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act;

(2) that although inoperative as a conveyance, the sale-deed was admissible as evidence of the agreement in pursuance of which delivery of possession took place. N HARSALSA v. BAPU 382

——— s. 55—Venodr and purchaser—Registered conveyance—Non-payment of price—Suit by vendee for possession, maintainability of—Decree, form of.

A vendee of immoveable property under a registered deed of conveyance; who has not paid the purchase-money of the property, can maintain a suit for possession of the property without paying for it, or submitting to a decree for payment, or a condition attached to the decree as to the purchase-money which he had agreed to pay. M YELLA KRISHNAMMA v. KOTIPALLE MALI, 38 M. L. J. 467; 11 L. W. 563; (1920) M. W. N. 380; 28 M. L. T. 89: 43 M. 712 530

——— s. 59—Attestation of mortgage-deed—Execution by pardanashin lady—Proof. See EVIDENCE ACT, s. 68 247

——— s. 59—Attesting witness—Writer of document signing as scribe, whether attesting witness.

The writer of a document who signs it as scribe is not an attesting witness within the meaning of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act He can only be an attesting witness if he subscribes the document as a witness. L B CHETTY v. PO MYA, 12 Bur. L. T. 261 945

——— s. 63—Mortgage—Redemption—Accessions, payment for.

Where one of several mortgagees acquires tenancies while in possession and claims the cost of such acquisitions upon redemption, it is unnecessary, under section 63 of the Transfer of Property Act to invoke the doctrine of merger. The section does not require the accessions to have been made by the mortgagee by availing himself of his position as such, nor can it be urged that the acquisitions might have been made even if the mortgage had not been taken. N PYARELAL v. PANNALAL 193

——— ss. 88, 89. See LIMITATION ACT, SCH. I, ART. 181 563

——— s. 98—Mortgage, anomalous—Sale, mortgagee, whether entitled to—Puisne incumbrancer, right of, to pay off prior incumbrance.

In considering the nature of a mortgage and the true conclusion to be drawn from its terms what has to be considered is the intention of the parties to be gathered from the terms of the instrument of mortgage If these show that the parties never contemplated a sale, the mortgagee has no right to a judicial sale.

In the case of a prior incumbrance, it is always open to a puisne incumbrancer to pay off the prior incumbrancer and the mortgagor, who has created both, has no interest or right to object. P C MADHO RAO v. GULAM MOHIUDDIN, 15 N. L. R. 134 717

Transfer of Property Act—concld.

——— s. 106, applicability of: See LANDLORD AND TENANT. 7

Trespassers, rival, on Government land—Revenue, payment of, effect of—Title, superiority of.

As between two trespassers upon land which is the property of Government, the one who pays the Government revenue and is allowed to stay on the land has a title superior to the one who has made no such payment. L B TUN AUNG v MA HTEE, 12 Bur. L T 763 935

Trial by Jury—Charge to Jury—Judge, duty of—Jury, function of—Burden of proof. See PENAL CODE ACT XLV OF 1860, s. 411 849

Trials, separate—Judgment, joint, legality of.

In the case of two separate trials where the law requires a judgment to be written in each, it is improper to record a single judgment. A BHOLA NATH v EMPEROR, 21 Cr. L. J. 442 234

Trust, private—Plaintiff having no interest in trust property—Suit questioning acts of trustees, whether maintainable.

Unlike a public trust, the acts of a trustee of a private trust cannot be impeached in a suit by a person who has no interest relating to the property of the trust. O TAHAWWAR HUSAIN v. LACHHMAN DAS, 7 O. L. J. 246 707

Trusts Act (II Of 1882), s. 83—Resulting trust—Purchase in name of one person with money supplied by several, effect of.

A resulting trust takes place where several persons jointly furnish the purchase-money and the purchase is made in the name of one of them. N NARHAR v. NARAIN 396

Unstamped document, validation of—Original not forthcoming, effect of. See STAMP ACT, s. 35 249

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), ss. 3 (1), 4 (12) (b)—Agra Tenancy Act II of 1901, s. 2 (4)—Sir land, status of, whether affected by subsequent passing of Agra Tenancy Act—Interpretation of Statutes "So far as may be", meaning of.

Land which has once acquired the status of "sir" before the Agra Tenancy Act came into force might lose its status by the passing of that Act and by the change of definition therein, if it does not satisfy the requirements of the new definition.

A land is not "sir" within the meaning of section 4 (12) (b) of the U P Land Revenue Act if it was not in a proprietor's personal cultivation immediately before the commencement of that Act.

In interpreting a Statute, where there is no ambiguity in the language used, it must be accepted as it stands, and a Court is not justified in questioning whether the meaning conveyed by the language used was what was in reality intended by the Legislature.

The expression "so far as may be" in section 3 (1) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act or in section 2 (4) of the U. P. Tenancy Act means "unless a different intention appears from the wording of the Act itself" or "unless it would be inconsistent with the provisions of the Act" U P B R SHEOGHULAM KOERI v. PERMESHRI LAL, 2 U. P. L. R. (B. R) 10 649

U. P. Land Revenue Act—concld.

——— ss. 110, 111—Partition proceedings pending—Suit in Civil Court to determine question of title, whether competent—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

Where the partition of a village is applied for and notices of the application are served on the parties under section 110 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act, and they have ample opportunity of raising a claim to the land under section 111 of the Act, but they fail to do so, and no reference is made to the Civil Court for the purpose of having the question of title determined, nor does the partition Court decide any such question, the Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for a declaration of ownership of a particular plot of land in the village. O RATIPALI v. BHAGWAN DIN, 7 O. L. J. 279; 2 U. P. L. R. (J. C.) 102 755

Vakil preparing and presenting petition without authority from his clients—Misconduct. See LETTERS PATENT (ALL) 501

Valuation of suit—Objection as to correctness of valuation—Court, jurisdiction of, to decide question—Declaration, suit for, value of—Appeal, second—Valuation, objection to—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 11, applicability of.

Where a plaintiff puts a value, for the purpose of jurisdiction, upon the subject-matter of a suit, and an objection is taken to the correctness of such valuation, the Court has jurisdiction to decide the question.

The value of a suit for a declaratory decree must, for the purpose of jurisdiction, be taken to be the value of the property in respect of which the declaration is asked for.

Where an objection to valuation is taken in the pleadings, and again before issues are framed, and again in the Appellate Court, section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act is no bar to the objection being taken and entertained in second appeal. Pat MOHINI MOHAN MISSER v. GOUR CHANDRA RAI, 5 P. L. J. 397; 1 P. L. T. 390; 2 U. P. L. R (Pat) 123 762

Vendor and purchaser—Registered conveyance—Non-payment of price—Suit by vendee for possession, maintainability of—Decree, form of. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, s. 55 530

Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, construction of—Custom—Widow, childless—Estate taken by widow, nature of.

A wajib-ul-arz purporting to record a custom prevailing in the family of the proprietors of a particular village contained an express direction that a childless widow can hold the property of her husband for her life to the exclusion of the heirs of her husband who get it after her death. On a question arising as to whether the widow had powers of alienation:

Held, that the widow took a life-estate merely and consequently had no power of alienation. O HAFIZUDDIN v. MUBARAK ALI, 7 O. L. J 242 699

———, entry in, construction of—Hissadar qaribi, whether denotes blood relation.

Wajib-ul-arz—concld.

The expression "hissadar qaribi" in a wajib-ul-arz does not necessarily indicate a blood relation. A BHAGWAN DAS v. TEJ RAM 148

———, entry in, not stating facts, value of. See CUSTOM—PRE-EMPTION 73

Will, construction of—Intention of testator—Estates taken by devisees.

A testator by his Will gave full maliki rights in his estate to his sons and grandsons, but placed certain restrictions on their powers of alienation, and the question was what was the interest the sons got under the Will:

Held, that upon a construction of the Will as a whole the intention of the testator was to grant an absolute interest to the sons and grandsons C GIRINDRA CHANDRA SEN v. MAHESH RAM DEB 170

——— Probate—District Judge, order of, holding that objector has no locus standi*—Appeal, whether lies—Revision—Civil Procedure Code Act (V of 1908), s. 115—Hindu Law*—Dayabhaga—Person interested, right of, to oppose application by stranger for Probate.

An order by a District Judge, holding that the objector to the grant of Probate of a Will has no locus standi to object and that the applicant is entitled to Probate on proof of the Will in common form, is not open to appeal but the order can be revised by the High Court upon an application made to it under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Where a person applying for Probate of the Will of a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu Law is a stranger to the family of the deceased testator, a person having some sort of relationship with the family of the deceased has some interest to appear and oppose the application for Probate and is, consequently, entitled to be present at the hearing of the application. C RADHARAMAN CHOUDHURI v. GOPAL CHANDRA, 31 C. L. J. 81; 24 C. W. N. 316 122

——— Scotch Law—Holograph writing without witnesses, whether Will.

A holograph writing proved to be in the handwriting of a person who at the time of his death was a domiciled Scotchman, constitutes a valid Will according to Scotch Law, even though there are no witnesses to such writing A MACINTYRE, In the goods of. 17 A. L. J. 247; 41 A. 248 683

Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859), ss. 2, 3—Loan disguised as advance—Breach of contract—Workman, whether liable

However carefully it may be sought to disguise the fact that an advance is really a loan, the Workman's Breach of Contract Act would not apply to such a case.

S. received Rs. 30 from the firm of K. in advance and agreed to work in their factory. Rs. 2 were to be deducted from his monthly wages to make up the money received in advance. Not having fulfilled the terms of the agreement, he was prosecuted under Act XIII of 1859:

Held, that the advance was really a loan and, therefore, the Act did not apply. L SANDHI v. KHEM CHAND, 2 [illegible] L. J. 546 350

[illegible] K UNIVERSITY LIB
K [illegible]
Acc No 75425
Date 16-12-1969

Acc. No. [redacted]

Class No. [redacted] Book No. [redacted]

Author [redacted]

Title [redacted]

Borrower's No.	Issue Date	Borrower's No.	Issue Date

[redacted]

Author [redacted]

Accession No. [redacted]

Call No. [redacted]

Borrower's No.	Issue Date	Borrower's No.	Issue Date
[redacted]	[redacted]

Title [redacted]

Author [redacted]

Accession No. [redacted]

Call No. [redacted]

Borrower's No.	Issue Date	Borrower's No.	Issue Date
[redacted]	[redacted]

[redacted]

Acc. No. [redacted]

Class No. [redacted] Book No. [redacted]

Author [redacted]

Title [redacted]

[redacted]

Borrower's No.	Issue Date	Borrower's No.	Issue Date